STORY AT-A-GLANCE

- Finance guru Catherine Austin Fitts and Aleks Svetski, editor of Bitcoin Times magazine, discuss the breakdown of our economy and potential solutions
- Svetski believes Bitcoin not only is the answer to economic tyranny, but to individual sovereignty, while Fitts believes central bank control mechanisms are still at play within it
- Fitts argues for building a new economy based on health, cooperation, peace and transparency, and recommends investing in things that will keep you alive
- Svetski argues that in order to build any of the above, we must start with an incorruptible foundation. The "language of value" (money) cannot be owned or issued by any man-made political authority; it must emerge organically as a transparent, voluntary 'constitution in code'
- A major hurdle is overcoming the globalists' mind control and propaganda influence. Everyone agreed that this is why people must be educated across multiple dimensions, not just money, but health, individuality, philosophy, ethics, economics and more
- Fitts believes a successful transition requires preventing the control grid from coming into place, and clawing back the money that has been stolen. Since 1998, at least $21 trillion, and perhaps as much as $100 trillion, has been stolen from the U.S. government

Today, I'm pleased to bring you two guests — finance guru Catherine Austin Fitts, whom I've interviewed before, and Aleks Svetski, editor of The Bitcoin Times magazine and host of "The Wake Up Podcast." During dinner at an event in Miami, Florida, Svetski helped me understand why Bitcoin not only stands out head and neck above all the other cryptocurrencies, but is in direct opposition to them all.

I've strongly believed Bitcoin will be an important tool to get out from under the financial tyranny we're in, where central banks are essentially robbing everyone blind.

Fitts, president of the Solari Report, disagrees. She knows the financial system inside and out, having spent decades exposing corruption and fraud, both within the banking industry and government, and she believes there are far better ways than investing our hard-earned money in cryptocurrencies, as the globalists have already inserted a number of control mechanisms within the cryptocurrency system.

Regardless of which side of the fence you're on, you're bound to learn something from this conversation. If you've dismissed Bitcoin as a passing fad, Svetski's expertise may assuage your concerns. On the other hand, if you've been banking on Bitcoin being the answer to the impending financial crash, Fitts may inspire you to rethink how you protect your wealth.

Our Only Choice: Being Controlled or Being Free

If you want to understand what's happening to our financial system, I encourage you to listen to this three-hour interview. I cannot cover all the details covered in this article, so to get the whole story, please set aside the time to listen to the whole interview, or read through the 95-page transcript.

In summary, Austin Fitts explains how the globalists — "Mr. Global" is her nickname for this secret system of governance — and the central bankers of the world in particular, have since 1998 siphoned out and stolen $21 trillion or more from the U.S. government in a financial coup d'état.[1,2]

Thanks to this theft by the central bankers, the American retirement (including health care benefits) and social welfare system are not adequately funded, leaving millions of aging Americans with diminished or no Social Security or Medicaid/Medicare benefits.

The primary reason for the theft, however, is to reengineer the U.S. government and political system as a whole. In short, the globalists' plan is to take over the government by centrally controlling our economy, and then declare everyone who was promised health care and retirement as expendable.

According to Fitts, if we allow this financial coup to continue and consolidate, Bitcoin and the Bitcoin community may help pull that coup off. As explained by Fitts, slavery is the most profitable business in investment history. Digital technology now allows Mr. Global to return to a legalized form of slavery on a global scale. The theft that is underway is ultimately intended to control people.

> "Mr. Global wants a culled, reengineered population," she says. "He is going for the people because that is what has the most value, along with the other living things on the planet — including the planet itself. All value begins and ends with living intelligence and life whether it is expressed in financial and transaction tools or not.
> Mr. Global has created scores of mechanisms to persuade people to sell out [other] people using fiat currency — pump and dump, pump and dump. Dealing with it is sufficiently frustrating and has us all trying to create workarounds."

A Different Kind of 'Reset' Is Required

Fitts is convinced that the best, and perhaps only way out, of this situation is to deal with the secret governance system that is impacting and frustrating all of us and take action to ensure that we do not allow an all-digital financial system to go into place. If we believe Bitcoin is the optimal form of digital system, the problem is not Bitcoin: The problem is if it is part of an only-digital system.

Fitts also underscores that currencies cannot work without the underlying economy being in balance. That means we need to invest in the real assets we need to stay alive and free, things like local food production, local businesses or a personal water well.

She stresses that keeping cash is important — that we mustn't enter into a wholly digital financial system, especially one monopolized by central bank digital currencies (CBDCs) and private crypto, which are in combination designed to strip us of both national and individual sovereignty.[3]

> "I believe a successful transition requires both preventing the control grid from coming into place, and clawing back the money that has been > illegally taken. A 'reset' in which the takers get to keep their winnings is a different world than one in which the equivalent value is returned. ~ Catherine Austin Fitts

While Svetski agrees on some points, he still believes Bitcoin can be part of the answer,[4] and that the focus should be on building a new financial system in such a way that it cannot be co-opted by anyone. The question, of course, is how.

As explained by Fitts, addressing taxation[5] is perhaps the most important part of the puzzle. We also need to a) prevent vaccine passports and digital ID wallets and related blockchains from being implemented, as they are an integral part of the control system Mr. Global is trying to erect, and b) figure out how to get the money back that was stolen.

> "There is $21 trillion missing from the U.S. government — we have no way of knowing what the real number is in terms of cash and credit. It could be smaller or bigger," she says.
> "I believe a successful transition requires both preventing the control grid from coming into place, and clawing back the money that has been illegally taken. A 'reset' in which the takers get to keep their winnings is a different world than one in which the equivalent value is returned."

Can Bitcoin Safeguard Our Freedom?

Part of the globalists' plan is to gain control of ALL resources, and they've made great strides toward that during the last two years. The question is, how do we get out of this situation and reclaim those resources?

As mentioned, while I've been convinced that Bitcoin, a decentralized digital currency, was a major part of that answer, Fitts has some very pertinent concerns that we need to digest and fully understand. We also need to understand what money actually is, and what an ideal currency would actually look like and how it would function. All of these issues are reviewed in this discussion.

> "In 2017, I did a very long and serious due diligence into Bitcoin," Fitts says, "and I had two baskets of concerns, one related to whether or not the Bitcoin exchanges in the industry were doing a responsible job of communicating with potential investors.
> I'm an investment adviser and there's a world of regulation about how you make sure that an investor has full and fair disclosure. It's the equivalent of informed consent, in financial terms. You want to make sure the investor knows what it is, and what their risks are, and that they are prepared to manage both the risks and the investment, the custodian issues, before they buy."

The cryptocurrency market is currently a nonregulated space, which can give rise to the absence of best practices in education and disclosure as well as fraud. Another concern is whether or not Bitcoin will increase our freedom or simply facilitate our enslavement by a secret system of governance by "Mr. Global." Fitts continues:

> "What I've said is that it is absolutely important that we have a financial system and a currency system that is not 100% digital. So, where I think the current leadership and central bankers are going with the 'Going Direct Reset' is they're trying to get a 100% digital control grid and literally end currencies as we know it.
> They want to move us to, on the smart grid, a transaction system where they have 100% control. I call it the covert social credit system. They've been building that control system for centuries. But since the advent of digital technology, they've been building it much more intensively, and much more invasively.
> They have three primary lines of control. One is financial carrots and sticks. One is the telecommunications and media alignment, it's surveillance, mind control, propaganda and education. And then the third line is covert operations, which can be regulatory enforcement, taxation or it can be, literally, covert physical intervention.
> So, you have these three lines and they're coordinated. But whether they say they're controlling assets or they're controlling currencies, they really control people. They control everything through people. And if you look at some of the regulatory proposals now for crypto, that's how they're going to do it. They're going to do it by controlling the people in their businesses.

Anybody who wants freedom wants transparency in and around what's really going on in our world, and they want to be not controlled. If we permit a 100% digital controlled transaction system of any kind, we will concede control. Literally, it's the end of human liberty in the West.

For everyone who's interested in building a better digital transaction system — and I would argue that the current digital transaction system could be made infinitely better than it is now — it's inherent ... to address how we are going to get this technology working for us, but not allow it to control us.

And again, I don't think the control will be controlling the technology. I think the control will be of the people using the technology. It will come through the people, because that's how the control grid has been built.

So, I don't see how we permit an all-digital transaction system and continue to have freedom, as long as the primary hardware and energy in and around the system, as well as the people, are controlled by a secret central governance system."

'Holy Grails' of Technological Invention to Ensure Freedom

Svetski replies:

"Yes, I agree with you, wholeheartedly. Did you ever read the 'Cypherpunk's Manifesto'[6] written by Tim May in the '90s? The basic summation of that is, as the world becomes more technologically adept, technology trends toward concentration.

In that trend, we could end up with a world in which we have total panopticon surveillance and control of people's money. So ... we need to use encryption to maintain private communication. If you don't have private communication, you can't speak freely. Right? First Amendment.

That was sort of holy grail No. 1. Holy grail No. 2 was an independent monetary system. We need a money that is independent of a state, and unable to be censored, controlled, et cetera. Because if we end up with that, then who cares if we have free speech? You don't have free action.

I mean, you see it in Australia. The government makes up a fake law so they can fine you for not wearing a fake mask. And then if you don't pay your fake fine, they just take the fake money out of your fake bank account, without your consent. So, whoever issues and controls the money basically has the ultimate power. If I'm the issuer of the money, I can do whatever I want, basically."

The Central Banking Warfare Model

A caveat to that, Fitts says, is the central banking warfare model. On the one hand, they can print money. On the other, they can also force people to use that money through military intervention. "That's part of where the liquidity comes from, so you have to have both," she says. In other words, they must be able to print with impunity and kill with impunity in order to maintain complete control of the system.

Svetski agrees, pointing out that these two control powers feed on and strengthen each other. He believes the monopoly on money is the easier of the two to defeat, though, "because what ends up happening is that when the monopoly on money can't fund the monopoly on violence, things start to fall apart relatively quickly. So, if we had to pull a thread somewhere so that the shit-show unravels, that's where we may have the strategic opportunity."

Svetski also agrees that the Bitcoin exchanges are a disaster. "We all say that you should take your money off exchanges as soon as possible and hold your Bitcoin in your own custody, as soon as possible," he says, "because then that moves supply out of these casinos, basically."

"We're totally aligned with this idea that the last thing we want is issued money from any authority who has the capacity to build up enough economic power such that they can deploy political power, or violent power, in order to maintain economic power and create this situation we have today, which is, 'I can print all the money I want and you can't do anything about it, because if you do, then I'm throwing you in jail.'"

Systematic Corruption Is a Core Problem

Fitts points out that the root problem isn't necessarily the ability to create fiat currency. At its core, it's the corruption of governance and the rule of law. And while we could create a well-functioning regulatory system for any currency, creating a government and judicial system free of corruption is far more difficult.

Because it's believed to be too difficult, people focus on workarounds, such as using distributive ledger technology to prevent counterfeiting and fraud, or a money system based on commodities like gold and silver.

> "Those are both workarounds to avoid the issue of how do we create a great governance system, and then a culture and a covenant that we'll enforce?" she says.
> "Traditionally, it's never been a good idea to make a commodity the backbone of your currency, because then your currency can swing around and get hiccupped for a lot of reasons that have nothing to do with its role as a currency. So, there's risk in that, but it's a workaround.
> One of the things I think is the most important unanswered question before us is that we live on a planet where the governance system is secret ... How do we stay free in the face of a secret governance system, and can a digital currency make a difference?"

Svetski argued that Bitcoin is not merely another 'technology', but actually a model of voluntary consensus that anybody in the world can participate in, whose rules are entirely transparent.

He called it a form of "constitution in code" which, like math, cannot be changed or distorted like constitutions of the past that depend on the protection of man have been changed. Bitcoin's integrity is rooted in the laws of math and thermodynamics, while all previous models of governance have their Achilles heel in the 'word of man'.

Defining Money

Svetski defines money as the "language of value." It's a way to encode or assign and communicate value to the product of our labor. Fitts points out that one of the most critical ingredients that makes this communication of value work is having an integrity-based pricing mechanism.

> "Civilization is basically a story of discovering better objects and better mechanisms for exchanging the product of our labor," Svetski says. "Humanity is a story of finding better money, basically.
> The thing that organically becomes money is the tool, the object that is fungible. As many of the units as possible should be the same. It is divisible. A cow, for example, is not a great form of money because if you only need a banana, what are you going to do, chop the cow's head off? It's not going to work.
> It needs to be recognizable ... it needs to be portable and it needs to have some element of scarcity. You can't just create it out of thin air. It's the property of scarcity and unforgeable costliness that gives us debasement protection."

In many cultures, gold was a cherished currency for the simple fact that there's a limited supply and it's not easily forged. Gold is not very portable or divisible, however, so as societies became more complex, fiat currencies (that governments declare as legal tender) like printed coins and paper bills emerged. With good governance, the fiat currency was still scarce, and it was protected from debasement by being difficult to forge.

The problem arises when governance becomes corrupt and the issuers of the currency start printing more, thereby diluting the value of the currency (i.e. inflation). As noted by Svetski, "No matter how excellent whatever money we're proposing to use, that is secondary to who controls it and who decides."

You can have a perfect money system, but if the people who operate the system and those who use it are separate and independently controlled, it won't solve anything because corruption by the controllers of the currency is a root problem. As noted by Fitts, a sound currency would serve an economy where the people and the real assets are in balance.

Two Sources of Currency Debasement

Debasement of the currency occurs when the real economy gets out of balance and you try and make up for it by debasing or diluting the currency. That's what we're seeing right now. Corruption isn't the sole problem here. "Debasement can come from the governance system trying to cheat, but it can also come from a real problem in the real asset economy," Fitts says. And those are two different problems.

One is based on trying to please constituents (or fraud), and the other is a structural issue that needs to be resolved. The manifestation and the deterioration of the integrity of the money ends up the same, though, so they're frequently assumed to have the same root cause.

Fitts believes that our current problem is not so much a currency problem but a secret governance system that is harvesting the planet of extraordinary amounts of resources. By doing so, they're creating a massive drain on the real economy.

Creating a crypto asset outside the system to protect ourselves from that drain can only work for so long, because it doesn't solve the problem that there's a drain on the whole economy. The question is, can we bring transparency to what is happening and prevent a secret governance system from draining the economy of resources?

Transparency Is Key

Svetski argues that currency issued by any form of entity, be it a monarch, a state or a hidden Mr. Global will simply bring any system back to where we are now. Fitts believes the solution lies in creating a decentralised market economy based on aligning living and financial capital and incentivising peace rather than war, and a requirement for that is transparency.

To get to transparency, we must first break down the system of mind control set in place by the secret controllers through the use of modern technology. She believes the entrainment technologies, subliminal programming and various mind control influences are an effort to protect themselves from transparency.

And just how do we break through the mind control that keeps us dumbed down and unaware of how the system works and how it's being drained? Fitts believes it will require us to identify how the mind control works, and then set ourselves free, one by one. "Control happens one person at a time. Financial harvesting happens one person at a time. And freedom happens one person at a time," she says. Svetski agrees, adding:

> "I did a post the other day on Twitter. It said, 'You're very hard to control when you're healthy. You're very hard to manipulate when you're clear. And you're very hard to influence when you're sovereign.' So I think we definitely agree in that case.
> I think it's very difficult to control the minds of sovereign individuals because not only do they fundamentally have a disdain for what I call fiat authority, which is nonorganic authority, but they are interested in living as individuals, not as a component in some homogenous collective, which is basically how the world wants us to live at the moment, which is ridiculous."

How to Foment Resilient Communities

But how do we inspire the others to follow suit and become sovereign individuals? First, we need a critical mass of sovereign individuals in a place. Fitts notes:

> "The currency needs to be in balance with the real assets — food, energy and shelter.

"The currency needs to be in balance with the real assets — food, energy and shelter. Let's pretend for a second, to make this simple, we're doing a community currency. How do we get the food, energy and shelter sufficiently independent and resilient in that place so that the currency can function?

You'd need a critical mass of people who are willing to do that so that they could outwit what satellites are going to do to stop them. So, I'll just talk for myself because I can't talk for everybody, but I think if you see where Mr. Global wants to take the system, you would do anything [to not go along].

We are better dead than going to where Mr. Global intends to go. So that means there's nothing I will not do to stay out of Mr. Global's trap. It's clear you have to rebuild a healthy, responsible economy, and you can't do it one person at a time.

Occasionally you'll see a phenomenal person who can go do it themselves, but, generally, our civilization depends on cooperation and specialization — community.

Ten percent of people are what I call Net Energy Plus; 80% are going to follow whoever's in charge, and then you've got 10% who are Net Energy Minus. The idea is that you keep the 10% Net Energy Minus in the corner, you get the 10% Net Energy Plus running things, and you get the 80% following them.

I think part of the key to a successful human society is that we have respect and love for all humans, but the Net Energy Minus has got to stay in the corner. When the 80% follow the 10% Net Energy Plus, the speed at which you can turn a company around [is tremendous]. It takes no time to turn it around, but you've got to get the 10% Minus in the corner. Put the 10% Plus in charge and it changes overnight.

The challenge that we have, and the problem I ran into when I was trying to do community development, is Mr. Global is great at finding the Net Energy Minus guys and having them do crazy things. So, the question is: How do we protect ourselves from that sabotage?

The Net Energy Minuses can be handled. The problem is handling them with Mr. Global's minions, who are very capable and very professional at recruiting them, managing them, financing them.

I grew up in a very poor neighborhood, and it didn't take long for Net Energy Plus people to find each other. Those leaders would just magically find each other, and they could control the neighborhood because if anybody misbehaved, they could cut off their money.

And then the government came in and made sure, whether by dealing the drugs or bringing in HUD subsidy, that they could subsidize the slugs. And then suddenly the Net Energy Plus people couldn't do slug management because they couldn't stop the drug dealing and HUD subsidies.

Predator evasion for not just ourselves but the whole community, whether it's a network or a place, is where I've never seen us excel, and that's where I'd like to see us excel ... Good governance has to emerge from a covenant which is codified in formal law, but is embraced in a culture which does the primary enforcement."

In Svetski's model, the Net Energy Minus people are "the parasites, the jealous members of the masses or the failed remnants that instead of adding value to society try to extract whatever they can instead," and the Net Energy Pluses are leaders and entrepreneurs. He weighs in:

"You mentioned, first of all, that transparency is important to counteract control. We need to build sovereign individuals in order to counteract mind control. We need to then take these sovereign individuals, enable them to build communities in order to become sovereign communities, such that they can better manage the delinquents and lead the 80% towards a better world.

You mentioned Mr. Global comes in like a wrecking ball and [destroys] it every single time, because that's what he's good at. He's a parasite. He just wants something for nothing, basically. 'You guys work and I'll benefit.'

That's the version of the world that Mr. Global lives in, which doesn't align with the physical laws of the universe. That's just not how reality works, although Mr. Global thinks we can somehow structure the world in that way so that we can suck from the productive people and get something for nothing. Unfortunately, that sends the world on a path to hell, which is where we are now."

Why We Must Refuse Vaccine Passports

One solution that is very clear is that we must do everything in our power to resist vaccine passports and other forms of patent systems' control, as they are a foundational piece of the digital control grid being erected around us. Fitts explains:

> "I'm watching a control grid snap into place. The Russians and Americans have made announcements about regulating crypto. In the EU, they're trying to morph the vaccine passport and now they're calling it a 'private digital identity wallet,' and the tax authorities are adding biometrics.
> So, you're watching the financial system getting closer and closer to building a control grid, but that control grid is not so much control of the technology, money or cryptos as controlling the people. And it works right now. For the last 30 years, it works like a covert social credit system, but it's invisible; it's covert.
> The covert operation lines are integrated and connected, but it hasn't been made overt. And one of the reasons it hasn't been made overt is they haven't been able to bring the U.S. Constitutions down, although they're trying. But at some point, they're making enough progress with the vaccine passports and the QR codes, that they're going to start snapping this thing into place, and that to me is what has to be stopped."

Svetski, on the other hand, believes an incorruptible money like Bitcoin can play a central role in preventing or circumventing this control grid, because if the globalists can control your finances, they can dictate your actions:

> "If your bank account is completely owned by me as an authority, and that same authority owns or controls what you say online ... and if you say something I don't like, and then I just turn off your money so then you can't travel anywhere, you can't eat, then I have the ultimate control over you ...
> The most important part in the control grid is: If I can just turn off your money based on what you said, or who you hung around with, or who you're associated with, you have zero power as an individual. Zero. That's the holy grail of what they want. They want to introduce the CBDC, tie it to your vaccine passport, to your movement passport, and then it's game over."

Reengineering Our Economy

Again, for all the details of this discussion, please listen to the interview in its entirety. In closing, Fitts argues that what we ultimately need is a complete reengineering of our economy into one that is built on health rather than disease, peace rather than war and transparency rather than secrecy, and the people must be in control of that economy. Economy built on disease, war and secrecy, controlled by a hidden cabal, is what leads us into a downward spiral in the first place.

> "We have an economy that has a negative return on investment," she says. "But if you reengineer the financial system, you align living capital and financial capital, and you run the economy to build health, the speed at which we could start to generate fantastic amounts of wealth that could begin to deal with some of our liabilities and obligations is fantastic.
> They see that opportunity, too. And if you see what they're moving to do, they're just moving to do it with a very different framework that you and I might use to do it. But the wealth is there to be created ...
> My tactic has been to bring transparency and find out how to prototype decentralized economics that creates explosive new wealth. Where I keep falling down is I'm not able to get a critical mass of people to figure out how to protect themselves from the mind control and the sabotage ...
> The challenge I've had with many people who are enthusiastic about Bitcoin and crypto is they don't see the control grid, and they don't see the danger of the control grid. And that results in them trying to talk individual and retail investors into doing things, oblivious to the dangers of the control grid."

Svetski agrees about the roots of the problem, but he is still convinced Bitcoin is a central part of the answer:

"The problem is waste. The problem is secrecy. The antidote is some sort of transparency, a covenant amongst people ... I'm extraordinarily enthusiastic about Bitcoin and I'm extraordinarily pessimistic about crypto.

There is a universe of difference between the two for me. Crypto is exactly how we walk into the control group problem. Every single one of them is Mr. Global's attempt to discredit Bitcoin. Bitcoin is the only way to walk out of it. And I'll explain why.

Crypto is the most effective attack by Mr. Global on Bitcoin. All these monkeys running around screaming about crypto, all they're doing is they're walking right into the trap, which is the creation of a new currency that is controlled by a foundation, an institution, a group, a company, and creates a central point of leverage that Mr. Global can get access to.

And mark my words, I said this two years ago on a podcast and people thought I was crazy and it's happening right now with the World Economic Forum partnering with Ethereum Foundation.

I said, 'Ethereum is going to be the best way for globalists to enact the central bank digital currency because they're going to do it under the guise of innovation.' Every single coin other than Bitcoin is run or operated or issued or controlled by some single group. Bitcoin, on the other hand, is a constitution enforced by the individual. I'll explain it like this.

What makes Bitcoin special is that it's not a program, and it's not a technology. It is actually a set of rules, a constitution that we voluntarily opt into. When I'm a node operator of Bitcoin, for example, all I'm doing is I'm just running the software that is Bitcoin. And the software that is Bitcoin is just a series of rules: 21 million coins, divisible to eight decimal places, blocks every 10 minutes.

It's this set of transparent rules ... I can change the rules of Bitcoin if I want to. But what happens is that I'm immediately out of sync with everybody else, and I'm no longer on the Bitcoin network. I'm on something else. I'm on Bitcoin Aleks version, and then I have to convince everybody to move their economic mass, or their economic gravity off to me.

In doing that, I'm then going right back to the original problem that Bitcoin is solving, which is Bitcoin says, 'Hey, money is the tool that we use to encode time and energy. Let's place it outside of anybody's potential control. Let's put it with the laws of gravity, thermodynamics, the speed of light. None of us can control those. They apply equally to all of us. Let's place money in that realm, then let's go and do other stuff.'

Bitcoin is not digital. Bitcoin is information. This is another layer that I wanted to illuminate. I could take a Bitcoin transaction, and I could write it on a piece of paper. I could write it in emojis, and I could post it to the other side of the world. And you could then broadcast the transaction. The only thing that makes Bitcoin digital is that the internet is just a useful communication medium.

Bitcoin transcends that because Bitcoin is purely just math and information. That's all it is. Bitcoin is the law of large numbers being used to associate private and public keys in a way that the public key cannot be reversed. And the holder of the private key is the private property owner of the Bitcoin associated with that key."

Fitts counters, "Right, but you still come back to the same problem I said about if the control grid controls people, no matter how perfect you can make something like Bitcoin, it's simply not enough." Svetski replies:

"It's not enough on its own, but it's the one thing that makes 99% of the difference. Because what it does is it does a couple of things simultaneously. No. 1, it gives us some money. I call Bitcoin free banking in gold in information form that anyone can run on a $100 piece of hardware at home.

Picture a world in which every bank is just a $100 node operating at home, running the Bitcoin network. And every single one of those nodes around the world are in sync."

Fitts notes, "Right, but you need those people who can maintain themselves outside of the control grid. And they need to have the real assets to be able to do that and do that together." Svetski replies:

"Totally, and this is why we need something like Bitcoin, because what it does is in its appreciation, it gives us the economic means to acquire the real assets; energy and food. Primarily, they're the two that we need in order to start to make ourselves sovereign across every other dimension.

Bitcoin's kind of the linchpin. If you can't do that, you'll never catch up to the other ones. But in doing so, we have the economic capacity to do so, and simultaneously. And this is where Bitcoin is simultaneously a defense mechanism and an attack mechanism.

Every dollar you put into Bitcoin is a dollar that is not in the existing system. And what happens is it starts to create a drain on the existing globalist form of money, which is predicated on the capacity of an institution to control it."

Fitts disagrees, saying that's not what she's seen happening. What she's noticed is that someone, likely the central bankers themselves, "primed the pump on Bitcoin," basically, someone invested heavily into it to drive up the price. Where did that money come from? According to Svetski, the money came from millions of regular people who decided to swap their fiat currency for Bitcoin.

Fitts, however, is convinced that someone is artificially pumping up Bitcoin. She believes the central bankers or their owners are pumping Bitcoin in order to prototype options for their control grid and to attract retail investors into digital assets out of precious metals and real assets, making it easier and cheaper to establish centralized monopolies of real assets.

At the end of the day, it's up to you to decide how you feel about Bitcoin. It certainly has strengths, but Fitts makes a good argument for understanding the control mechanisms and the risks of an all-digital financial system. The deep state dominated by globalist elites within the framework of a devastating technocracy and speculative markets is impossible to give value to the real economy, the value of work, social life, cooperation and what really matters in life is happy acting with solidarity and respect for human life. Globalism is destroying human identity, of collective identity. The globalists use the Covid to impose their ideological agenda, destroying the peoples, the nationals, the worker and social ties, the real economy for the speculative economy. We need to delve into socioeconomic activity. Cooperatives began to gain prominence in the 1970s, a decade in which the incompetence of traditional development policies became apparent, thus producing a change in their orientation, moving from top-down or centralized development to bottom-top.

The Empowered Communities are a good fighting front to achieve the participation of community-based organizations, the support of true health science, biodynamic agriculture and the conservation of the environment with renewable energies, so that concrete solutions can be achieved together , inclusive and sustainable to fight against the great threat of tyrants who want to dominate bodies and minds.

This link discusses Importance of incorporating local culture into community development. The territorial development policy has included social cohesion and comprehensive planning. Territorial approaches are better suited to the unique and complex conditions present in rural areas. The local culture is part of this later development model. As a result, more and more attention is being paid to local level and "bottom-up" approaches that focus on culture, territory, local diversity and the optimization of local resources. extension.psu.edu/importance-of-incorporating-local-culture-into-commu..

These initiatives could combat the economic and social "collateral damage" to humanity, of growing inequalities of hunger, caused by the corrupt elite that has been enhanced by the extreme measures caused by COVID-19 on its way to the Great Reset. We are in mass unemployment, energy and supply crises, poverty, death and despair that emanates from the financial establishment, from philanthropy served from a mirage of virtues, which leads to the greatest evil. We have an imposition of domination that destroys family life, thoughts of freedom, impoverishes large sectors of the world population that see increased inequalities, destroys culture, destroys a distant past where some freedoms could still be contemplated. The goal of the financial elites, multi-million dollar foundations and philanthropists is the concentration of wealth, the bankruptcy of the real economy, mass unemployment, social inequality and racism.

Gui, all of Life, Creation is interconnected. All the Pillars of Creation, the Foundations of Life constantly interact in ways to nurture & nourish all the other parts. A never-ending Opening Flower. It is the Predator$ want to separate, to believe they can control those forces more powerful than themselves. To not only Divide & Conquer fellow humans, but all aspects of Creation. No wonder their hunger can never be filled. The more they get their way, the more falls by the wayside. The more things fall deeper into chaos, feeding their fears & a need to control even more of the uncontrollable. When globalists can control your finances, they can dictate your actions, in many ways, some being so subtle on an individual level as to not be noticed.

This is a major hurdle to overcoming the globalists' mind control & propaganda influence. This is why people must be educated across multiple dimensions, not just money, but health, individuality, philosophy, ethics, economics & more. Any economic system not grounded in the health of our Garden, Planet Earth & the many Lifeforms & systems supporting it, most likely is doomed to failure. Properly understood & applied money is just a tool, the Lust for money is a disease making one blind to these things.

In the 90s' if the memory is working, UTNE, (sp?,) ran information about local community's forming local digital currencies. Being as one of the most basic functions of $ is it's reflection of one's knowledge & skills were applied in a way to be paid for it. The process kept track through computers. Local people in the Local Economy all start out with the same amount. While a mechanic may buy a part in & through our existing system, his labor would be paid in the Local Currency System. This allowed the mechanic to hire say a plumber & pay for his time with the Local Currency. Locally the labor is the economy.

Because the currency is a Local Economy, cheaters end up shunned. The Power Structure hated it & shut many of these down. Fitts: "What I've said is, it is absolutely important we have a financial system & a currency system not 100% digital. Right? All digital opens the door from the truly devious hackers, those hired guns for the Predator$. If one person can develop a system, another can crack it and cause mischief. There are also the unintended consequences, solar flare? Massive natural catastrophes? Just some idiot fooling around and pushes the wrong button? Locally anyway, we can also use existing cash, especially coin to trade amongst our neighbors, community. Locally it can be decided if a dozen eggs cost a dime or a dollar.

The biggest concern is how do we provide Ceasar that which is Ceasar's, the taxes, fees, service charges, licenses & such power control mechanism should they pull what cash they can out of the existing system? Even if a badly needed proper Currency system is created how do we do end runs around the Predators system, if they most likely won't accept a currency system created by the public? There will be answers, but it will take all of us doing what the Predator$ hate the most, sitting down amongst ourselves coming up with solutions without them & in line with the Cycles of Creation, not just their myopic selfish I, Me, Mine paradigms. I am neither Red nor Blue, but pretty much, very much, like you. Keep On Trucking!

Thanks Leahoz, yes, the evidence shows that we are facing a plandemic, a planned genocide. The places with the highest vaccination rates are now facing devastating surges in deaths related to the Wuhan coronavirus. A study by Dr. Rolf Steyer and Dr. Gregor Kappler found that when weighted against the relative number of inhabitants of a federal state, the correlation between excess mortality in federal states and their vaccination rates is surprisingly high. . www.globalresearch.ca/higher-vaccination-rate-higher-excess-mortality/.. With all this we must consider that the answer lies in history.

It is the historical tradition of billionaire families running Davos and the new world order, through control of the global financial systems, absorption of all monopolies and corporations, and ultimately all private property. The tyranny imposed on the world creating this "pandemic" and developing the draconian measures, which have constituted the ideal scenario to give the final blow to the world economy. On September 11, 2001, an attempt was made to terrorize the American people into passing the unconstitutional Patriot Act. This allowed the US government to spy on all Americans and violate constitutional privacy rights.

We have a great root in Event 201 of 2019, at the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security, in Baltimore, Maryland, sponsored by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, the WEF, the corporatocracy that represents Big Arms, Big Pharma and Big Money) and the John Hopkins Institute, mark a reality that it was necessary to create a virus to achieve the "Great Reset" The villains are the ones who plan and organize these "events". They are the ones pushing the vaccines, the ones who made them, and the ones who released the lab-made viruses.

It is about entrenching the fear of germs, of entrenching the allopathic medicine of illness and death, while discrediting the natural means and the protocols that do not feed the pockets of the corrupt, of the psychopaths, of the tyrants. They are biological weapons of mass destruction, they are crimes against humanity. The greatest threat facing humanity is the increasingly pervasive system of fascist tyranny whereby corporations and government have merged and now feed off each other to perpetuate "health crises" for profit. This book gives an answer to what is really happening. This E-book consists of a Preface and Thirteen Chapters. Latest Update January 22, 2022.

Each of the thirteen chapters provides factual information as well as analysis on the following topics: - What Is Covid-19, what is SARS-CoV-2, how is it identified, how is it estimated? - The timeline and historical evolution of the Corona Crisis, - The devastating economic and financial impacts, - The enrichment of a social minority of billionaires, - Social engineering and the destabilization of the institutions of civil society - How the lockdown policies trigger unemployment and mass poverty Worldwide, - The devastating impacts on mental health. Thanks Just, your presentation is very correct, we must attend to the local economy, to the defense of the environment, to sustainable production that serves the well-being of people, not the tyrants who meet in Davos. Purchasing power is a good tool to achieve such well-being. The gross domestic product (GDP) is an economic indicator that reflects the monetary value of all final goods and services produced by a territory in a given period of time. It is used to measure the wealth generated by a country. However, this indicator should not be the privilege of the most favored people.

GDP per capita is not an exact indicator when it comes to measuring the distribution of wealth between population groups within the same region, nor is it the disposable income of households. Economic inequalities mean that this tool does not estimate the degree of well-being of a country because marginal groups are dragged into poverty. Another important point in the cryptocurrency market and the current dependence on the digital market Cyber threats have increased rapidly in recent years.

Thus, this type of attack is one of the main risks to growth and economic progress. Cyber attacks are no longer directed solely and exclusively at large companies, so the fight against hackers is essential for the survival of any company and business in today's market. Avast cybersecurity experts anticipate that cybercriminals will advance in the use of techniques that ensure the effectiveness of ransomware, the continuation of scams, theft and cryptocurrency mining malware.

juststeve, on that Caesar character, remember, government is nothing but a band of agents, without whom none of the thousands of local, state and federal governments found across our land could do good or ill. Those agents represent us. Therefore, We The People are Caesar. Accordingly, what is not rendered back to Caesar is only that which is rendered outside the circle, or stolen by the agents.

Almond, I've been around the so called "patriot" movement for over thirty years. I made my living in the legal system, helping folks who'd already been fleeced by the system and with little or nothing left to take or give. During that time, I've seen things the CONSENSUAL LIENS rise and fall. Each time they were revived, those bringing them back said the same thing, "they just didn't do it right." So to it went with things like STRAWMAN arguments and the COMMON LAW courts. With the latter, folks claimed authority to convene their own version of a court and to arrest deserving public officials. I walked away, because I know how such things would end. One side, with unlimited funds and years of assembling a bastardized just-us system against a newly formed, barely organized group tired of [actual] criminal activity on the part of oath dishonoring scum.

Of course, you can add to that the fact for profit FAKEnews would love to make money milking that one, including by painting everyone involved as anti-American January 6thists. I really believe, "Where there is no solution, there is no problem." Of course, we may not always like the solution. For our ancestors dealing with the Redcoats, it meant losing family or even our own lives. So too it went during the Civil war [which was more about control than slavery - once in the Mob, always in the mob).

In the end, I began pressing people with fact - our laws are, perhaps purposely, so complex even government agents and law scholars cannot agree on them. Consider, for example, IR codes - the same income tax form was sent to several different IR stations and each gave a different answer, as to what was owed. It is because of those complexities I pushed people to use their own laws against them. Them being not government, but mere agents who are part of government at our pleasure and only for mere days. Once those around me started using their policies and procedures, things started changing.

I agree Sagcrew but not a waste of time. He presented his argument well. Remember the Colonial Pipeline ransomware event? The ransom was 75 bitcoins that was paid. The FBI recovered 63.7 bitcoins through the use of a private key. How that key was obtained was never disclosed. It seems Bitcoin is not as secure as advertised. It does not represent freedom. Catherine alludes to Mr Global but does not name them. It is not so hard to figure out. They are the international banksters that control The Bank of International Settlements, The SWIFT check system, The Fed and all the other privately held central banks in the world. There are few that are not.

Cuba, Iran, Syria, North Korea and somewhat China and Russia. Do you think it is just a coincidence that those are the countries that are sanctioned and otherwise attacked. I forgot Venezuela.There were others. The last to leave the club was Libya. Before that it was Irag and Afghanistan though it may be back in the club now. Another common theme of the banksters is connecting money to addictive and/or necessary commodities like oil and opium. Remember the Opium Wars? China had accumulated much of the silver and gold of the colonies because European royalty competed for luxury goods like silk. China demanded payment in gold so it went from Europe to China.

Britain grew opium in India and Pakistan and created a market in China. The emperor saw the gold disappearing and banned opium. The UK & US attacked to force the opium market open again. Many of the robber barons were involved in the opium trade and then went into banking; Delano as in FDR, Forbes as in John Forbes Kerry, Stanley as in Morgan Stanley etc. Those banksters are the hidden owners of all the Fortune 500. They create money out of thin air at interest which means they are stealing from the economy, like Fitts says, without working or contributing. The Vietnam War was also an opium war as was Afghanistan.

Money is not the ultimate solution. Having money is useless when there is nothing to buy. Has anyone else noticed that when no one is working, goods are not being produced? Once farms and factories shut down, it takes time to get them operational again. Because they are interdependent and supply each other. Each part of production that shuts down makes recovery that much more difficult. Has anyone noticed inflation, smaller amounts of product per unit or box? Less selection? Lower inventory? Lower quality of many goods? Whether adulterated food or manufactured goods? Clothing is shoddy.

Our recent experience with truck repairs is that it is no longer worth doing ourselves... parts are so faulty, that we are better off having a mechanic responsible for repairs that fail because of bad replacement parts. Children being inadequately educated... dumbed down? Medical system in collapse? The economy relies on 3 basic factors... resources, "men" at work, and private property ownership. Anything govt does to diminish these factors depresses the economy.

Yes, Almond, a good economy is governed by a maximum occupation adjusted professional preparation and resources to meet the needs. Purchasing power is a good tool to adjust production to people's purchasing power. The gross domestic product (GDP) is an economic indicator that reflects the monetary value of all final goods and services produced by a territory in a given period of time. It is used to measure the wealth generated by a country. It is also known as gross domestic product (GDP). The result of all this measures the size of a country's economy, that is, all its economic wealth.

The greater the GDP of a country, the greater its economic capacity and therefore, the greater its capacity to generate employment and investment. Eurostat has created a fictitious currency, the Purchasing Power Standard, whose value is updated every year and according to which with PPS you can enjoy the same amount of goods and services in each country. This fictitious currency, when added to an economic indicator, becomes the key to being able to decide who contributes and who receives, but even here the nuances also come: it remains to be known how much each one.

Although the PPS allow purchasing power to be compared between the different regions that register different price levels, GDP per capita is not an exact indicator when it comes to measuring the distribution of wealth between population groups within the same region or Neither does household disposable income. Economic inequalities mean that this tool does not estimate the degree of well-being of a country because marginal groups are dragged into poverty.

How true. My daughters have a boatload of money in the bank and are asking us(parents) what to spend it on, seeing that it is losing value every day. I am a firm believer in land. Only land gives and gives and gives. We have seen the times and they do not look good. All I can tell people is be prepared . . . My only concern with the land we own is when we plant a garden, how can we keep the bears from decimating it!

ECONOMIC TYRANNY: www.rt.com/news/548406-canada-freedom-convoy-spokesperson-interview/ As a former Court Reporter, Clerk of the Courts in southern Ontario I object to lawyers in Ottawa canvassing to form a Class Action Suit via targeting downtown residents, in opposition to the Freedom Convoy. Ottawa, being the capital, belongs to ALL Canadians. The Canadians we see on Parliament Hill and in the protest are informed and not by main stream media, bought and paid for with our tax money by the federal government. Ben refers to this in the interview above. You're welcome to reprint the information below which is accurate and properly cited. When I was employed by the office of the Attorney General, I observed literally hundreds of lawyers before the bench.

These two gentlemen (?) are not using good ethics to support Canadians. "Ottawa Lawyers not supporting our intention that the Freedom Convoy is successful in regaining our Human Rights: Paul Champ, LL.B and Mark Bourrie, LL.B. Twitter, Feb. 2/22 from Bourrie: How hard would it be for a few of us Ottawa lawyers to find clients among downtown businesses to relieve the Omicronvoy of its slush fund via a class action? Champ is seeking the approval of the court to include "all persons who reside in Ottawa, Ontario, from Bay St., to Elgin St., and Lisgar St., to Wellington St., in the Class Action." (Source: CTV).

Readers, bear in mind the majority of the residents in Ottawa will be government employees, many looking forward to huge pensions and a carefree existence. They don't seem to know that silicone earplugs will stop all noise; the type that melds to the shape the ear. Zexi Li, 21 yrs., a public employee who lives near Parliament Hill, was named as the lead Plaintiff. (Source: CTV). Address complaints: Upper Canada Law Society, 130 en St. W., Toronto. There is no charge to make a complaint and you can do it without legal representation. Please do not believe otherwise."

Thanks Retsbew, indeed there are more and more protests against "vaccine" mandates and restrictions around the world. Omicron and truckers can be of great help. European nations are soon beginning to see the end of passports. Despite the high overestimated rate of infections by the coronavirus, those hospitalized are decreasing precisely because of those vaccinated. There is no truce, truck drivers are having an exemplary behavior that extends throughout the world. The great battle of truckers against the "vaccine" mandate is widening. Truckers in Australia have followed the example of Canada's Freedom Convoy participants and driven to the country's capital in Canberra to protest Wuhan's long-standing and futile coronavirus mandates, including vaccinations, even though stubborn Australian leaders have still promised that booster shots will be mandatory very soon.

The Daily Mail reported that protesters from across the country descended on the capital on Monday 31 January as part of a demonstration dubbed the "Convoy to Canberra", involving enough cars and trucks to stretch for several miles. "Many drivers left their homes in New South Wales, Queensland, Victoria and Western Australia on Saturdays to travel thousands of kilometers in their trucks, vans and SUVs." www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-10458149/Covid-19-Australia-Convoy-Ca..

'Freedom Convoy' Vows to Stay in Ottawa Until COVID Vaccine Mandates Lifted. Trucker Gord Magill, who joined the protests, denounced the mainstream media (MSM) coverage of the protest. He claimed MSM reports zeroed in on a couple of protesters who do not represent what the convoy stands for. "The [MSM] is clutching at straws to smear us – which are in short supply," Magill wrote in an op-ed. Travis Smith, an associate professor of political science at Concordia University in Montreal attended the protest and later wrote:

"Despite temperatures around -20C, I saw and met many women and men, from across the political spectrum, from disparate socioeconomic backgrounds, French- and English-speaking alike, young and old, vaccinated and unvaccinated, gathered to donate their time and the fruits of their culinary talents, such as hot bowls of chili and fresh baked goods, plus sandwiches, snacks, and beverages for the road. childrenshealthdefense.org/defender/freedom-convoy-ottawa-until-covid-.. (02/01/22) In this fight we now have the brave truckers who tell the truth about the "vaccines" against the deceptions and tyranny of Biden and Fauci. Canadian truckers are on the march and their counterparts in the US, Europe, South Africa and Australia are preparing for similar lengthy protest campaigns against Wuhan's coronavirus vaccine mandates. www.brighteon.com/334433bc-7586-4e19-b11f-e068d108edf9 (01/02/2022)

Thank you, Gui, for your valuable input. There's a lot more to what I circulated, but I wanted to fit the post size here. The leaders of the convoy, Benjamin Dichter and Tamara Lich are Jewish and Metis heritage respectively, so a wonderful example of the diversity of Canada. The URL is an interview with Ben. I also included a cartoon of a large pig named Trudeau suckling its young. The young piggies are labelled Toronto Star, CBC (Canadian Broadcasting Corp.), CP24 - Media Bias Fact Check, CTV, Huff Post, and Global News.

And this is important, we ousted Erin O'Toole, leader of the Conservative Party! Took 118 emails to do it, but so worthwhile. Credit to Keean Bext, The Country Signal, for his last minute message the night before the Caucus vote to ensure it was a done deal. He was with Rebel News and left amicably to start his own coverage. We have much better candidates on the horizon now! Pierre Poilievre is bilingual and will appeal to all Canadians. www.youtube.com/watch Retsbew, here is a very moving letter from a resident living in downtown Ottawa in the middle of the truckers. He went out and talked to a lot of them. He said he was able to talk to folks from all over Canada with the exception of PEI. I assume that is Prince Edward Island. The letter and comments after his letter will tug at your heart strings. Brings tears as I reread. maybury.ca/the-reformed-physicist/2022/02/03/a-night-with-the-untoucha..

Hi, Otis~ Thank you for posting that letter. It warmed my heart. It's a beautiful, well-written piece with such honest, factual conversations and it sounds like it was a perfect evening for him to meet all these interesting people (until the rain came :-) One could almost feel as though you were strolling along beside him through the cold damp, night air, listening to the thoughts and opinions of the drivers. That night will always remain in his memory as a time when desperate changes were needed, and down the road, depending on the outcome, he may be left with a 'good memory by having had that closeness in sharing stories with those special truck drivers.

That is soooooo true. I just wrote on Steve Kirsch's forum that we need to POOL information even if it is of different persuasion. There are many possible ways to treat the virus, but it seems to me now that the real virus is globalism and the decimation of the worldwide economy. I don't know about you, but I am pretty convinced that society is going to start to fall apart later this year (last night at dinner an American friend of mine concurred but said 2024!). I have a preparedness book as in notebook, based on realigning our lives locally, food, stores, water etc. I think it would be great it we could all work toward some pooling of our resources collectively and continue to encourage healthy debate. As this forum does, thank you Dr.Mercola.

Yes, Leahoz, in a dialogue that respects opinions there will always be meeting points that seek favorable solutions that respect human wealth as a source of prosperity.

Yes, pipblanc, respect for nature is respect for life. We need true science, integrated people who project wisdom to promote the health of the planet and the living beings that inhabit it. Our future well-being depends on placing relationships at the forefront of our collective interests. When nature is taken care of, we also stay with ourselves. All meaning arises from coordinated action and what we consider real and valuable depends on the well-being that we project, with the effort of local regenerative and what we consider real and valuable depends on the well-being that we project, with the effort of local regenerative agriculture. Relationships with others and with nature must imply respect and an order of priorities that must be sustained in conserving it as born from the work of the creator.

Vandana put it very well: Life on Earth is not possible because of indiscriminate technological advances, but because there are trees, lands and seas that allow this planet to be oxygenated and make it possible for us to breathe and feed ourselves. Love for nature, for life, for all the creatures in the world is the only thing that gives meaning to life. Natural capital is the basis of all human prosperity, since the economies of the planet do not explain or recognize this dependency, they are driving a dangerous trend that favors environmental deterioration. The researchers who have participated in the preparation of the report assure that the culprits of this scenario are the defective economic and political institutions.

"We are poisoning the well from which we drink," says Oliver Greenfield, coordinator of the Green Economy Coalition, the entity that commissioned the investigation. The dire state of nature and the implications for our future barely register in economic decision-making. In other words, we are accumulating a huge systemic risk to our economies and societies, and just like the financial crisis, most economists don't see it right now. www.greeneconomycoalition.org

Sounds good in theory, pipblanc, but even this forum has its own ways and means of discouraging contributions for debate.

Bitcoin seems to be expensive to get into, so how can less well off or poorer people start. What's to stop Mr Global & his group investing and destroying it. Can bitcoin improve the world. I'm just too old or not clever enough to understand all this.

Clash of diverse perspectives. Excellent. Aleks seems right to me, bitcoin is outside financial tools. The China hammer story is an ideal illustration. China is the perfect stand-in for Mr. Global. Catherine is pissed her clients lost half their "investment" after she did her due diligence (Ethereum, by the sound of it). She interrupted a bit too much as Aleks was speaking-formulating. Catherine is brilliant - and will have much to contribute - so I hope they do manage some manner of brainstorming collaboration. I'd wager the percentage of bitcoin populace that's vaccinated is much less than 50% (I believe Aleks - in his restrictive regime - was influenced on that number).

The idea all the Other Crypto are pretenders except Bitcoin, they're just middleman haunted me from day one i.e opposed to the philosophy. And Critical Mass has been defined as 10% historically. CM meaning the percentage needed to persuade the 'masses' was researched at 24%. I believe the CM needed to crack the COVID mass psychosis is necessarily 35% or more. Why, because AI mass bots are hammering the real Disinformation which keeps getting absorbed. Thus, a higher bar. Aleks description of not appealing to the masses - again, a great insight.

Fact is, Bitcoin-crypto naturally attracts a more adventurous, robust individual in the main - more resistant to vaccines and mind control. Catherine saying rising Bitcoin was a 'pump and dump' where Central Banks were main players seems rubbish. GameStop is instructive on a few levels and is still hanging in pricewise so the kids are still holding that stock. And Bitcoin doesn't make 'people expendable' at all. Units of adoption and success whether Bitcoin or society revolves around People. That's an immutable given. 'Tools are agnostic'. Mr. Global's unprecedented blanket of propagated bullshit has caused a new mental diamond to emerge "Live Free or Die" as a heart-felt sentiment. Perhaps Adam Smith's 'invisible hand' will finally manifest in Bitcoin.

Golly, this is getting over my head. I'll just pray and hope and stash food for years and grow my organic veg and when I think total collapse is "nigh", fill everything available with reverse osmosis water. If that all fails I have a bottle of cyanide in the shed. I'm sure God will forgive me, but at the mo life is pretty good here and having usual daily fun, music, singing, busking, cycling, Pilates, tennis, Poetry, lots of like minded friends and all family so no loneliness or isolation. Love being retired far too busy to work anyway. Come on you folks get optimistic. Good always wins in the end, evil will fail. Jennifer

Regarding that cyanide, please visit nderf.org (near death experiences research foundation dot organization) where there are over 4900 reports, and counting, from people who have briefly died and revived to return to tell us about it. Suicides are among those reports. From what I've read, nearly all of those who tried suicide regretted it. Many reported that God, or whatever name you wish to use, doesn't accept suicide as a valid way to die. It, after all, is murder. The same people who operate that foundation also have related sites, such as adcrf.org (after death communication research foundation dot organization). I no longer believe in an afterlife because I personally know that there is an afterlife.

I'm old and not smart...did I mention I'm old? Me thinks Bitcoin and others are due to lack of trust in governments and banking. Bitcoin is software and software can and will be hacked if money is to be had. So why bitcoin and not physical gold that you can hold in your hand when not in your hand buried in your back yard? See line #1.

I agree with you but also it would be good to watch the documentary from the 90's called The Money Masters on YouTube. I am watching this for the 2nd time now with my family and it explains how gold is still part of The System. But yes, I prefer tangible assets too. Probably smart to have a little of both. I got I to Bitcoin a year too late. It was at $5000 in spring of 2020 and now it is at $40000 and so I have broke even this far. I love Bitcoin but am also wary of it. Also, I am tech savvy and I struggle with the technology, protocols and terminology a lot. But to answer your question, you can buy $20 of Bitcoin on an exchange like Coinbase. And if you had done that in spring of 2020 you would have $160.

Nothing huge but there is a good possibility that the value of Bitcoin will go up again, so what looks like an expensive price for the Bitcoin is likely to look like a bargain then years from now. I am literally writing a small ebook this month that is meant for beginners who just want to try buying $20. That's how I started...to test the waters and to see if I liked the process and if I lost the $20 that would be a bummer but also not that much a loss. I did that a year ago and the learning curve has been strong. If you want my ebook for free you can message me/friend me. I was going to see if my parents understood it and use it to navigating buying their first Bitcoin, but i am open to sending tlit to others, too.

I don't post here very often but I think you can friend me and I can send the ebook to you. I don't know if that is allowed here. If now, I will sum up by saying just jump in and do $20. Use Coinbase because it is the most mainstream but don't stay in Coinbase because their fees are high. They request a lot of personal info and selfies, which feels really invasive, so expect it and know that that is now part of the big brother regulation that we now have to deal with. Hope this helps. Am I allowed to post my email? icount123098@protonmail.com

Alex talks about educating people to be sovereign. Sovereignty is a spiritual state. Nobody can educate others to be sovereign. Those who wish to be sovereign must seek it and reach out to Providence for the training. It's not an easy path. Using Bitcoin or any other form of currency won't make one sovereign.

People need to become informed that cryptocurrency involves theft. I have lost count of the number of times my web sites were disabled so people could use the computing power on my servers to mine cryptocurrency. I don't see why Bitcoin would be an exception, either. Since we discovered most of the theft is coming from people in Russia and China, we blocked access from these two countries: the people in those countries can no longer access my web site at all. Which means they cannot read my pages in Russian and Chinese. Either way, I lose, they win. Anyone who is involved in cryptocurrency is an accomplice to this theft.

Exactly. Isn't this the type of currency that the Globalists would want, in keeping with the Great Reset? Is it too much of a stretch to think that the "controllers" are already many paces ahead of us and created this type of currency to have complete control of the financial system? Couldn't they have created it, or even taken over the original Bitcoin concept, from well-meaning sovereign-thinking individuals, knowing this would be the currency of the future as they envision it. Rather than having no control, the globalists would have even more control, as it wouldn't have to be backed by anything with physical/intrinsic value. The Bitcoin backers are underestimating the Power, wealth and ingenuity of Mr. Globalist. They would never have been allowed to get this far for so many years without the Globalist knowing full well that it would be taken over by them and become part of the NWO control system.

Alex said "I only look at do I have more Bitcoins than I did"; I have a banknote, beautifully tooled with an array of classical figures and elaborate numerals all printed on heavy weight paper and with dense blue ink, I have another for the same issuer of just two years later, very light paper, plain back, no tooling, simple printing and limited use of colour, the former is a 1000 Mark note from 1919, the second is for 50,000,000 Marks and you might have been abke to buy a box of matches, in the morning, perhaps not at lunch time, it was all manipulated and as predcitable as Clemenceau and Wilson probably knew but chose not to see.

Really did not like the way Svetski talks - "turn  into gold" - very patronising and dogmatic. Great respect to Catherine Austin Fitts for her arguments based on her vast experience and respect for spirit and humanity. Svetski says Bitcoin is "energy" - he is wrong, it is Virtual energy and that is exactly the world Mr Global is pushing for, a technocratic virtual world where centralised control is much easier. Dr Mercola, you say we need education - the issue is that we need to undo what has been put into the minds of people via the current ubiquitous eduction system and that is a near to impossible task.

I notice that there is a big move towards home-education, especially in America, but all people are doing is teaching the standard curriculum at home. This will not produce the paradigm change needed, nor the independence of mind. Before people can become re-educated, they have to become uncomfortable and Mr Global knows exactly how to keep that balance of keeping the masses just satisfied enough to enslave them.

I homeschooled mine, using a curriculum from a university. I agree, that may not have been ideal, however, I noticed a lot of the propaganda was absent. Also, since I was learning with my kids, I could filter it for them, expose it and teach them to use logic. The other benefit of homeschooling that's pretty significant is the freedom from peer pressure when children are in their formative years. Mine are much less susceptible to that now as adults. Also, being self taught, my kids had time to follow their curiosity, learning many things outside of their school work.

The lack of critical thinking has never been more apparent than it is in now. A student once said "you didn't learn me this stuff". I had a mother tell me that her child didn't need to know the alphabet at 3 because she was going to learn it in kindergarten. I had a high school teacher ask me when did I start reading to my son. I said "when he was in my womb". My son was reading Harry Potter at 5. His two year old twins wouldn't sit still for him. He was ignorant of how to engage his own children, so how on earth could he do the same for his students. When we hand over our education to some unknown entity because we are too lazy to gain the knowledge ourselves, we give up our freedom.

We are still in an educational crisis when we move from the classroom to the home. Parents are not capable of teaching their children. It will become a bigger crisis, because now, their child will not be learning from other students. If you only listened to what was discussed today and do nothing more, than why listen at all. Spend the next month or two, or however long it takes, to educate yourself on what is going on with our financial system and how it effects you. Bitcoin or crypto is decentralized. The Fed manipulates your money with low interest rates and debt and then floods the system with fake money. We are now at $30 trillion dollars in debt.

Your plandemic payout of $1200 costs you $11,000. The government never gives anything away free. You're paying it back with inflation that will likely last years. How do you hedge your bets? You invest in other things than the government. Every time the government creates a crisis, there is a wealth transfer from the middle class. The elite don't get poorer. They get richer. There were 321 new billionaires created in 2020. People today have no savings. They haven't prepared for a disaster and have no food storage. They have no escape or safety plan. If you don't, then I suggest you start with setting those things in motion first.

This discussion was meant to peak your interest in Bitcoin, and the financial crisis we are in and the death of the dollar. You can't make an informed decision one way or another if you don't have the knowledge. Pelosi, March 2020, let it slip that she was behind the US digital coin. Gates has a patent that will get ordinary stupid people to sit in front of a computer looking at ads for the promise of payment of "crypto", a worthless digital coin. If you don't know the difference between Bitcoin and the US digital coin, you will be duped into believing you will make millions from it. Klaus Schwab speaks about the next big crisis. A Cyberattack. The world will wake up the next day and it will be Greece all over again.

The retail banks will be gone and your money, minus whatever percent they deem necessary will now be in the Fed Reserve. You will no longer be able to pay for anything with fiat dollars. The government will know about every purchase you make. No privacy. Your health will be tied to the vax passport, and if you're diabetic, guess what? Your purchase won't go through if they deem the candy bar you want is not healthy for you. They decide you didn't pay enough taxes, then they just take it out of your account. This is in the works. Bitcoin prevents them from doing that. They cannot see what you have.

It is completely private. That is the security it offers. When you take control away from those that want to control you, you win. Whether the elite get into Bitcoin or not, Elon Musk purchased $1B in bitcoin last Jan 2021. If you have a self-directed ROTH or IRA, you have more choices to secure your wealth. That is what the elite are afraid of. The benefit of Bitcoin is you can use Dollar-cost averaging (DCA). The system of regularly procuring a fixed dollar amount of a specific investment, regardless of the share price. You can buy a little or a lot, or a fixed amount every day. There are about 14 million buying it. Do your own research.

Fitts says someone is pumping up Bitcoin artificially. I'm more likely to believe her so I'm staying out of it. Maybe I'm missing out. Maybe I'm saving myself from a crash. Some people say put no more than 1% of your money in crypto and that sounds like sound advice.

When a money is increasing in buying power over time, as opposed an inflationary currency it becomes a currency that rewards health. When you are leaking buying power during retirement it is a race to die before you run out of money. Bitcoin increases in value and sometime soon will be deflationary (more being lost than mined.) This is the health based currency she clamors for. The longer you live the more your Bitcoin is worth. Bitcoiner is a swarm creature that is developing a hive mind. Bitcoiners are the carnivore fasters eager to jump into a cold pool and workout smarter not harder. To a Bitcoiner longevity is money sustainability is a must and future is brighter than ever.

Money is just math. Four sticks represents four wooly mammoth cattle traded off to caveman Fred (all with George Washington's face carved into them, and with the proper watermarks to deter engraving copies, of course). I needed a bit of pork for my family, but couldn't handle an entire butchered pig. Those sticks (with Washington's face carved into them) allowed me to pay caveman Eddy, the pig farmer and part time butcher, some I.O.U.'s Eddy could buy Eggs with, or milk, or the first wheel, once caveman Charlie go around to inventing it. Of course, sometimes just trading seven chickens, some butchered and some laying, for a quarter of a mule deer worked out just fine and the transaction was in and out of commerce so quick no one hardly noticed it happened.

Elsewhere, John was on to something. He had some iron ore he'd hammered into a knife, and a few ingots. He was scheming and knew he had something he could negotiate with. He'd get back to that stuff that shined and didn't rust later, when he could figure out what to do with it, other than use it to woooo Kyle's betrothed away. The story doesn't end there, but the concept of representation of labor and commodity value had gotten its teeth into the society and a new future far changed from the same old, same old was on its way. Now comes the question - will the village(s) next door honor my engraved sticks, or do they want my iron ore or. . . .

Catherine and Alex both pointed out and agreed that Mr Global had pumped up the price and dumped the price of bitcoin. Alex said his $1,200 investment became $200. If Mr Global can control the value of Bitcoin the asset is not free of Mr Global. If I dont completely understand an investment, how it works and the risks, I don't buy it. I hear Alex's theory and desire for Bitcoin. I don't think it necessarily achieves his goal.

All this requires data. Don't give it to them. Ditch the smart phone, don't use smart technologies. If you have to have a smart phone because of younger family members, disable everything unnecessary, go into settings and disable everything you can. It took me about 3 to 4 hours, I check after every upgrade, I have text, phone and camera basically. The privacy settings let you do a lot, the apps, and location can be turned on and off so they are not running in the background, now if you go for a long hike in mountains you might want location on, you can also use alternatives like "three little words". Make the technology work for you not for them. Use cash. Try not to use cards.

I have family members who do everything on their smart phone and pay for everything on their smart phone, they will not listen to me, they laugh at me. The older members of the family now want better phones, becuase they are missing out on grocery offers and discounts, they are saying, how do we get the apps for the discounts at the supermarket, they need newer phones. The gradual traps they (mr global) set. I too can see the grid being formed around us, I have seen it for years. It is a shame more cannot think outside the box and also see it. It gives me hope coming on Dr M's website to know that there are others in the world who also see these things.

Not much of a gambler. We go to a casino once a year, during local vacation. I count it a big win if I walk out with the twenty bucks I allowed myself to gamble away. That said, lets say I put 25% of my retirement money into bit coin. That herds an elephant into the room: 1) Where do the Federal Reserve Notes [FRN's] go? 2) If you actually use bit coin to buy, what is to stop of the feds from claiming the same thing they did against others who printed money or IOU's like FRN's from liens, or the barter companies of the past and so on? At least with gold or silver, or their like, they are needed commodities and not just more imaginary things that can be manipulated by so many.

dejure, where do the FRN's go? Nowhere! The Fed. has been inflating digital currency, not FRN's. FRN's comprise only about 2% of the total currency in circulation. If the PTB shut down the banks, stop all credit card transactions or anything similar, the FRN's in circulation will still have value and will still be accepted. If one doesn't like FRN's, one can always exchange them for U.S. lawful currency. Check out Title 12 U.S.C. § 411. I have even toyed with the idea of having a stamp made up to read: "Redeemed in lawful money pursuant to Title 12 U.S.C. § 411." By stamping your FRN's with this you would theoretically take the bill away from the Fed. and give it back to the Treasury.

Gold, like other such valued elements, can and will be adulterated, like olive oil, for example. Few people have the equipment and knowledge to verify purity of any precious metal.

qpd2934, I disagree, no small amount. For years we heard the nonsense "gold went up today" or "gold went down today." In truth, it neither went up or down. Rather, it was the number of FRN's needed to buy an ounce of gold that changed. This was going on LONG before the Net and electronic communications between banks and the Fed. Every time they fire up the presses, they dilute the value of the existing, "in circulation." Feds love FRN's because they can inflate and deflate their value. As to the 2/% figure you mention, please elaborate. Are you talking about marks, dabloons and . . . or just Amerikan money. Regardless of if your figure did include other countries money, it remains, even if governments could influence only two percent of the money on the planet, that is enough to destroy whole countries, or make them, if their money is the favored flavor of them moment.

As to your "always," with regard to the promissory notes we call FRN's, it can be said the constitutions (all fifty-one) will always. . . . until agents combine branches to outlaw free speech, free movement, the right to bear arms and so on. Getting lawful money or paying in it is not as easy as you imply. My first case was an IR case. The fellow paid all his employees in "lawful coin." Doing so meant ordering the money he paid his people in every week.

You can believe the banks made doing so as difficult as possible. More so if he was paid in a check or other promise to pay. Only a few years ago, Washington law required people redeem their tax seized property by way of paying in silver coin. That is no longer published, but was never done away with. No safeguards are in place to stop employees from swapping out, say, a four thousand dollar property tax payment paid in silver coin for FRN'S, making the employee twenty or more dollars for each one they swapped (I went there, under chapter 42.17 RCW (now codified under chapter 42.56 RCW) and it caused all manner of chaos.

At around 1:50 and the issue of unserviced debt held against Bitcoin as collateral, the US farmer used to be at a mom and pop level, induced to borrow and then faced with the Great Depression, mortgages were called in, and the land was bought at distressed sales at cents on the dollar, didn't the US government make it then illegal to hold gold bullion, the Bitcoin of the day, and exchanged it for fiat currency; the regulators can make up any rule they like, they've been doing that for ages but quite obviously in the last two years.

Trying to understand people. I think part of it the rationality of actions comes from humans lauding memorization of tactics or any information that can be used to "control" other humans, animals or the earth and influence them (through terrible education, trauma, brainwashing, abuse, torture) to follow evil ways like those humans, or just believe these are "smart" or "good" (a lot of this seems to be related to evolution theory teachings about "survival of the fittest") so this is what humans seem to label as "smart". To me it seems like respecting and valuing all beings and the earth and trying to communicate and understand with each other and learn and help each other is more useful and more obviously smart in my view.

Much of the news and education seems to be designed to tell us how to think, what to think, who we should judge or hate etc. The evil now it is not easy to comprehend and it seems like trying to promote peace and end the torture, experimentation and control of people, animals and the earth through human physical methods is not in our reach. I believe many have been deceived by satan and Jesus loves all His creation and will forgive us and accept us into his kingdom not because of our human qualities, but because He is love and holy and He honors our decision to follow Him. Justice will happen at the consummation of history.

He is delaying this for His great love for those still following the clues to Him. "What does it profit a man to gain the whole world, but lose His soul?" "Do not fear those who have the power to destroy the physical body, but fear God who alone has the power to destroy the body and soul in hell." "For his ways are higher than our ways and his thoughts are higher than our thoughts" "Man looks at outward appearances but God looks at the heart." The people following satan trying to make themselves gods are being decieved and will suffer horribly. We can trust all God's decisions will be perfect and just

Whether you believe in Bitcoin or not and whether the elites have already bought so much of it that they can now manipulate the market is irrelevant. It most certainly was not designed as stated to steal wealth. Completely the opposite. Just because rich people are using it to steal wealth does not mean that that is how it was created. There is a reason the governments have spent years spreading propaganda that it is dangerous and is drug money. I for one have turned £150 into over £50,000. Something I never would of been allowed the opportunity in a traditional banking system. If you understand crypto currencies you understand that using just the word Bitcoin is incredibly outdated.

There are a mass of promising projects created for the people, by the people. The tokens are distributed as fairly as possible and they are fully decentralised with no one entity controlling them. Stakers/holders/the people govern the networks. We get incentives for running decentralised nodes and we get to vote on every decision that impacts our network. Yes governments and elites want to bring this down and they are trying. But it is far from the picture this article paints. You do realise the most promising decentralised projects don't have named owners. They don't have a place of business. They aren't traceable and at current aren't subject to government interference.

The government aims to combat this by looking at the options used to turn crypto currencies back into fiat. Then they are waiting like vultures. Solution. Move to Lisbon the crypto capital of the world. This country has written into law that they will never tax or regulate cryptos. As someone who's been involved with crypto since 2009 I probably know more than the so called experts who's sole responsibility is to discredit Bitcoin and try and stop it. Every step along the way their concerns have been shattered. Every time they said it was dead they was wrong. Now they're scrambling around trying to regulate it.

jac8120 For someone who has been involved with cryptocurrency since 2009, how have you turned 150 into only 50,000? Bitcoin was deployed during 2009 at a price of essentially zero. You could have bought at least 15,000 bitcoin with your 150. At the bitcoin peak, your original 150 would have been worth over 1 billion. At todays price, over 630 million. What went wrong?

I wasn't investing and buying crypto and holding back then. Everything I've made is in the last 3 years. I collected XYO for free by walking round 'geomining' it cost me £150 to boost the subscription for 3 months to accrue quicker. The year just passed my £150 had grew to £13,000. I sold it at around £10,000 and invested in several other projects like Fantom Arweave Polygon Render Luna etc. And that's left me with £50,000 which is currently half in cash ready to deploy. More specifically in UST the Terra Luna USD stable coin. Earning 20% APR via Anchor protocol. And the other half is yield farming in the Fantom network. I got into Bitcoin to use Bitcoin it wasn't an investment strategy back then. If it was then yes I'd have multiple of millions by now. Sorry can't see a button to reply to you directly.

It's a shame that most commenters here have not spent enough time to properly understand bitcoin, and thus do not realize that bitcoin is the only ark that will save them when this whole financial house of cards collapse in this plandemic. Good luck ppl!

Catherine, Bitcoin or any currency is not enough to solve all the problems created by Mr. Global. It is only 1 piece of all the "stones" needed to get us where we want to go. Although Bitcoin is not encoded in our culture or our communities yet, we need to start somewhere and Bitcoin has the structure to prevent the corruption and the lack of transparency inherent in other fiat or Crypto currencies. In an ideal world, we will need some type of currency and certainly it looks like Bitcoin, is the best currency created so far in our history. I am not saying that Bitcoin is the best or the only solution, I am just saying that it looks like it is the best we have so far. If we can create a currency better than Bitcoin, then that would also be ok.

Excellent discussion. While I see a glimmer of hope in bitcoin, I think Fitts is right…within the current system the vulnerabilities need a more immediate response. Maybe I am missing something there? Maybe something like bitcoin can be a useful piece in the puzzle going forward, but first and foremost is dealing with the mass genocide, and second is how to keep the tapeworm, the parasite, from taking out the vast majority of us during the “great reset”, even after the immediate threat is dealt with… The mind/media control is slightly crumbling, but this needs an overhaul to be dealt with.

Maybe I am not understanding this fully, but the question I have is, if the government is viewing bitcoin as a prototype and deems it successful, isn't it likely it will take command of this new currency system?

Sio6474, I am not up to speed with how bitcoin works, but unlike other cryptocurrency it seems to be built into the design of it that it can't be taken over by a central authority, which is real genius if that is correct. Even so, Fitts is right - until bitcoin (and the people owning/using it) are invulnerable to the moves of Mr. Global it is something of a moot point. 10 years to set that in place is probably too late. Agenda 2030 gives us 8 years at best.

NOT WORTH THE TIME AND ASSUMES A HIGHLY INTELLECTUAL AUDIENCE...DID NOTHING TO ADVANCE MY KNOWLEDGE ABOUT HOW BTC COULD HELP US THROUGH THIS CHALLENGE. I COULD HAVE LEARNED SO MUCH BUT I DIDN'T.

What a brilliant conversation, I get what Alex is saying, but I also think he didn't really understand what Catherine was saying Mr Global is prepared to do, that was very evident. The world in which we are heading to has no rules for the elite. A global Auschwitz. Can't wait for part 2

Yes, I agree, I thought Alex was saying that Bitcoin is 100% resilient as a rule based system of transactions. Also, he feels it is immune to Mr. Global's encroachment, whereas Catherine believes Mr. Global has the regulatory power via legal mandates or regulation of power sources to make bitcoin's store of value irrelevant for the populace's use and benefit.

Although I'm in agreement with Catherine Austin's Fitts desire to expose the reality of the financial system for the Ponzi scheme that it actually is. However, I couldn't help but notice that she shows clear signs of someone who although seemingly denounces the deception. Simultaneously, she admires the doers behind said deception. "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matthew 6:24. Just my two cents.

Catherine Austin Fitts, as usual, was great in her incredible knowledge and ability to see things clearly while cutting thru all the hogwash. Aleks Svetski... not so much. Condescending and a master at circular thought, he didn't seem to come up with any real solutions. He deflected often, asking Catherine what the answer was to many of the questions discussed, without actually answering most questions himself. Alex didn't address real people/community and their ability to stay alive in an immediate, crisis situation. I also think his occasional use of profanity was unnecessary and somewhat disrespectful to Fitts.

Like Fitts says, the root of our problems lies in governance and the rule of law. Which is why, unlike her, I'd say that as much as we may rely on the US Constitution as one strategic source of resistance to the covid coup and biosecurity state, we're challenged by their global war against humanity to refound the body politic in a new constitution, or covenant of trust, among 'we the people.' Apart from whether the Constitution already before this has been rendered null and void by "inverted totalitarianism" (Sheldon Wolin) - decisively established under the lead of the (neocon) right wing of the ruling class with the first war of terror upon the 9/11 coup - we need to come to terms with how the nation's founding document was itself the result of a coup by elite interests (aka 'founding fathers') who betrayed popular interests of the revolutionary era in order to secure centralized control over empire independent of British control.

A social system founded upon class rule inherently demands secret government in order to advance the interests of the few at the expense of the many (as effectively advocated in such original propapanda as The Federalist Papers). No workaround or technofix, from gold standards to cyptocurrency, resolves how finally it is the foxes guarding the henhouse with regulatory schemes to curb abuses of the system.

What best insures the integrity of the body politic is direct, participatory democracy establishing rule of the people from the ground up in local, decentralized governance among equals determined not only by civil liberties but economic justice. Such a covenant calls for our common human identity, transcending the divide-and-conquer identities of nation-states among others (e.g., race), as the revolutionary basis of a greater reset beyond the present evil. OK: So, I see certain of Aleks' assumptions as fundamentally incorrect. This does not destroy his arguments, but limits them. The basic assumptions of human evolution are incorrect! Though the basic assumptions of Christian Creationism are also incorrect, they at least include a prior creative force, beings capable of "magic" and truths that are "secret" and therefore difficult to know, or become aware of. Without at last those elements, one's understandings of life are limited. Gold, for example, has been a valuable (and rare?) metal for millions of years. Those that limit themselves to the recent history of Earth limit themselves too much! There is too much back story that needs to be known and understood.

FINALLY somebody - Fitts - states the obvious, which I have been saying since this plandemic started. And it had been going on long before that, the plandemic response just brought it front and center. NO MATTER WHAT ELSE WE DO, it simply won't work so long as the evil ones have all the money. Money is power. They have it, so they have power. They got it illegitimately. We have to, as she terms it, claw it back. Why do so many seem to believe we can take back our society by carving out a few enclaves of right-minded people when the despots control all the existing plant and equipment, all the real estate, all the wealth in all its forms? That's not possible.

Appears to us that Catherine completely gets the big picture. She understands and has experienced the deep state politics. Svetski gets "some" of it and would be smart to listen and try to learn from folks like Catherine. It isn't technology, it's mind control and the iron fist that is the shield that backs up the deep state. The deep state will control your conscious mind which feeds your subconscious mind which is what manifests your reality. Clearly, Catherine has the experience and understanding. Svetski echos what most folks are now aware of and continually asked Fitts for the answers to questions he himself has not considered, or if he has, he has no practical solution. We're speculating that Svetski learned in this dialog but might have learned more if he weren't consumed with "reframing" to be seen as being right. Listen, learn, do. Carry on.

I think the last two years has shown clearly the power of propaganda, and the prevalence of propagandized people all around us. But disregarding Mr. Global's power to control minds, what about it's brute force power period. No one needs to be brainwashed or agree in order for Mr. Global to take control of a cryptographic system. Share croppers, miners etc...all lived lives essentially as indentured servants, all kept indebted to the plutocrats of the time, while their energy was siphoned into vast riches for their controllers protected by the laws of the land, and the buffering effects of power and money. Nothing has changed, same story, in a techno format today.

'Holy Grails' of Technological Invention to Ensure Freedom Svetski replies: I mean, you see it in Australia. The government makes up a fake law so they can fine you for not wearing a fake mask. And then if you don't pay your fake fine, they just take the fake money out of your fake bank account, without your consent. So, whoever issues and controls the money basically has the ultimate power. If I'm the issuer of the money, I can do whatever I want, basically." This statement is total BS! Right there Svetski blew his credibility. Almost all fines are withdrawn by the issuer plus there are various means, in Australia, where people can easily sue the issuer, which is very easy to do, or to contest it in Court for which there are a great many public advocates. That's it for me. Catherine is great!

1933, Germany had faced open street warfare with marxists, suffered fourteen years of the "100% war guilt" imposed extractive Versilles Treaty, war, global trade war, was declared against it and after the war Winston Churchill said, many pertinent things but specifically that the war had been principally for markets (not aginst fascism) and critially that Hitler's sin had been to delink from global capital, the rest, as they say, is hostory but the history we aren't allowed to see.

The fact that Hitler was attacking Freemasonry is well documented in the article Hitler and Freemasonry. freemasonry.bcy.ca/.../hitler.html They quote Robert Jackson, the chief prosecutor at the Nuremburg trial "It is not generally understood that among the earliest and most savage of the many persecutions undertaken by every modern dictatorship are those directed against the Free Masons.... dictators realize that its membership are not likely to support the police state, which lays so heavy a hand on the freedom of the individual." Freemasons are not "champions of democracy" like they claim, but Satan worshipping murderers, thieves and liars. We are now paying the price for allowing them to infest all the governments and corporations of the world.

@Solitairecat The Jesuit Order rules and controls Freemasonry, so it all leads back to Vatican City. This is why in Revelation 17 it reveals the mystery: And upon her forehead was a name written, Mystery, Babylon The Great, The Mother Of Harlots And Abominations Of The Earth. And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration. And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns. And here is the mind which hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth. And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth. Revelation 17:5-7,9,18 See this link for further clarification: prayerandprophecy.wordpress.com/2009/06/13/the-question-that-changed-m..

Do we have access to source code and infrastructure of our ISPs, our electrical systems, our electronic hardware (properties and where these are manufactured, bios code, firmware, operating systems) most of the time we do not have access to all of these properties and code (constantly keyloggers and other malware are being found in hardware and software) software developers rely on other code libraries, do they understand and can view all the code in this? I completely agree with Fitts. Also, for example in the United States do most of us know how to make a car? Where are the materials coming from, who makes these for us, how do all the electricity and "smart" features with Bluetooth etcetera operate on the lowest level.

Where does our food come from? Who is packaging it? You can seem to say anything is organic and non gmo how can anyone verify this? Are we verifying it on the internet? Can we actually trust this? I have heard a lot of stories of food items starting out in factory farms in other countries and then as it's shipped across countries suddenly it becomes chemical free or organic. If we do not know how to grow our food, build our shelter, understand all the properties and mechanisms of everything we use I don't see how we can protect ourselves from Mr. Global. Also, even if we do create our own communities to not rely on Mr. Global and Monsanto and everyone doesn't try to prevent us from growing our own food- if they have private armies etc- won't they just be able to do what they want anyways? It seems like people who try to go against the agenda are frequently imprisoned, institutionalized, killed with psychotronic weapons or regular, or defamed and put in jail.

I do not mean to be negative but from my experience the evil experiments on humans/animals are much more horrific than you can start to imagine. Fitts is right that the only choice is to become self sufficient and I think we'd have to barter but Mr. Global controls the land and government etc

You are right to question the source of our food because what we eat has a direct effect on our health. Food fraud has been an increasing danger especially when our food comes from far away. Consider that olive oil has been cut with cheap vegetable oils that cause heart disease. Since organic food sells for a premium, we can be certain some of the food being sold as organic is not. The only way to be more certain is to grow our own food and purchase what we can't grow from people we know and trust, but sadly this is impossible for most of us.

We need to trust in God, asJesus said “Therefore I tell you, do not worry about your life, what you will eat or drink; or about your body, what you will wear. Is not life more than food, and the body more than clothes? Look at the birds of the air; they do not sow or reap or store away in barns, and yet your heavenly Father feeds them. Are you not much more valuable than they? Can any one of you by worrying add a single hour to your life?" in Matt 6:25

Hi, Violelise~ You bring up several valid points. As to the food, you are correct in the trust issue, knowing today the ALMIGHTY

DOLLAR comes first. We need to be alert and knowledgeable in where and what we buy in the way of healthy foods. I became aware of the benefits of a healthy lifestyle back in about 1974-5. At that time we were in upstate NY in a town surrounded by lots of farmers where we were able to buy fresh, wholesome food, but have watched over the years, to see how everything has changed. We left there in 1980, moving to a large metro. area in another state for awhile, but now back in small town PA, with many Amish and other farmers who sell at our local farmers' mkt.

Most of the Amish have signs...No Sprays... and a couple others are paying for Organic Certification. This market is well run, staying on top of all the rules of honesty, and I know what I'm getting there. They also run soil tests, correcting any problems that may arise Both parents grew up on farms, so I've always enjoyed gardening, canning and freezing as they did, but now my circumstances have changed, so I'm glad to have this local market. They are also open all winter (many beneath tents with kerosene heaters inside) so it's good having those winter veggies available too. :::Con't:::

:::CON'T::: There is another farmers' mkt. several miles away - a large market with many different types of vendors. Several of the farmers there have signs reading "home grown." Sure, their items are home grown at 'some farmer's home' but then sent to auction houses where a lot of these vendors buy, so you have no idea where the food comes from, what soil conditions are, or if they've been sprayed. Sadly, some of the farmers, and I heard even a few Amish, who buy at these big AUCTIONS, travel all the way over to NY City to sell at the open markets.

The folks in large cities like that think they're getting wholesome, fresh veggies/fruits from honest farmers, and especially the Amish. :-(For the most part, the Amish ARE God-fearing people, hard-working, honest, and leading simple lives...BUT naturally, there are some who follow a different path. I would like to mention also, if anyone has a Wegman's Grocery Store in their area, they are a wonderful place to shop. Their organic produce depts. are way above average as well as featuring healthy organic choices throughout the store.

They also purchase from local farms in season, and have wonderful employees They have (or at least 'did' have) gardens where they have taught young people about growing organic foods. No, I do not work there and have no association except as a happy shopper. I just found this link and see this store is a LOT bigger than my local one.

"Picture a world in which every bank is just a $100 node operating at home, running the Bitcoin network. And every single one of those nodes around the world are in sync." Who controls the nodes? Who can shut your node off?? Anything "digital" is easily controlled by those who control the lines of communication, the servers, etc. So, Bitcoin is not the answer.

Snyder... You are correct. What we repeatedly see by those in power is that they let you do the work of building and financing something. Then, they confiscate it. The law gets used against the people. To my way of thinking, part of the solution is not working for others, but working for yourself. Esp. by producing commodities necessary for survival. I do not place a lot of confidence in dits-and-dots. These are not physical and tangible. It is important to recognize that, for purposes of govt, those in power can define what is an acceptable form of currency. The reason this is significant is because you will always need to pay taxes. Even if TSHTF, revenue collection will be one of the last functions of govt to be lost and one of the first to be restored.

It is not enough to own assets. You must be able to convert them to a form that govt accepts as tax payment--or you lose the roof over your head and the land under your feet. Everything else can be managed. You can provide for yourself under the proper circumstances. The point about having a good well or water source is timely. Many people do not think much about how they will get water for drinking, bathing, sanitation, animals and gardens. The other thing you need to consider is fuel. This goes beyond heat and light. Those can also be easily managed.

You may need fuel for vehicles and machinery, even if only for on-farm use in tractors, chain saws, generators, etc. Perhaps to power a small cart to move goods short distances--even as far as a few neighbors. Wood and solar cannot do everything.

Consider a role for bioconversion fuels. You may not need such fuels in large amounts, but having some would make life a lot easier. In reality, for most people, travel will not even be a reasonable activity--at least, not far beyond your neighborhood. Further, there will be little to travel to town to buy. It will be assumed people who travel have money or goods to steal. Highway men.

The world has a great danger in global economic stability. Cyber attacks and data fraud are already the most worrying technological risks for the globe, and third on the list of general concerns, after the arrival of the coronavirus pandemic. Cyber threats have increased rapidly in recent years. Thus, this type of attack is one of the main risks to growth and economic progress. Cyber attacks are no longer directed solely and exclusively at large companies, so the fight against hackers is essential for the survival of any company and business in today's market. Avast cybersecurity experts anticipate that cybercriminals will advance in the use of techniques that ensure the effectiveness of ransomware, the continuation of scams, theft and cryptocurrency mining malware.

Attacks abusing work-from-home policies in the corporate sector are also expected. Yahoo has been the victim of two of the biggest cyberattacks in history. One of them reached the entire digital platform, so that all the accounts of its clients were affected in some way. Cyber attackers had full access to the email addresses and security questions that Yahoo users used to reset their password FinCEN, the United States Financial Enforcement Network, reported that the total value of suspicious activity related to ransomware in the first half of 2021 was 30% higher than the amount recorded in all of 2020.

Cybercriminals will continue to target the digital currency sector. With Bitcoin and many other cryptocurrencies hitting their all-time highs over the past year, Avast specialists forecast a continuation of the use of crypto mining malware, as well as malware targeting crypto asset wallets, cryptocurrency-related scams, and cryptocurrency thefts. themselves. .

14 Cyber Attacks on Crypto Exchanges Resulted in $882 Million Loss. The costs linked to cybercrime in the world will reach six trillion dollars this year (just over five trillion euros), a figure that slightly exceeds the size of the GDP of Japan, the third largest global economy, An average of 270 cyberattacks were recorded per organization during 2021, 31 percent more than in 2022, and with the gap between security levels achieved according to senior managers and cybersecurity officers, each successful attack costs a company 3.6 million dollars. www.cesifo.org/en/publikationen/2020/working-paper/cyber-attacks-crypt.. www.econstor.eu/.../216520 www.finyear.com/14-cyber-attacks-on-crypto-exchanges-resulted-in-a-los.. www.iproup.com/economia-digital/28882-criptomonedas-y-ciberataques-per..

-continued- Private property must be protected from looters and government confiscation. This may involve local militias to protect farms, ranches and timberland. Without the farmers, the community will not survive. It will be helpful to have independent forms of communication. Animals of any kind require a huge expenditure in terms of resources in a grid-down situation. Not only are you producing food for yourself, but also animals. There may be efficiency advantages of ducks over chickens and goats over cattle, on the homestead for example. One shortage we are already seeing is feed shortages. A portion of your time and resources may be needed to produce feed and maintain animals.

Your food will be whole and unprocessed. You will need to butcher your own meat, harvest your own crops, grind your own grain, save your seed, forage seasonally. You will need to live according to the cycles of nature. Everything you eat will be cooked from scratch. Food wastes will need to be divided and repurposed. Animal feed, bones for bone broth, compost, bait. There are 1100 meals a year per person. When doing hard physical labor, a person may need 5000-6000 calories a day. Your thinking must approach full-circle. You will need to be self-reliant in so many ways and be productive. Animal feed, fertilizer, pesticides (not only garden, but ant infestations, etc.), food and preservation, clothing, water, doctoring and midwifery, educating children, heat, refrigeration.

There are natural and traditional solutions to many of these things, but many are labor intensive. Neighbors will need to rely on each other more. You will need a certain number of people supporting each other, but not too large a number. There will be little rest and year around work for everyone. Few people will have the luxury of drooling in a wheelchair. All hands will be needed. Hands will always be busy. Do not expect to be able to always buy what you need. Or expect quality.

-continued- Respect for private property is directly tied to human rights. If you cannot even own the clothes on your own back, you are dependent. You will still need an "approved" form of currency, if only to pay taxes. There are inevitably emergency needs for currency... needing a tractor part, an injury, loss... Try to live without money as much as possible, though. Not only does this reduce your dependency on the system, it withdraws your support for the system. Meanwhile, minimize your debt and expenses. An ideal solution would be in restoring integrity to the system. 2 drawbacks of gold. Historically, it has been confiscated by governments.

It is high value, making it very transportable. However, for routine trading purposes, it may be difficult to make small purchases and obtain $change$. We are transitioning to a new location. There is a constitutional sheriff. He has several local training seminars for his posse. Students are trained in everything from firearms to meeting community needs. This gives him an opportunity to observe how well individuals function, any special skills and how fast they learn. He has endeared himself to the people leading by example, removing his mask and admonishing people not to be sheeple.

Leahoz, you have made my day. You are voicing the spirit of what a forum should be about - an opportunity to agree sometimes but maybe not always and to voice your concerns. Some information is more important than the website which distributes it and transcends a failure to practice what it preaches. Now we see Boris's recent diversionary tactics for what they are - a scam to divert attention from what is coming - two things of note, especially for UK residents. The more this information is copied by others on this occasion, the better i.e.

government progression by stealth towards totalitarian control. Governments are under the illusion that our human rights are conferred by them and removed at a whim. The whole point of human rights is that they are independent of whatever government is in power. Governments are our paid servants, not our masters. (1) THE POLICE, CRIME, SENTENCING AND COURTS BILL, MAY 2022: Protest is a pillar of our democracy, but the UK Government is pushing through draconian laws that will take away our freedom, bringing us one step closer to a Police State.

The bill will give the state the ability to imprison anyone exercising their human right to protest, and includes punitive clauses criminalising the way of life of Gypsy, Roma and Traveller Communities. Protest march Saturday 12th Feb 1pm Great St Mary's, Cambridge. Hey, I only read about a third of this, but I go with Fitts. I may be stupid, but digital is stupid also. Shut down the grid and All Digital wealth disappears. Why have any amount of your funds digital unless you're just going to use it for day-to-day transactions? Then it makes things easy. Otherwise you better attack the difficult task of finding a way to store your value. And I admit that isn't easy. Traditionally it's been things like land, collectibles, Etc. But I definitely think it has to be something you can get your hands on, not digital "currency". How stupid can they think people are? Apparently a lot of people see logic to this but I don't. The only lure to digital is that it has an apparency of protection against monetary inflation. But there are investments one can make that also protect against inflation. They just aren't a form of currency.

I hear yah! I don't trust anything digital. However, if the grid goes down you won't have access to the money in your bank either. It's a double edged sword. To Almond's point, no currency has any value if there's nothing to buy. That's happening right now.

Amazing article! One thing I know is that the Capitalist system as we know it ultimately fails by falling into the impossible Capitalist Dictatorship making our lives a living hell rather than raising people up. We could not imagine this happening with "anti trust" laws on the books to prevent but it did happen as we now witness because the thing that drives Capitalism (greed) appealed to the regulators in Govt that were there presumably to protect us from Corp tyranny. No regulation. Now the FCC is forcing us to further enrich the most profitable companies in the world by paying again and again for insanely expensive new phones that should ALWAYS be workable on backwardly compatible telecom networks.

Insanity. My take is simple.....if you think we survive reset it MAY be an alternative to fiat but still has fatal flaws. "Bitcoin is purely just math and information." Knowing what Big Tech has done to us including hacking disssenters electronically, do you want your financial life based on an Internet connection? If the Resetters get their world, Bitcoin and other non approved and non traceable cryptos will be made illegal overnight.

You now own nothing as Klaus says. These very bright people should have discussed a new option that takes away the only disadvantage for real (not virtual) Gold - www.goldbacks.com. Real currency made with real Gold. The discussion might have had a more disinterested crypto rep than someone whose very world is directly tied to it and convincing you to buy. Still a necessary discussion but what do you expect when you discuss crazy high stock prices with a rep from an economist and a rep from Chas Schwab.

This article describes what is predicted in prophecy is going to happen, the one-world government, which must have a one-world currency is coming, we see it here. The elite will control the world population and the most horrific time of human abuse will come under a leader known as the Anti-Christ, for seven years until Jesus Christ returns with his people whom he took out of the world supernaturally. The avalanche has started, there is no stopping it. "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke 21:28

I agree it's going to happen this way. I am praying for us all and the ones deceived by satan will turn away from this evil. Satan tricks them because they think they are getting away with evil acts in the temporary world that they won't face justice, but they will and they will be horrified at how they've been deceived. Jesus says to pray for those who persecute us and forgive our enemies. Unfortunately many churches I've been to near DC where I live seem influenced and controlled by illuminati/pharisee types of people who laud and extol their wealth and reputation and say God is blessing them. It's very disturbing but Jesus and all his disciples were persecuted and killed for following God.

18If the world hates you, understand that it hated Me first. 19If you were of the world, it would love you as its own. Instead, the world hates you, because you are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world. 20Remember the word that I spoke to you: 'No servant is greater than his master.'a If they persecuted Me, they will persecute you as well; if they kept My word, they will keep yours as well. 21But they will treat you like this because of My name, since they do not know the One who sent Me. Woe to you when all men speak well of you, for their fathers used to treat the false prophets in the same way. Luke 6 26

It is the message of Davos to the World. We are on the agenda of slavery and the loss of the human condition governed by God. Everything was planned. The Great Reset refers to an Orwellian globalist agenda to redistribute wealth, monitor and control the entire world through digital surveillance, and require everyone to have an electronic ID linked to bank accounts, cryptocurrencies, and health records. The so-called COVID-19 pandemic is part of the Masonic plan of the New World Order and is being used as an instrument of the "Great Reset". Vaccines against COVID-19 will serve to control people and solve overpopulation. The Rockefeller Foundation devised a scenario called the "Lock Step" that appeared in a document titled "Scenarios for the Future of Technology and International Development," with more authoritarian control and leadership during a fictional response to the pandemic to which various nations they emulated the extreme measures taken by the Chinese government.

the Rockefeller Foundation, wrote a 77-page book in October 2017 titled "The Spars Pandemic 2025-2028. Bill Gates Bill Gates, who is a eugenicist and advocate of drastic population reduction, promoted global "vaccination" in response to the declared "pandemic. The history and risks of vaccines are described at the link, www.lifesitenews.com/opinion/the-carefully-planned-step-by-step-guide-..

This can most easily be done if you live rural. Fitts moved back to be with kin in Tennessee, altho she spends a lot of time in Holland for biz reasons these days...

Retsbew you are so right. The game is being played out but by now if you haven't figured it out then you are never going to. The Canadian truckers have made a great physical manifestation of what others have been doing all around the World and since the start of this 'pandemic' and even before to put a stop to it. In my case I have been looking into the New World Order philosophy for over 30 years and in my own way trying to keep friends and family updated with information and making our family unit less and less reliable on anything to do with government. This includes taking care of our food supply, healthcare, energy supply.... If you are purely reliant on your government/corporate food/corporate healthcare/corporate education/corporate media - then now at this late stage you have a problem.

However, I used to teach on a course entitled 'It's Never too Late' and with my fellow lecturers we used to joke that: 'it was' but in my experience with students 16 - 90 years of age it actually wasn't - you will be surprised what an individual can do in a crisis . My grandfather was a Desert Rat in WW2 he once picked up a jeep from the back end when under fire and stuck in sand - he told me he could never imagine how he did that.... Well we are in the sand right now...

Lynn, you are spot on! Everyone needs to come to a saving knowledge of Jesus. Sin is ruling now and people have been blinded. We as followers of Christ put our hope in Him and have peace. We know we are secure in our relationship with Him and have nothing to lose. We must ramp up sharing His love with others. Many have fear and now are open to the Gospel. The others think man will solve these problems. Not so. Wake up blind and deaf. I am constantly aware of the lost around me and daily ask the Savior to use me. It’s getting worse out here in evil land. Look up for your redemption is near. God bless you all.

Bitcoin is worthless when the power goes down. Not a good "crisis" currency.

And speaking of the truckers ... . If you want to monetarily support them, NOT through GoFund Me ! -- many people are giving through Givesendgo. Gofundme said the Truckers fund "Violates its Terms of Service" and any monies not claimed for refund would go to THEIR choice charities.

Of course I'm a huge fan of the truckers, what they are doing is beyond fantastic. Still, I sure didn't feel sorry for them when GoFundMe tried to rob them, or to be more precise I didn't feel sorry for whoever in the movement approved using GoFundMe. Jesus, this is exactly what GoFundMe does! Only a moron would have chosen that platform, it was inevitable that GoFundMe would try to screw them over as badly as they possibly could. The way it's playing out might end up being for the best all around though.

If it all hits the fan (and it will one day), try using Bitcoin or any cryptocurrency for that matter to buy groceries at your local store. If the Internet goes down, imagine trying to do the same... Time has told us, ANYTHING can be hacked. There are also multiple stories out there claiming the CIA was involved with the creation of cryptocurrency way back when... Would that surprise anyone? I think not!

I'm going to point the blame where it squarely belongs and is rarely ever mentioned: The Vatican and it's Jesuit Order. If people ever took the time to investigate the truth behind these wicked bastards, they would quickly realize that they are the most dangerous insidious organization on the face of the earth, and sadly it will take divine intervention to utterly destroy them. The Bible supports this in Revelation 17-18. Catholics/Jesuits/secret society members in political positions have opened the door for the downfall of this once great country. Their loyalty lies with the papacy, Not the American people. Of course, when a nation turns it back on God, He allows this to happen, so ultimately it's the peoples own fault.

Anyone watching the truck convoy in Canada? People are starting to put 2 + 2 together and it no longer equals 4. Joe Rogan has done a good job bringing attention to the major issues of truth. In America we have a very sick nation. Over 70 million adults in U.S. are obese (35 million men and 35 million women). 99 million are overweight (45 million women and 54 million men. We had more deaths from this virus because our citizens are so sick. Diabetes, heart disease and cancer. Our food and water is poison. There are fast food stores on every corner in America. The only thing the federal government in America does is push drugs and vaccines. We can't fight back if we are sick. Perhaps that has been the design over the past 40 years. In 2020 & 2021 we figured it out. Now what do we do?

Get "in our trucks" or "on our horses" and do SOMETHING in our own way. The time is now. We can do this

If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land. 2 Chronicles 7:14 If the above doesn't work, than rest assured, we are entering the time of Jacob's trouble.

Yes and to be honest most of the worlds population is basically sick. They eat junk and in the US much is GM, they sit on their fat behinds most of their lives, they don't exercise, they are nutrients depleted and have far too little vitamin D3 and K2, plus C and many other vitamins and minerals, (sun screen is carcinogenic and blocks D production) , they are dehydrated, their immune systems are shot, they are full of toxic vaccines and medication, even placentas have plastic particles in them, all with disastrous side effects. And now this NON vax which will probably kill you. (it killed my brother, he was stupid and brainwashed) We know that healthy people are not profitable for Big Pharma, permanent meds are. Still, I think less people on the planet will be beneficial for humanity in the end. Jennifer

The blockchain underlying the cryptocurrencies will give them the ability to "turn your money off", like a light switch if they decide you are a bad boy or girl. Like the quote froma recently deceased tyrant, "You can do whatever you want, but there will be consequences". Sounds like Freedom and happiness to me...I'll love it. So I'm told.

Bitcoins require inordinate amounts of electrical energy in order to sustain their operation. Sounds to me there is too much that can go wrong with this system. The U.S. Constitution provides for our monetary system so therefore bitcons should simply be considered as coupons or S&H trading stamps on steroids. www.thebalance.com/how-much-power-does-the-bitcoin-network-use-391280 ~~ www.cnet.com/personal-finance/crypto/heres-how-much-electricity-it-tak.. ~~ www.forbes.com/sites/briandomitrovic/2018/09/07/the-few-words-on-money..

Good catch Lehahoz. In the link Dr. David Martin gives us a historical and legal perspective and analyzes the specific laws that are being violated, as someone who has been watching this crime unfold since 1999. We are being overwhelmed by a cascade of vertically integrated and synchronized crimes on a scale that is difficult to comprehend. It has been so destabilizing and traumatic, that we may have lost sight of the many capital, criminal, civil and international laws that have been and are, at this very moment, being outrageously violated by the miscreants of the COVID War, all over the world. world.

Would really appreciate guests who have sufficient time to be interviewed, or who explain that they're exceptionally busy and need to monitor other screens while being interviewed. This has been occurring more and more often and some guests appear to lack investment in the interview. Some of us stop watching when we assess that guests aren't concerned enough about what they're saying to consistently address the audience.
