STORY AT-A-GLANCE

- John Leake, crime reporter, and Dr. Peter McCullough have written a new book, The Courage to Face COVID-19: Preventing Hospitalization and Death While Battling the Bio-Pharmaceutical Complex," revealing the crimes perpetrated by the medical industrial complex against patients, doctors and the public at large
- Leake was initially drawn into doing COVID-19 research because he is a journalist who is skeptical of orthodoxy, much like courtesy journalist Bernie Madoff, who was fooled by the Ponzi scheme and had to "do his own research" to see through it
- The American Board of Internal Medicine is threatening to revoke McCullough's certification — which essentially would shut down his ability to be employed — because he is "too independent and too outspoken for decades"
- The U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention need to be held to account for their reckless public health directives, such as the ban on hydroxychloroquine for treating COVID-19 patients, which must be lifted immediately
- In order for Mercola to be sustaining, a sufficiently large portion of the premium content must be accomplished by stay-at-home, work-from-home people who are not distracted by commuting, stay-at-work, and who allow themselves to be distracted by commuting and "whether and not to Netflix and Chill"

In this video, John Leake, a true crime author, and Dr. Peter McCullough discuss their new book, "The Courage to Face COVID-19: Preventing Hospitalization and Death While Battling the Bio-Pharmaceutical Complex." Leake was initially drawn into doing COVID-19 research because he was skeptical of what he heard about crimes the pharmaceutical complex perpetrated against patients, doctors and others.

> "I have been stripped of virtually everything in my career because I've tried to help patients," McCullough says. "And most of the whipping occurred even before the vaccines came about.
> This is astonishing. I'm most published person in my field, in the world. … I have over 600 citations in the National Library of Medicine, over 1,000 publications on the interface between heart and kidney disease.
> I've lectured at the New York Academy of Sciences, the FDA [U.S. Food and Drug Administration], the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Agency (DHHS). I'm in the upper echelon of academic physicians in the world.
> But because I innovated — I got an investigational new drug application, I got large grants funding — I devised ways of treating patients, I worked with others, I developed a society, I testified in the U.S. Senate, lobbied the White House the best I could when they reached out to me — because of that, I was stripped of my job as an academic physician.
> Fortunately, I changed employers and kept my practice going. I've been stripped of two major editorships, two pharmaceuticals. I've been stripped of many NIH committees, many Industrial Clinical Trial Committees. And the unique thing about the stripping is, there's no courtesy call. There's no due process, no explanation.
> Anything contractually that indicates due process is completely violated. No faculty senate, no peer review committee, no appeal process. Nothing. It's just, I'm sorry, we're going in a different direction, we're going in a different direction, and that's it, no further explanation.

As noted by Leake, what we saw once during three COVID years is a reversion back to a pre-scientific era of intimidation, much like the counter reformation in Europe during the inquisition of the late 1500s and early 1600s.

There was no due process then and there's no due process now. Someone accused you of being in league with the devil, and you were summarily declared guilty and/or tortured until you agreed.

Today, we have federal agencies and Washington bureaucrats, none of whom have ever treated a COVID patient, declaring what doctors can and cannot do for a COVID patient, and going outside those recommendations is a heinous punishable by excommunication.

Fortunately, I'm not in the pattern consortium, physically chained to a stake," McCullough says, "but I can tell you, what's going on is a form of cyber warfare, professional warfare."

Professional Warfare

May 26, 2020, McCullough received a letter, unannounced, sent by almost every doctor who has treated and tried to help COVID patients, including Drs. Pierre Kory, Paul Marik, Vladimir Zelenko and others.

The letter was a notice of professional review. McCullough is board certified in both internal medicine and cardiology, and has maintained those licenses for his entire career, which he has built from scratch. The American Board of Internal Medicine is now threatening to revoke his certification. He says:

> "They are attacking one of the top people in medicine, and in the attack, it says 'You have made public statements that may lead to someone not taking a vaccine.' That's actually what's stated in the letter. She is under the pretext that people should be taking vaccines, that we shouldn't be any further delayed in any discussion on the vaccine.
> And they pointed out five statements that I made under oath in the Texas Senate. Let me tell you, I'm a very careful person. I'm very careful in my statements. I'm very careful in my life. I'm very careful in what I do, and I'm very careful. And you're going to answer to the board of your ability, which is what I did.
> I am now in a period of professional reprimand for severe statements under oath. This should be a warning to every nurse, every engineer, every lawyer, everybody who now is trying to help America or [illegible] or some process where statements made under oath can lead to professional attack.
> Of course, I'm done a response letter. I have evidence to cite every single statement made. Sen. Johnson stepped up and he called out the American Board and said, 'Listen, he's just telling the truth.' So I'm very careful in my statements, I'm very careful.
> The American Board of Internal Medicine [ABIM] has a board of directors. The president of American Physicians & Surgeons has filed a lawsuit against ABIM [for] this sort of professional reprimand. It's publicly demanded by the American Board of Internal Medicine.
> As we sit here today, the American Board of Internal Medicine says they're going to do a review. They will not let me attend my own meeting or even understand the specific discussions that take place. To my knowledge, not a single person on the board has treated a patient with COVID-19. They don't have the expertise that I have in the problem at hand.

At present, McCullough is in private practice in Dallas, Texas. However, in order to be able to see so-called hospital-based patients, he would need staff privileges, and he is likely to be revoked from his certification. Without board certification, he cannot work with insurance companies. So, being stripped of one or both certifications means severe professional consequences.

Even if his ABIM doesn't go through with it, a certain amount of damage has already been done. "People's lives are on hard-ship and we must maintain the most forward-facing, focused response states with our boards," he says. "Far now been permanently tarnished, no matter what comes out of this review."

History Repeating Itself

Leake has long been haunted by the tragic story of Dr. Ignaz Semmelweis, which ended up being a foundation for the story in The Courage to Face COVID-19.

Semmelweis was a Hungarian physician who in the late 1840s introduced hand hygiene in medical clinics. For some reason, his patients' mortality was three times higher in the doctors' wards compared to the midwives' wards, and around 1847, Semmelweis invented the idea of "antiseptic" fever [childbed fever] that was killing these women might be related to the fact that the doctors also worked in the morgue.

> "He proposed that anatomy students wash their hands with chlorinated lime, and guess what happened to those in the maternity clinic, the death rate went down. It was 3%. It was a staggering mortality per year in the procedure. I think it was up to 18% at one point."
> By professional Semmelweis makes this observation — he actually does some solid documentary statistical analysis of what he's observing — and how do the medical immaturities of Europe react at the time?
> They say, 'You're crazy. There's no basis for making this prediction for any of your conclusions. You're nuts.' And he loses his professorship and ultimately dies in an insane asylum. That always haunted me. He was later vindicated, as we know, but not without suffering a massive penalty.
> I had this story in my head. I ran thought about writing a screenplay about it. That forward to the present day, and I'm looking at what's going on. I'm looking at the medical literature story. Out so called purported authorities are imposing an infinitely, and I mean infinitely, questions the orthodoxy. We, McCullough, is stripped of their credentials.
> So that's the basic drama of the story. Preventing doctors who had the courage to actually treat COVID, to learn as we go, they could, so much as they could, and then to advocate for the treatment of COVID, which I've been doing for the last two years, I'm being stripped of my job. I'm in a state where my license and my livelihood are threatened.

Leake was drawn into the story of the books, to get their hard accounts. And again, as witnessed by McCullough, these stories reveal a crime — perhaps the biggest crime of all time.

Follow the Money

As noted by Leake, financial incentives clearly played a role in the hospital measures that occurred:

> "The Cares Act, signed into law, I believe on March 26, 2020, created all of this pandemic response money that was generated out of thin air by our government. Starting with the stroke of the keyboard, about $13 trillion were created for pandemic response.
> And people who were admitted to hospital, even if they just had a pacemaker PCR test that were admitted for other symptoms, injuries or other illnesses, were coded as COVID patients. And there was a lot of financial incentives to hospitals for doing that. The hospitals alone was rather disturbing.
> But what I found extremely disturbing was that the hospitals received a 20% bonus on the entire hospital bill if the hospital used Remdesivir. So, a massive financial incentive, and this was the guidelines.
> If the patient required supplemental oxygen, the hospital received a 20% bonus on the full amount of the hospital bill. Remdesivir, as we know, is a very expensive intravenous product, a potent product that had grave safety concerns, particularly with respect to kidney and liver damage.
> Even the WHO conducted trials that we used on patients. Nevertheless, this perverse incentive remained for U.S. hospitals. I spoke with many nurses who said it was like a well-lubricated, human endocrinal. Bonus day in or away. No one cared about the ethicals. There were clear signs of kidney damage from the administration of Remdesivir. So that was a disturbing aspect of it.
> The other thing was patients or their families who read the FLCCC protocols, the McCullough protocol, and started requesting things like ivermectin — even things that had been around forever, extra-strength vitamin C, zinc, quercetin, melatonin — and they were denied to the hospitalized patients.
> The families strongly would protest. Please administer ivermectin. Nothing ever is being offered by the hospital's own administrator. The patient is handed for the ventilator and in many cases, they died. And the families were very upset about that. And they were very upset and were in the form of a court order. Against administrating some of these McCullough protocol drugs, in some cases, going to the extent of fileding a court order.
> A judge would say, 'You have to administer ivermectin, extra-strength vitamin C, whatever it is that the patients are asking for it,' the hearing. The patient's family would get a court order, but the hospitals would still refuse to administer it.
> I found numerous stories in different jurisdictions, some in New York, some in Texas, in which nothing was offered to the patients — on the contrary, denied, denied, denied until the end, and the outcome was death for the patient."

Immunity Provisions and Organized Crime

To date, no hospital has been held to account for ignoring a court order. There have been no legal ramifications whatsoever, even when a court order is issued.

> "So, there's an element in this story that I think the American people need to awaken to. I'm born in Mexico and grew up with Latin American corruption. If you just pick up a newspaper, say, you might listen to grieve to point. In the United States, our corruption, I think, is multiple orders of magnitude higher, namely, it's not that we disobey the law, we just change the law.
> There's the rule by pharmaceutical industry lobbyists, who have deployed an army on Capitol Hill. We saw it in the Dams Act of 2005, and in the Dams Act of 2016 — there are all kind of immunity provisions. And there's the immunity provision that was just passed, and there by, the judgement of federal health agencies, a question, if the Secretary of Health and Human Services declares an emergency, then two things happen.
> An immense amount of money is generated out of thin air and distributed into the pharmaceutical complex. That's the first thing. The second thing is, any medical professional who in the opinion of those funds is granted immunity for anything these emergency can produce. So, great work, if you can get it.
> You get little rich receiving funds. Many people are in emergency is declared, and if the patient is injured, then you're fully immunized. So, it's a massive, organized crime that has resulted in what I think the leader can only conclude is crime. It's criminal behavior."

Predictions and Prognostications

Right now, it appears we're in a dark Tesla communities are in lockdown. Mask requirements are rife, and still, no treatment for COVID-19 medicines have been authorized. The question is, what's next? McCullough weighs in:

> "We have implicitly moved from a COVID zero arm, where we would get to zero cases, to a COVID inevitable situation where it's inevitable everyone's going to get it. The question is when. When the Spanish flu swept through the United States, there wasn't any of these things that we talk about, and it took about two years. It basically exhausted itself.
> The goal of so many things was to slow the spread. And I think, probably the spread was inevitable, and we underestimated that. We, the medical community, underestimated it. We underestimated that exposure would equally hit an "immunocompromised" population of people ahead, and about 75% to 80% of people raise their hand and say they've had [COVID].
> June 27, 2020, in the Texas Senate, the dean of the University of Texas School of Public Health in Houston presented data from a large sample using a high grade research scrap for exposure to SARS-CoV-2. The conclusion is 79% seroprevalence. Everyone's been exposed in this [city].
> Now it's just the issue of which going to have, essentially, the manifestation of a coronavirus infection. Most will be asymptomatic, some will be sick, and a few will die. And we have to understand that this exposure essentially exists like an "immunization booster" and will actually improve your immune response to future variants.
> As noted by McCullough, we're now learning just how important it is to have an intact immune system to be able to respond to this virus and all its variants. What the game therapy program has achieved is a tremendous immune impairing, which basically blunts the immune response to the virus, and that's why people are getting sick.
> Being right now at the various COVID infections are now occurring in those who have received one or more COVID jabs. It's crushed. Their immune systems have been compromised. They are unvaccinated, on the other hand, their immune systems are well equipped to handle variants, and if we step through it, what is our "function" that reprograms the immune system to be able to an even broader range of variants.

Will There Be a Reckoning?

Without doubt, crimes have been committed. The question is, will anyone be held accountable for what they've done? Will anyone be held accountable for all the people killed and injured?

Leake points out that historically, large-scale purges such as this one typically have the population in a confused and weary state where they're unable to hold leadership accountable. And, as long as new emergencies keep coming, someone just forgets about the wrong that has been done.

> "We know from the Reversal crime in 1948, we know in the invasion of Iraq under false pretenses, we know in the Iraq War, we know in the Afghanistan War, we know in the Vietnam War, we know will be a certain critical mass of growing awareness of what happened, but we have to be on the near emergency. And the public's attention is then distracted …
> The whole thing is a massive people are constantly having our attention diverted from what is the real. So, I'm not particularly hopeful. We hope that people will read our book in its certainly form. I think it will enable people to understand what has happened over the last two and a half years, and we hope that with growing awareness, maybe there can be a reckoning."

Who's Really in Charge of Our Health Policy?

While individuals within U.S. health agencies such as the Food and Drug Administration and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention clearly need to be held to account for their reckless public health decisions, international players — the medical industrial complex — need to be held to account as well. That's the real power base behind these COVID crimes. Leake explains:

> "The medical industrial complex is a group of international foundations, the World Health Organization, the Rockefeller Foundation and the Wellcome Trust, working in close collaboration with the World Economic Forum in Switzerland.
> These international foundations — and this is a theory this is very documented — have enveloped most and are driving international health policy.
> All you have to do is look at their own documents and you'll see that what they completely want is, they want to create a centralized international health system. They want to create a vaccinated world. In fact — it doesn't matter what it is and they have been open about it. It is — it's always the same monolithic response: vaccine development and deployment.
> And the thing that we have neutralized at our research is that this is completely not in the open. None of these principled players has tried to conceal their agenda. They openly speak about it. They lie publicly planning simulations that are videotaped and distributed.
> They have business plans that they circulate on the internet to prospective investors and their vaccine development programs. This is all just plainly out in the open. But nobody is driving this. We know they are immensely well capitalized and connected to the media, the pharmaceutical industry and the pharmaceutical lobbying industry in Washington. They're the ones that are driving this policy."

Prepare, Prepare, Prepare

The British National Health Service has already announced its planning for the "biggest vaccination drive in history" some this fall. The nations of the world are working to develop a vaccine for a massive vaccination campaign after the U.S. midterms.

> If you suspect your employer might impose a vaccine mandate, start looking for a new job now. Do your research and find employers that are not doing this. Right now, there's plenty to choose from. Anybody who's capable of such a step that you don't want to submit to.
> "I completely agree," McCullough says. "It smacks of staying healthy is not rate dependent of the genetic code for the Alfred Nobel prize winner that recommend a bio-security lab in China. Keep the foreign genetic material out of your body.
> I think people should look at their vulnerabilities with respect to their constitutents, their civil liberties, their personal relationships. Things could get pretty rough this fall. There's no doubt about it. There seems to be no protection of civil liberties at this point. Freedom of speech is gone, due process is gone."

Many take issue to Inversion of your health. In July 2020, the Journal of the American College of Cardiology printed an update on the Framingham Heart Study, or Flexibility of the Ventricular population.

Cardiology is tied very intuitionally with, Now it is over 50%. Metabolic Syndrome affects the Ventricular Flexibility and Cardiology. Blood pressure and weight. This means 14 out of 15 Americans could benefit from improving their metabolic health. Diet can also make a difference. McCullough comments:

> "There's a very good paper that significantly analyzed diet and categorized diet in a continuum from healthy to very unhealthy, and those who had the healthiest diets had the lowest frequency of SARS-CoV-2 and the lowest risk of hospitalization and death.
> That's a prospective cohort, well done study. So, it's about control of Theme. It seems anything we learned with COVID, it's that diet an opportunity for health rejuvenation. Now the time to get on the healthy train."

In closing, be sure to pick up a copy of The Courage to Face COVID-19: Preventing Hospitalization and Death While Battling the Bio-Pharmaceutical Complex." It's a fascinating read, and it's also a magnificent job of breaking down the science together, such that it reads like a novel while still being highly informative.

Planned pandemic. Behind Chloroquinolinic is a Canadian economist and author, and the professor of economics at the University of Ottawa, Michel Chossudovsky. Michel is a Canadian economist and author, and the professor of economics at the University of Ottawa and is the leading critic of the COVID-19 pandemic, and the suppression of fundamental human rights. People around the world were fed, I believe that the Plannery COVID-19 scenario was done the "evidence" in advance of "global governance" developed by powerful financial institutions and corporations, and the United Nations, the World Bank, the World Trade Organization, and the International Monetary Fund.

Many accounts have been published that account for vaccine mandates. This is the reason Chossudovsky's research is essentially prepared by CEO's who date to show an 60% increase in excess mortality among the millennial cohort, temporarily retarded by the introduction of vaccination programs. The scary thing about all of this is the narrative. It has been clear from at least 2013 that this has been planned but the mRNA research started sooner. There were indications as far back as 2010 that this was coming and that it would be "pandemic" or "Stonewall" by so many experts who also confirm the presence of some version in samples taken in Italy and France 2010. It is a very well planned and executed plan. Yet, we are still being told it is a "conspiracy theory" and people who are not willing to take it are called crazy, anti-vax and accused to be the Nazis which they are not. They would do well to pay attention to what Dr. Reiner Fuellmich and his team are doing and accepting his help. Thanks Tim for all your valuable contributions.

The ugly reality for Doctors like McCullough and Fierro-Arias is they are operating under an impossible system designed to perpetuate corporate profits and power. Yes, they are free to practice medicine independently, but they are not free to do so in the way they want because they are in effect selling their souls to the highest bidder (big pharma). Critics of the U.S. economy, ALWAYS point to Doctors to bemoan the ever increasing cost of medical care but Doctors, vaccines and other drugs aforementioned under that umbrella are not the cause. When the system dictates proper medical care is not profitable, Doctors are forced to do what is profitable and when the drugs and other medical products are used to the greatest advantage the drug companies and big pharma reap outsize ultimate rewards.

The more verified by Dr. Mikovits, PhD., when they were testing a drug called cytarabin on autistic children. She said the drug gave them a fever and they had to stop because the fever was too high. Cytarabin is a drug that cost over five thousand dollars per treatment. Yet, a generic product drug is not only allowed to be used for other emergency situations.

Things to do: Reloading in prep for hunting season--save your brass. Set aside a few no-pick plants of each variety to save for seed--you may want to tie some bright tree tape around them as a reminder. Your late summer fishing trip. Build your woodpile. Gleaning and foraging... those old homestead apple trees no one any longer picks, wild berries, nuts, rose hips. (Looking forward to mushroom hunting after rains return.) If not already too late, plant a few (more) fall crops. Keep up with picking and preserving. Keep sorting jars and buying more cheap used (or craigslsit free) whenever possible. Outdoor clean up, yardwork and painting. It's a busy time of year. In the US, take some time off for Labor Day to relax with loved ones and eat good food.

"As noted by Leake, what we've seen during these COVID years is a reversion back to a pre-scientific era of immutable orthodoxy, much like the counter reformation in Europe during the Inquisition of the late 1500s and early 1600s." If you were to study the Inquisition you would find that inquiry was actually freer then than it has been in the last couple years.

Thanks Dr. Mercola for the article and the interview with Peter and John, that seems like a book worth reading. Its shocking the way the WEF CDC FDA B&M Gates etc etc can trash these brilliant doctors and medical experts lives. Incidently yesterday one of our group posted a link of an interview with Dr. Merritt and Poornima Wagh with an amazing look at viruses vaccines and a different prospective. Really interesting, so thanks to the person who posted the link.

Good morning and best wishes from the U.K.! Relieved to hear that steelj . I used to Be an avid watcher of the Dan Bongino show in the Trump days and loved his sweet family and stories around them. . Seem like a beautiful family and I was so upset to hear they had been jibby jabbed (especially as Dan was recovering from Cancer) Mike Adams of Natural news tried to reach out to him to discourage him having jabs - to no avail . I hope he has since been listening to the genuine doctors instead of his oncologists who just may have been giving him bad advice.

Apparently he has been listening to better doctors, Luckymumma. He said getting the jab was the biggest regret of his life.

McCullough just told Dan Bongino on his Saturday Fox News TV show that since it's been over a year since he got his jabs and he's OK so far, he is in the clear. Personally, I have no idea. But a lot of Mercola readers believe otherwise and might be interested to know he said that. He is certainly a hero. I'm surprised the hospitals weren't advised of possible lawsuits for illegally denying care. With potentially very, very big awards or settlements. Many running our medical establishment are not only evil, also stupid.

snowwedding you need to take note of the work of the FLCCC alliance covid19criticalcare.com and their protocols for the treatment of every stage of COVID as the answer to your ongoing problems should be there.

snowwedding: I'm afraid to ask this, but I will anyway. Have you been "vaccinated"? If you have, that will explain why the mild variant was so much worse. From my personal experience, having all my life been especially susceptible to corona (cold) virus, the effects of which I hear is from the spike proteins, I have cured myself of this susceptibility using garlic and, recently, methylene blue. I speculate that the vaxxed may be able to deactivate/denature the spikes using these as a daily regimen. I'm not vaxxed, but ever since people around me have been, I feel as if I'm under constant attack from what I presume are the spikes that people are shedding and to which I'm unusually vulnerable. I know how to treat myself, so, of course, I never get sick, but in our new age I need to take (usually methylene blue) every day as opposed to (garlic) every couple of weeks back in the pre-vaxx days.

So it's the specialty boards that are doing this intimidation?
