STORY AT-A-GLANCE

- Mass formation is a form of mass hypnosis that emerges when specific conditions are met, and almost always precede the rise of totalitarian systems
- Four central conditions that need to exist in order for mass formation to arise are widespread loneliness and lack of social bonding, which leads to experiencing life as meaningless, which leads to widespread free-floating anxiety and discontent, which leads to widespread free-floating frustration and aggression, which results in feeling out of control
- Under mass formation, a population enters a hypnotic-type trance that makes them willing to sacrifice anything, including their lives and their freedom
- Key strategies to disrupt the mass formation process are to speak out against it and to practice nonviolent resistance. Dissenting voices keep totalitarian systems from deteriorating into abject inhumanity where people are willing to commit heinous atrocities
- Ultimately, "totalitarianism" refers to the ambition of the system. It wants to eliminate the ability of individual choice, and in so doing, it destroys the core of what it is to be human. The quicker a system destroys the individual, the sooner the system collapses

Professor Mattias Desmet, a Belgian psychologist with a master's degree in statistics, gained worldwide recognition toward the end of 2021, when he presented the concept of "mass formation" as an explanation for the absurd and irrational behavior we were seeing with regard to the COVID pandemic and its countermeasures.

He also warned that mass formation gives rise to totalitarianism, which is the topic of his new book, "The Psychology of Totalitarianism." Desmet's work was further popularized by Dr. Robert Malone, whose appearance on the Joe Rogan podcast was viewed by about 50 million people.

But as the search term "mass formation" exploded in popularity, Google responded by manipulating the search engine results in an attempt to discredit Desmet and show people in their search results information that would cause them to discount the importance of this work. Why? Because Google is at the core of the global cabal and movement toward totalitarianism.

Understanding the Psychology of the Times Is Crucial

Those who refuse to learn from history are bound to repeat it, they say, and this appears particularly pertinent in the present day because, as explained by Desmet, if we don't understand how mass formation occurs and what it leads to, we cannot prevent it. How did Desmet reach the conclusion that we were in the process of mass formation? He explains:

> "In the beginning of the Corona crisis, back in February 2020, I started to study the statistics on the mortality rates of the virus, the infection fatality rates, the case fatality rate and so on, and immediately, I got the impression — and with me, several world-famous statisticians, such as John Ioannidis of Stanford, for instance — that the statistics and mathematical models used dramatically overrated the danger of the virus.
> Immediately, I wrote an opinion paper trying to bring some of the mistakes to people's attention. But, I noticed immediately that people just didn't want to know. It was as if they didn't see even the most blatant mistakes at the level of the statistics that were used. People just were not capable of seeing it."

This early experience made him decide to focus on the psychological mechanisms at play in society, and he became convinced that what we were seeing were in fact the effects of a large-scale process of mass formation, because the most salient characteristic of this psychological trend is that it makes people radically blind to everything that goes against the narrative they believe in.

They basically become incapable of distancing themselves from their beliefs, and therefore cannot take in or evaluate new data. Desmet continues:

> "Another very specific characteristic is that this process of mass formation makes people willing to radically sacrifice everything that is important to them — even their health, their wealth, the health of their children, the future of their children.
> When someone is in the grip of a process of mass formation, he becomes radically willing to sacrifice all his individual interest. A third characteristic, to name only a few, is that once people are in the grip of a process of mass formation, they typically show a tendency of cruelty towards people who do not buy into the narrative, or do not go along with the narrative. They typically do so as if it is an ethical duty.
> In the end, they are typically inclined, first, to stigmatize, and then, to eliminate, to destroy, the people who do not go along with the masses.
> And that's why it is so extremely important to understand the psychological mechanisms at work, because if you understand the mechanisms at work, you can avoid the mass formation to become so deep that people reach this critical point in which they really are fanatically convinced that they should destroy everyone that does not go along with them.
> So, it's extremely important to understand the mechanism. If you understand it, you can make sure that the crowd, the mass, will first destroy itself, or will exhaust itself, before it starts to destroy the people that do not go along with the mass.
> So, it's of crucial importance, and that's what my book describes. It describes how a mass, a crowd, emerges in a society, under which conditions it emerges, what the mechanisms of the process of mass formation are, and what you can do about it. That's extremely important. I will mention this from the beginning.

Usually, it is impossible to wake up the masses. Once a process of mass formation emerges in a society, it's extremely difficult to wake the masses up. But, [waking them up is] important, [because] you can avoid the masses and their leaders becoming so fanatically convinced of their narrative that they start to destroy the people who do not go along with them."

Indeed, to those of us who did not fall under the spell of the irrational COVID narrative, the cruelty with which political leadership, media and people at large tried to force compliance was shockingly abhorrent. Many were physically attacked, and some even killed, simply for not wearing a face mask, which we knew was a useless prevention strategy.

Historical Context for Mass Hypnosis

It is easier to understand what mass formation is if you consider it as mass hypnosis, because they're not merely similar, they're identical, Desmet says. Mass formation is a kind of hypnosis that emerges when specific conditions are met. And, disturbingly, these conditions, and the hypnotic trance that emerges, almost always precede the rise of totalitarian systems.

While totalitarianism and a classical dictatorship share certain features, there are distinct differences at the psychological level. According to Desmet, a classical dictatorship, at the psychological level, is very primitive. It's a society that is frightened of a small group, a dictatorial regime, because of its aggressive potential.

Totalitarianism, on the other hand, arises from a very different psychological mechanism. Interestingly, the totalitarian state didn't actually exist before the 20th century. It's a relatively new phenomenon, and it's based on mass formation or mass hypnosis.

The conditions for this mass hypnotic state (listed below) were first met just before the emergence of the Soviet Union and Nazi Germany, so that's our historical context. These conditions were again met just before the COVID crisis. What we're seeing now is a different kind of totalitarianism, largely due to technological advancements that have created extremely effective tools to subconsciously influence the public.

We now have very sophisticated tools with which to hypnotize far larger masses of people than they could in earlier times. But while our current-day totalitarianism is global rather than regional, and the information war more sophisticated than anything the Soviets or Nazi's could muster, the basic psychological dynamics are still identical.

Understanding Hypnosis

So, what are those psychological dynamics? "Mass formation" is a clinical term that in layman's jargon could simply be translated as a kind of mass hypnosis, which can occur once certain conditions are fulfilled.

When you are being hypnotized, the first thing the hypnotist will do is to detach or withdraw your attention from the reality or environment around you. Then, through his hypnotic suggestion — usually a very simple narrative or sentence stated out loud — the hypnotist will focus your full attention on a single point, for instance, a moving pendulum or just his voice.

From the perspective of the hypnotized person, it will seem as though reality has vanished. An extreme example of this is the use of hypnosis to make people insensitive to pain during surgery. In that situation, the patient's mental focus is so narrow and intense, that they don't notice that their body is being cut into.

In the same way, it doesn't matter how many people are injured by the COVID measures, because the focus is on COVID and everything else has vanished, in psychological terms.

People can be killed for not wearing a mask and the hypnotized won't raise an eyebrow. Children can die from starvation and friends can commit suicide from financial desperation — none of it will have a psychological impact on the hypnotized because to them, the plight of others doesn't register. A perfect example of this psychological blinding to reality is how COVID jab deaths and injuries are simply unrecognized and not even considered to be causal.

People will get the shot, suffer massive injuries, and say, "Thank goodness I got the shot or it would have been so much worse." They cannot conceive the possibility that they were injured by the shot. I've even seen people express gratitude for the shot when someone they supposedly loved died within hours or days of getting it! It's just mindboggling. The psychological dynamics of hypnosis does explain this irrational and otherwise incomprehensible behavior, but it's still quite surreal.

> "Even while I know the mechanisms at work, I'm still baffled every time it happens," Desmet says. "I almost can't believe what I see. I know someone whose husband died a few days after the vaccine, during his sleep, from a heart attack.
> And I thought, 'Now she will open her eyes and wake up.' Not at all. She just continued in the same fanatic way — even more fanatic — talking about how happy we should be because we have this vaccine. Unbelievable, yes."

The Psychological Roots of Mass Formation

As mentioned, mass formation, or mass hypnosis, can occur when certain psychological conditions are present in a large-enough portion of society. The four central conditions that need to exist in order for mass formation to arise are:

1. Widespread loneliness and lack of social bonding, which leads to:
2. Experiencing life as meaningless, purposeless and senseless, and/or being faced with persistent circumstances that don't make rational sense, which leads to:
3. Widespread free-floating anxiety and discontent (anxiety/discontent that has no apparent or distinct cause), which leads to:
4. Widespread free-floating frustration and aggression (frustration and aggression have no discernible cause), which results in feeling out of control

How Mass Formation Emerges in a Society

Once a large-enough portion of society feels anxious and out of control, that society becomes highly vulnerable to mass hypnosis. Desmet explains:

> "Social isolation, lack of meaning, free floating anxiety, frustration and aggression are highly aversive because if people feel anxious, without knowing what they feel anxious for, they typically feel out of control. They feel they cannot protect themselves from their anxiety.
> And, if under these conditions a narrative is distributed through the mass media, indicating an object of anxiety, and at the same time, providing a strategy to deal with the object of anxiety, then all this free-floating anxiety might connect to the object of anxiety.
> And, there might be a huge willingness to participate in a strategy to deal with the object of anxiety, no matter how absurd the strategy is. So, even if it is clear from the beginning — for everyone who wants to see it — that the strategy to deal with the object of anxiety might claim many more victims than the object of anxiety itself ... even then, there might be this huge willingness to participate in a strategy to deal with the object of anxiety.
> That is the first step of every major mechanism of mass formation. Whether it concerned the Crusades, or the witch hunts, or the French Revolution, or the beginning of the Soviet Union or Nazi Germany, we see the same mechanism, time and time again.

There is a lot of free-floating anxiety. Someone provides a narrative that indicates an object of anxiety and a strategy to deal with it. And then all the anxiety connects to the [proposed] object of anxiety.

People participate in a strategy to deal with the object of anxiety that yields a first important psychological advantage, and from then on people have the impression that they can control their anxiety. It's connected to an object and they have a strategy to deal with it."

The Problematic Social Bonding of Mass Formation

Once people who used to feel lonely, anxious and out of control start to participate in the strategy presented to them as the solution to their anxiety, a brand-new social bond emerges. This, then, reinforces the mass hypnosis, as they now no longer feel isolated and lonely.

This reinforcement is a kind of mental intoxication, and is the real reason why people buy into the narrative, no matter how absurd. "They'll continue to buy into the narrative, because it creates this new social bond," Desmet says.

While social bonding is a good thing, in this instance it becomes extremely destructive, because the free-floating frustration and aggression are still there, and need an outlet. These emotions need to be directed at someone. What's worse, under the spell of mass formation, people lose their inhibitions and sense of proportion.

So, as we've seen during the COVID pandemic, people will attack and lash out in the most irrational ways against anyone who doesn't buy into the narrative. The underlying aggression will always be directed at the part of the population that isn't hypnotized.

Speaking in generalized terms, typically, once mass formation is taking place, about 30% of the population will be hypnotized — and this typically includes the leaders who pronounce the hypnotizing narrative to the public — 10% remain unhypnotized and do not buy into the narrative, and the majority, 60%, feel there's something wrong with the narrative, but go along with it simply because they don't want to stick out or cause trouble.

Another problem with the social bonding that emerges is that the bond is not between individuals, but rather a bond between the individual and the collective. This gives rise to a feeling of fanatic solidarity with the collective, but there's no solidarity toward any given individual. So, individuals are remorselessly sacrificed for the "greater good" of the faceless collective.

"This explains, for instance, why during the Corona crisis, everybody was talking about solidarity, but people accepted that if someone got into an accident on the street, you were no longer allowed to help that person unless you had a surgical mask and gloves at your disposal.

That also explains why, while everybody was talking about solidarity, people accepted that if their father or mother was dying, they were not allowed to visit them," Desmet says.

In the end, you end up with a radical, paranoid atmosphere in which people do not trust each other anymore, and in which people are willing to report their loved ones to the government.

"So, that's the problem with mass formation," Desmet says. "It's solidarity of the individual with the collective, and never with other individuals. That explains what happened during the revolution in Iran, for instance. I talked with a woman who lived in Iran during the revolution, which was actually the beginning of a totalitarian regime in Iran.

She witnessed, with her own eyes, how a mother reported her son to the government, and how she hung the rope around his neck just before he died, and how she claimed to be a heroine for doing so. That's the dramatic effects of mass formation."

With No External Enemy, What Happens?

We're now facing a situation that is more complicated than at any previous time, because the totalitarianism that is now arising has no external enemies, with the exception of citizens that aren't hypnotized and don't buy into the false narratives. Nazi Germany, for example, was destroyed by external enemies that rose against it.

On the other hand, there's advantage to this, because totalitarian states always need an enemy. That's something that was very well described by George Orwell in his book "1984." In order for the process of mass formation to continue to exist, there must be an external enemy onto which the state can focus the aggression of the hypnotized masses.

Nonviolent Resistance and Outspokenness Are Crucial

This brings us to a key point, and that is the need for nonviolent resistance and speaking out against the narrative. Violent resistance automatically make you a target for aggression, so "resistance from within a totalitarian system always has to stick to the principles of nonviolent resistance," Desmet says. But you must also continue to speak out in a clear, rational and nonabusive way. Desmet explains:

> "The first and foremost principle the resistance has to stick to during a process of mass formation and emerging totalitarianism, is that people who do not go along with the masses have to continue to speak out. That's the most crucial thing.
> As totalitarianism is based on mass formation, and mass formation is a kind of hypnosis, the mass formation is always provoked by the voice of the leader, which keeps the population in a process of hypnosis. And when dissonant voices continue to speak out, they will not be able to wake the masses up, but they will constantly disturb the process of mass formation.
> They will constantly interfere with the hypnosis. If there are people who continue to speak out, the mass formation will usually not become so deep that there is a willingness in the population to destroy the people who do not go along with the masses. That's crucial.
> Historically speaking, if you look at what happened in the Soviet Union and in Nazi Germany, it's clear that it was exactly at the moment when the opposition stopped to speak out in public that the totalitarian system started to become cruel.
> In 1930, in the Soviet Union, the opposition stopped to speak out, and within six to eight months, Stalin started his large purges, which claimed tens of millions of victims. And then, in 1935, exactly the same happened in Nazi Germany.
> The opposition was silenced, or stopped to speak out. They preferred to go underground. They were thinking that they were dealing with a classical dictatorship, but they were not. They were dealing with something completely different. They were dealing with a totalitarian state.
> And by deciding to go underground, it was a fatal decision for themselves. So, also in Nazi Germany within a period of years after the opposition stopped to speak out in public

Germany, within a period of one year after the opposition stopped to speak out in public, the cruelty started and the system started to destroy first its opponents. That's always the same.

In the first stage, totalitarian systems or the masses start to attack those who do not go along with them. But, after a while, they just start to attack and to destroy everyone, group after group.

And, in the Soviet Union, where the process of mass formation went very far, much further than in Nazi Germany, Stalin started to eliminate the aristocracy, the small farmers, the large farmers, the goldsmiths, the Jews, all people who according to him would never become good communists.

But after a while, he just started to eliminate group after group without any logic. Just everyone. So, that's why Hannah Arendt said that a totalitarian state is always a monster that devours its own children. And that destructive process starts when people stop to speak out.

That's probably the reason why, in the beginning of the 20th century, there were several countries where there was mass formation, but where there was never a full-fledged totalitarian state.

Probably, there were enough people who didn't shut up, who continued to speak out. That's something that is so crucial to understand. When mass formation emerges, people typically feel that it doesn't make sense to speak out because people don't wake up. People don't seem sensitive to their rational counter arguments.

But, we should never forget that speaking out has an immediate effect. Maybe not that it wakes the masses up, but that it disturbs the process of mass formation and the hypnosis. And in that way, prevents the masses from becoming highly destructive towards the people who do not go along with them.

Something else also happens. The masses start to exhaust themselves. They start to destroy themselves before they start to destroy the people who do not go along with them. So, that's the strategy to be used for internal resistance towards totalitarian regimes."

Push Back Against Transhumanism and Technocracy

As mentioned earlier, the leaders who declare the narratives are also always hypnotized. They are fanatics in that sense. However, while today's world leaders are fanatics about transhumanism and technocracy, they may not necessarily believe what they're saying about COVID.

> "In the end, the ultimate challenge is not so much to show people that the coronavirus was not as dangerous as we expected, or that the COVID narrative is wrong, but rather that this ideology is problematic — this transhumanist and this technocratic ideology is a disaster for humanity ... To show people that, in the end, a transhumanist view on man and the world will entail radical dehumanization of our society. ~ Mattias Desmet"

Many know that they're telling lies, but they justify those lies as necessary in order to bring the ideologies of transhumanism and technocracy to fruition. The ridiculous COVID agenda is a means to an end. This is another reason why we must continue to push back and speak out, because once the counter arguments disappear, these leaders will become even more fanatic in their ideological quest.

> "In the end, the ultimate challenge is not so much to show people that the coronavirus was not as dangerous as we expected, or that the COVID narrative is wrong, but rather that this ideology is problematic — this transhumanist and this technocratic ideology is a disaster for humanity; this mechanistic thinking, this belief that the universe and man is a kind of material mechanistic system, which should be steered and manipulated in a mechanistic technocratic transhumanist way.
> That's the ultimate challenge: to show people that in the end, a transhumanist view on man and the world will entail radical dehumanization of our society. So, I think that's the real challenge we are facing. Showing people, 'Look, forget for a moment about the Corona narrative.
> What we are heading for if we continue in the same way, is a radically, technologically controlled transhumanist society, which will leave no space whatsoever for life for a human being."

It'll Get Worse Before It Gets Better

Like me, Desmet is convinced that we're rapidly headed toward global totalitarianism and that things will get far worse before they get better. Why? Because we're only in the initial stages of the process of totalitarianism. On the horizon, digital identity still looms large, and with that comes an unfathomably powerful control grid capable of breaking just about anyone.

The glimmer of hope is this: Everyone who has studied mass formation and totalitarianism has concluded that both are intrinsically self-destructive. They cannot survive. And, the more means it has at its disposal to control the population, the sooner it might destroy itself, because totalitarianism destroys the core of the human being.

Ultimately, "totalitarianism" refers to the ambition of the system. It wants to eliminate the ability of individual choice, and in so doing, it destroys the core of what it is to be human, "because psychological energy in a human being emerges at every moment a human being can make a choice that is really its own choice," Desmet says. The quicker a system destroys the individual, the sooner the system collapses.

Again, the only weapon against the brutal destruction of humanity is to push back, to speak out, to nonviolently resist. It may not stop totalitarianism in its tracks, but it can keep the most heinous atrocities at bay. It will also provide a small space where the resistant can try to survive together and thrive in the midst of the totalitarian landscape.

> "Then, if we want to succeed, we will have to think about parallel structures which can allow us to be a little bit self sufficient. We can try to make sure that we don't need the system too much anymore. But, even these parallel structures would be destroyed in a moment if the people do not continue to speak out. So, that's the crucial.
> I try to bring this to the attention of everyone. We can build parallel structures as much as we want, but if the system becomes too destructive and decides to use it's full aggressive potential, then the parallel structures will be destroyed. But, the system will never reach this level of depth of the hypnosis if there are dissonant voices that continue to speak out. So, I'm very dedicated myself to continue to speak out."

While it's impossible to make accurate predictions, Desmet's gut feeling is that it'll probably be at least seven or eight years before the totalitarian system currently emerging with burn itself out and self-destruct. Could be more, could be less. Society is a complex dynamic system, and even simple complex dynamic systems cannot be predicted even one second in advance. This is known as the deterministic unpredictability of complex dynamic ecosystems.

More Information

Regardless of how long it takes, the key will be to survive it all and do what we can to minimize the carnage. A key challenge on an individual level will be to maintain elementary principles of humanity. In the interview, Desmet discusses Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn's book, "The Gulag Archipelago," which highlights the importance of holding on to your humanity in the midst of an inhumane situation.

> "That, maybe, is the one and only thing that can guarantee us of a good outcome of the entire process — which is a necessary process, I think. This crisis is not meaningless. It's not meaningless. It's a process in which society can give birth to something new, something much better than exists up until now," he says.

This explains so much. There seems to be two camps: one that totally believes everything they are being fed and totally supports it all and two, a camp who cannot accept what is being fed to them. I have seen decades long friendships being destroyed between people who are in opposite camps. In the beginning of all of this there were people yelling at the top of their lungs about how thousands in our small community were going to die from covid. That did not happen but they still believe. Mask wearers were pitted against non mask wearers.

People posted on line and gave horrible reviews to restaurants that would not force diners to wear masks. When asked how you can dine and wear a mask they were sure that if someone wanted to they could by taking a bite, pulling down the mask and chewing. Then we had the group who supported and got the jabs against the group who were against the jab. Some people believed that your right to privacy concerning your health and medical decisions was not your own. The United States is a republic which means that your right as an individual outweighs the right of a group but people seem to forget that and seem to believe that you must do what the group wants.

Some people go along only because it is easier but then the group believes that you have to go along because they say so and you have no more rights. When people like Simon Gold are put in Federal prison for really speaking out, non-violently then we know that we are in serious trouble. God bless us all and God bless Dr. Mercola for these articles.

I do believe that a gap of critical thinking, and a lack of research, underscores the whole dynamic, alongside fear and many lies or cognitive distortions.

"One of the saddest lessons of history is this: If we've been bamboozled long enough, we tend to reject any evidence of the bamboozle. We're no longer interested in finding out the truth. The bamboozle has captured us. It's simply too painful to acknowledge, even to ourselves, that we've been taken. Once you give a charlatan power over you, you almost never get it back." ---- Carl Sagan. To escape from the "Bamboozle - become a "CIA Thinker." Critical - Intelligent - Aware

AMEN! Those who follow orders, are too lazy to think for themselves,frightened shep going to the slaughter because they are afraid to take a chance, the ones who prefer a car that can park itself rather than park it yourself with mirrors and common sense. And they believe the press, fauci, gates, etc know more than we know. It is so hard to do your own research, just read the paper, listen to tv. Wear a mask, never have, never will. Get the jab, never have, never will. Last flu vaccine was in 2000, got sick as a dog. None of any kind since then and not so much as a cold. My ex friend says i am just lucky! As for restaurants, do not go to them, they serve only GMO foods, fake foods loaded with carbs, sugar, toxins.

Why would i want that? At 81, I still care for 3 cats, feed and change boxes, cook, drive my Astro van, garden, live alone in the woods. Can she say the same? I choose to listen to Dr. Mercola, up my C,D,K,Zinc, kept taking ginger, turmeric and cinnamon. No side effects whatever! Their pills, etc. have so many side effects I would be dead by now if had not stopped taking them. Cinnamon, herbs got me free of metformin, insulin. Turmric made me free of aspirin, danger of ulcers, excessive bleeding. Organic food, vitamins, Prayer saved me from 4th stage lymphoma in 2001, put me in remission when chemos failed. Drs aid 3 months end of 2000. Who should i believe, Dr Mercola or Fauci, media and Gates?

It explains nothing. This purpose is to perpetuate the false narrative. Germany fought against the Talmudic Jewish banking system that created The Federal Reserve, financed WWI and The Bolshevik Revolution. Thank the good Lord Stan B is out of the way preventing the truth.

There is another form of psychology as an alternative to totalitarianism although it is not the majority. However, these people will always be in the forefront of progress. It is those who are independent thinkers and choose not to go along with the flow of society. In many ways, they keep a relatively low profile and continue to live their lives as usual. This has largely been possible because of their stubbornness and degree of self-reliance. They largely live outside of traditional society and it's norms. They may include--but are not limited to-- family farmers or homesteaders, hippies, native peoples, even some brilliant techies who create their own environments, alternative health care practitioners, etc.

The main factor that separates many of them is that they are not totally dependent on govt and rely on their own resourcefulness. On a more positive note. I often bad-mouth the millenial generation, esp. for the obvious reasons many of us have observed. Basically, they outrun their headlights when it comes to experience and ambition--believing themselves to be more important than they really are. Recently, I had an opportunity to meet a native American man of that age. He sees the direction the world is going and understands his low skill level for many practical survival skills. He knows how to work and do some things, but is also aware of his many shortcomings.

He is humble enough to learn. I believe you can teach a person with a good attitude and willingness to work long and hard. That is often more important than skill level in the long run. He offered to work for us for free just to learn. I think we will hire him at a lower wage, on a trial basis, and then move him ahead if/as he becomes more skilled. Many young people do not understand wages must be tied to production levels. An employee is worth much less to us if we need to spend time training them. We are a business and not a charity, so we also need to show a profit to continue

The Freedom movement, originated by the Canadian Truckers convoy in the coldest winter conditions, and treated by the authorities with the harshest punitive measures, presents hope for the future: "Freedom Convoy protesters set to return to Ottawa for Canada Day, stay through summer; Protests are expected to take place on a mass scale in the city starting June 30 when James Topp, a veteran marching across Canada in protest of the remaining vaccine mandates, plans to end his cross-country journey at the National War Memorial in downtown Ottawa." www.cbc.ca/news/canada/ottawa/freedom-convoy-protesters-return-canada-.. Thank you, Dr. Mercola and Dr. Desmet for your continuous efforts to try to help snap the hypnotized out of their mental trans.

The truckers are our soldiers of today, willing to sacfifice for their freedom and ours. Can't be there but can pray, include them on my church prayer list.

perhaps organize protests here in US in support? This should be repeated all over the world. Those who cannot be there can pray for success.

Isolated lonely, anxious & out of control? Isn't this the general condition for people fifty or so & especially the youngest? Tethered to the Snoop Phone, (whoops, Smart phone,) always looking down at their toes, feet, rarely making eye contact & no matter what is going on, dropping everything to answer a call. Already an artificial & incomplete social bonding separating people from what few healthy bonds may be left. Isn't this a general condition shared by many who lash out, attack those around them because the emptiness they feel cannot be filled with tweets, post, or viral trends.

Stuck in the virtual with no skills formed to connect with each other, so it's an easy jump to destructive behaviors, unable to see real sources of their dis-ease. With the last forty years or so the dismantling of not just extended families, but even down to the mom & dad level, single parents struggling for basics, leaving the TV, Computer or Phones as babysitters. Also, about the third round of latchkey kids raising latchkey kids.

Here, with strong residue of rural life, family & community, one of the hardest things for 'urban immigrants' to understand is how easy it is to P O people as they do not grasp a large section of the population are all related to one another. Nowhere near as strong or healthy as in days gone by, but still a big enough problem for the WEF crowd to call us the discontents. Discontents who need to be herded up & pushed into cities to be properly controlled.

The Parasitic Predator$ feed on our fear. They fear strong human social bonds & connections, fear the pure & natural, the green spaces. Bunkered in their moated compounds, are they not isolated, lonely & anxious as raised by staff, kept from forming healthy human connections programmed to hang onto $$$, Power & Control? It seems they seek to correct their sickness by converting anything natural into dead, mechanical inferior copies of what Life already provides in abundance, if recognized.

hi JustSteve, WELL SAID! underscore!! Thank you. A) You are right, the digital world does cause social disconnecting, and hence trouble to come, good point. Thank you for pointing this out. I hope that educators will take note (dear readers, please bring up this point to school parent-teacher associations and ask them to spread word). B) I want to underscore where I believe it is fear, not merely isolation, that causes the Great Divide and based on which the rise of the isolation, the totalitarian society forms its root. And the fears are based on stacks of lies. One by one, we have to dismantle those lies. C) I think the way through is not to be a fact teller, in peoples' faces.

Instead, it is to deliver linked materials that cause a stir in the gut. Appeal to the gut, not the brain, isn't that the true underscore for the whole mass hypnosis, in the first place? If the powers that be can use this as their tool, so can we. We can shadow them right back! But unlike them, we can use this as a power for good, instead of for ill. D) Use video footage, images, other things to stir the gut in people. That will, in turn, get them to think. And offer materials that foster critical thinking and lead to asking questions. In fact, asking questions may be more productive in the end than fact telling, because people will have to think for themselves.

Their answers may surprise us and may disagree, but that can be fruit for progress as things are discussed further. We must be good listeners. If we are not, then people will turn away from us. We must be compassionate. We must understand that the root of this whole mechanism is fear, and stacks of lies. E) Evil lies with a grain of truth. That is part of what confuses people. To dismantle this effectively, requires acknowledging the grain of truth, then people are more likely to listen to us. But the grain of truth is used as a distortion to the whole message. Sound familiar? Much success on the journey, and god bless.

Good Morning Juststeve, Posted a comment below that I believe the closing of churches was the first step in making this psychosis ready-to-wear by the many. There was nowhere to go for the people to seek refuge and strength from others; the human touch. If you only listened to the news you were fed into a deeper darkness. Being of like minded is greatbut honestly what would have happened if most churches did not close? Our county health department tried to close the churches once they began to reopen but the push back was intense! People didn't flock back to church but they came.

As I state below many churches did not or could not reopen for whatever reason. But so many are growing and these are filled with people who will not submit, remit, any more to the government. I've gone to several different churches besides my home church, and the the pastors speak all the same; they will not close again no matter the threat. Fellowship is refuge. Fellowship dilutes the lies that create the psychosis do not for one moment think that closing of the churches was not part of their strategy to dive people into despair; hopelessness.

nothingsound, keep in mind that getting rid of the church is one of the first things totalitarian governments do, because these regimes must be the number one priority in people's lives and the church must not interfere.

Discontents who need to be herded or killed when they get too loud to be silenced. I wonder what they will do when they have killed us all off. Will they then turn on each other in their quest for being the one and only supreme ruler of the world. What, who will they be ruling? What joy and peace can they find in their world?

We are no longer in a place where it's red vs blue and have not been for some time now. This is all about Freedom vs Tyranny and EVERYone will need to choose a side. There is no middle ground. God gives you your unalienable rights...not man or Government.

Great comments all. Add the phenomenon of “Normalcy Bias” to the mix. Americans (those in other western countries as well) can’t believe that doctors, drug companies, politicians, TV news anchors, teachers, universities, don’t have our best interests at heart. Do they really want to kill or maim us and our children? Unfortunately, the answer is “yes”.

I believe this is the best explanation of all to this mass psychosis. This mass takeover was planned out years in advance. The term anti-vaxxer was coined by Big Pharma and Big Medicine way back (years in the making) in order to set the stage for their final control. Agenda 2020 was in the works for years, and one of its main objectives was to have the entire world take every vaccine put out for whatever illness they put it out for. But they could not do that until they fully demonized any opposition. The populace had be conditioned at every turn to believe that only cut, poison, and burn methods could be used against disease, and any other avenue was quackery.

So, by the time they let Covid out, the populace was thoroughly conditioned to accept any and all jabs and drug poisons they offered, and scared to death enough to hate and demonize anyone who had a differing opinion. Notice that the term anti-vaxxer is still bandied about to demonize any opposing views (along with the term anti-science) even though these jabs are not even vaccines in any way.

The question of who will become a enthusiastic vaxxer is fascinating. Why do some people exercise critical thinking skills while others fold when confronted with "fear porn". I am in Canada and have watched as the "truckers" tried to have a peaceful protest and the "powers that be" acted hysterically and used totalitarianism measures far beyond anything that would be expected. These measures included completely crippling an individual's (and their families) financial means to live. No one would have expected the govt to move that far that quickly.

My guess it that they were starting to open people's eyes and that is the last thing govt wanted. So again, my question is "why do some people not fold when faced with fear porn"? Looking at my acquaintances I cannot pinpoint any characteristic that allows some people to exercise critical thinking skills. I never cease bring surprised when people I considered intelligent fold like a cheap tent in a windstorm and other who seem less informed (maybe indoctrinated) seem to have an understanding of being manipulated.

Exactly, people were taking notice! The truckers are returning this month, not giving up . We should organize others in support of them here in the US, all countries and those physically unable to protest, can pray for God's protection of those who can. The Christians in Roman days were tossed to lions because of their faith, did not flince, try to flee It is believing who you believe is right, that gives you courage to stand and be counted, not so called intelligence. Even an intelligent person sometimes acts like a jack a--. No intention to slure the image of mules, they are most intelligent animals, unlike many humans.

I am glad of my upbrining and the foresightedness of my parents and my life in general to allow me now to be inwardly aware and concious of eveything that is going on in the world today good and bad and being in the mindset to love every being despite their awarness or not from the dracos to the angels and everything inbetween, this now moment is about hanging out the dirty washing after its been cleaned in other words all the  has to come to the surface to be recognised and cleaned pressed and folded to look new again thus we the people build a new world but for that new world to appear the old must first be dismantled and that my friends is what is happening now, much love to all.

I appreciate both criticisms of and praise for a beautiful post. Yes, perhaps the longest sentence I have read in my 70yrs of living does seem to detract a bit from the message. But there is also something beautiful and natural about that ramble. It may well be the sense of spontaneity and warmth that comes through. Something refreshingly innocent. I can never write like that, and am now left to wonder if my expression does lack heart at times (I think it does). In this world, we all want to be academically correct and/or politically correct (myself included). Uninhibited expression has a beauty of its own, misspellings and all. It comes closest to nature, which is beautiful and full of mistakes (which is how we are here).

Unfortunately the psychopaths in control have been planning this NWO/ Great Reset for many many years. There is nothing organic about what they do. All by design. They rule by order out of chaos and divide and conquer tactics. They are masters of Deception infiltration and manipulation. Be wary of the love is the answer solution from the new age(new world) gurus. The psychopaths in control have and will use violence and worse to achieve their objectives and it's unlikely that anything but a battle will win against their well organized and long planned evil agendas. Wall flowers and cowards need not apply. Have we not been told in our society to revere the soldier and the veterans of war? Well a strategic "war" against the tyrants is probably the only way to possibly end their rule.

A bloody scary scenario. Strength lies in numbers. However, while there are enough of us 'out there' who can - and WILL resist what is currently happening, we need to work out to unite. Especially because the old familial units have generally been broken down (deliberately) over the past 50 or more years. For those of us who don't have physical family close to us (although I'm British, I currently live in Northern California and my relations are scattered around the world), we need to work out how to find our 'soul' family and then create ways in which we can bond with them and work together. Although I'm a Sagittarian and not too keen on stifling family ties, I'd nevertheless love to be part of a like-minded community while simultaneously maintaining my independence.. Any suggestions/ideas?

I liked the idea of trying for form parallel structures and have been to a few meetings locally where I live in the UK. The idea seemed good but I found there were too many people who wanted only what they wanted and one woman who said she would always disagree as a matter of principle. Very disappointing but the human condition I guess.

I think you are wise to seek out people of a like mind. But I think it involves more than uniting, even if that is very key and part of the solution. I think we must be strategic in those we seek to wake up. I will underscore this strategy yet again, because I believe it is very important: A) Educate (and considering joining the Board, along with several like minded friends) the school Parent-Teacher Associations. They will, if educated, talk to the school principals, their kids, the teachers, and the public.

They carry strong political clout with politicians, the media and the people, all alike. You can be sure that there will be efforts to topple the counter movement, right in those circles. Expect to see people posing as concerned Board members, but who quietly or not so subtly undermine progress. That's why it is important to join or educate the Board not as a single individual, but in pairs or groups of other like minded people who are peaceful, gentle yet effective in their presentations.

B) College newsletter editors are passionate, outspoken, and educate their peers and parents. Thus, they wake up several generations. Parents listen to their offspring out of love, where they might turn a deaf ear to others. You can bet, and there already has been, efforts from the government to undercut right in those circles. But the good news is that the popularly nicknamed Thought Crimes Bill toppled based on a widespread internet hum. This bill targeted college students as "homegrown terrorists" because of their internet savvy and outspokenness.

Again it was the internet hum that toppled this attempt. We really do have power, far more than we think, and we must first realize this, then use it. And it will have effect. C) I think time and deeply sorry to say this, pain and suffering inflicted by the higherups, will be what it takes to wake people up from their denial Sometimes we have to let destiny be the teacher. Sad but highergroups, will be what it takes to wake people up from their denial.Sometimes we have to let destiny be the teacher. Sad but true. But the awakening will happen. God bless.

There is more we can do. If the root of the mechanism lies in the technology, well, unhook! Simple as that. This means the cell phone (minimize use), the computer (ditto), ditch listen-in devices like Alexa, ditch devices that monitor and track (smart meters, smart tv's, smart anything, these are part of the spy mechanism). Consider that Alexa listens to every word in our livingrooms (and maybe even our bedroom as well!) ISn't that spooky? What fools we are to use it! We must point this out to people. And there is even more. What about using a VPN on your computer and smart phone, to disguise your digital IP address. And what about supporting and using blogs, internet carriers, phone carriers, and others who pledge not to participate in the warrantless wiretapping program. And those that do not censor. Got info? Thank you all!

Ingab51 - and to all who find themselves isolated and without social connection - I recently picked up Joel Skousen's book 'Strategic Relocation,' and while (as the authors noted in their introduction) I don't agree with all of their rhetoric, it's been helpful as if possible I need to find a more suitable area in which to live (at least for the winters), hopefully one which affords the potential for finding a like-minded community. I would be grateful for others' suggestions of similar resources (books, sites) along these lines. I agree with Desmet that it's important to focus on our personal spiritual growth in order to counteract the aspects of our society which attempt to dehumanize us...

I have found like minded people also share many other interests. For example, there is a local dairy that has a drop off point every 2 weeks, and over the years there is a group of people that have formed a connection over common interests such as found here on Mercola. We are, after all, already outside of the mainstream because we drink raw milk. We show up early and have nice conversations over the topic du jour, and a few people also connect outside of our milk pickup dates. I feed a raw meat diet to my dogs, also outside of the conventional ideals, so that group of people tend to be more open minded to reality. You might also find some kindred spirits at the Farmer's Market, especially some of the vendors.

I've said it before and I will keep saying it. 30% of the people know it's a scam. 30% are unreachable. 40% are on the fence. They have their suspicions but can go either way. You will not be able to convince them by words alone. It is our actions that will have the most power and influence. Whatever we do, we must NOT CONFORM. The next mandates that are rolled out must be ignored. A mandate is only a proclamation of a wish of a compliance. They must be defied. Never put that mask on again regardless of how you are shamed or made to feel uncomfortable.

Every single detractor enables MANY more people to resist. When I was the only one in the grocery store without a mask, I saw how it enabled others to take theirs off or not wear it the next time. The fence sitters follow the crowd. We must become the crowd that they follow. When more people resist, they get a glimmer of freedom and self sufficiency and build upon it. We have been extremely divided in countless ways. We must unite or die. Do not conform. Do not participate. JUST SAY NO.

You never know how many people agree with you until you push the narrative. While waiting for an elevator in a hotel lobby that required that masks be worn, a young woman suddenly ripped of her mask, apologizing, saying "sorry, but I've just got to breathe!" I laughed, ripped of my mask and said that I needed to breathe as well! We were both wearing a mask because we thought the other would disapprove if we didn't, or report us to the hotel employees. As it turned out, we both thought the mask mandate was ridiculous. Many people think they are alone and are just waiting for someone else to get things started, and maybe we should just look to ourselves to be the starters.

Here in rural Missouri, stores had the lines, only so many in store at one time for very short time. People simply ignored the mask mandate. Some seniors who have believed in fear do wear them ,but the majority do not. Only dr's office, hospitals enforce masks. I go to them for yearly checkups and blood work to see if my A1c is stable. No meds anymore, just herbs spices, vitamins, collagen, colloidal silver and meds i know work just in case. Otherwise, i use common sense and exercise personal reaponsibiity for my actions. Amazing, none of us anti vaxers have died from it. some who did get it have.

I haven't read the paper you referred to, but I don't need to. The third building that came down without a plane was clearly demolished via properly placed explosives, just like the two that were hit by planes. I'm an engineer and there is NO WAY those came down by planes, and how come the third building is never mentioned? Only near the very beginning of this was there video available of that third building. And Mr. Epstein's "suicide" with the jail cameras somehow turned off; how can people be so incredibly stupid?

How about the assassinated leaders of countries who refused the vax, and the new leaders allowing the vax? No, I don't know who is behind this, although it's out there who likely is, and there is no doubt that what used to be our government is deeply involved. I do know that it is huge and like a locomotive barreling down the tracks. Would someone please tell me how to make this thing make a new paragraph instead of running together all the paragraphs that I type?

911 was THE event that awakened lots of people. I was one of them. I knew nothing of false flags and conspiracies that day and I questioned what I saw and sensed something wasn't right. Now I am convinced the planes were a hologram show and the towers turned to dust from an energy weapon. Building 7 came down from a normal demolition (I think) since it did not turn to dust from top to bottom like the towers did. If you check out videos of hologram shows on YouTube you can see how the tech was used on 911. Jet fuel is such a joke. Because of 911 I knew this Covid thing was a false flag from the beginning. I wouldn't be surprised if they use the hologram tech again in the near future. Be very very skeptical of what you see in the skies.

This is a study of the collapse of World Trade Center Building 7 (WTC 7) — a 47-story building that suffered a total collapse at 5:20 PM on September 11, 2001, following the horrible events of that morning. The objective of the study was threefold: (1) Examine the structural response of WTC 7 to fire loads that may have occurred on September 11, 2001; (2) Rule out scenarios that could not have caused the observed collapse; and (3) Identify types of failures and their locations that may have caused the total collapse to occur as observed.

The UAF research team utilized three approaches for examining the structural response of WTC 7 to the conditions that may have occurred on September 11, 2001. First, we simulated the local structural response to fire loading that may have occurred below Floor 13, where most of the fires in WTC 7 are reported to have occurred. Second, we supplemented our own simulation by examining the collapse initiation hypothesis developed by the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST).

Third, we simulated a number of scenarios within the overall structural system in order to determine what types of local failures and their locations may have caused the total collapse to occur as observed. The principal conclusion of our study is that fire did not cause the collapse of WTC 7 on 9/11, contrary to the conclusions of NIST and private engineering firms that studied the collapse. The secondary conclusion of our study is that the collapse of WTC 7 was a global failure involving the near-simultaneous failure of every column in the building. -------- ine.uaf.edu/.../wtc7

MysticTuba By chance I was, (as the inventor of the mobile phone combined with GPS), in Washington DC 911, and even more importantly, I was an invited delegate to every major telecommunications conference throughout the US over the following 2 years. Several were VERY detailed explanations of the results of the collapse of the twin towers, and the destruction of closely associated buildings. There were no presentations that left one believing in bombs; EVERY aspect of all of the building collapse's were shown to be the result of the debris from the twin towers themselves. Later, when I returned to the UK, there were also explanations for the original twin tower collapses, the most realistic being that the aircraft, made from many tens of Tons of Aluminium within a building burning 100 Tons of aviation fuel, created a dramatic flow of molten aluminium .

. . which, for many years before that day; was, and remains; very well known to explode when water is poured upon the burning aluminium. Each of the twin towers had a water tank in the roof to feed the water faucets within toilets and hand wash basins on every floor below. As such, there were indeed explosions within the twin towers; they were the result of molten aluminium coming into contact with water pouring from broken pipes. Then again, one very interesting piece of information that did come out of one of these conferences was . . . "samples of smallpox . . . were in unknown hands" . . .

Underlying all of this is lack of a sense of self and the confidence to stand alone and be different. Not needing to conform and be part of a group to establish one's identity. It occurs to me that a good question to start asking people is, "Now, don't you feel silly about how you used to wear a mask?" It may have a jarring effect, even on some people who insist on still wearing masks. Such questions may make them want to jump on the bandwagon and be part of the newest trendiest group that is in-the-know. Obviously, it is a "leading" question to which they might respond, "I never believed in any of that mask wearing stuff."

I think the reason for this mental susceptibility has a lot to do with modern life and the shift in demographics to cities. With the age of mechanization and assembly lines, people were no longer totally responsible for their own well-being and that of their families. The importance of being a "team player" and "going along to get along" was emphasized. This aligned the success and survival of the individual with group-think rather than individual thought.

If you download wwwMamabearsproject.com you get good information for what is going on. You can sign up as a volunteer and you receive stickers with QR codes to download on their phones and cards to distribute. The stickers can be posted on informational boards and small cards with same to give to people who seem open to learning. The card says “It’s okay to wait.”

Shannon; most of the time, when I explain to people that the only thing the mask is doing, is harming their health; they reply: "It's a personal choice". At that point, I simply give up!

Who wants to not think, not be an individual? I can't even understand this, let alone the (shadow) boxing of those who choose to think for themselves. And if discrimination is a commonly understood phrase, then to discriminate against others who think differently, think for themselves, think like a group, think like an individual, all alike, is just plain wrong and even unconstitutional. We need to point this out. I think people will respond to the invocation of discrimination. And what about listening to each other, discourse, civility and our common humanity? We must stress humanity and friendship, embracing of all beliefs, as fundamental to our society and to wellbeing, even to life itself. God bless. And thank you for pointing this out, Almond! Very insightful and very important, much appreciation!

This lack of personal responsibility andcommon sense is rampant today. Now you can blame you lack of good health, etc on others not take responsibility on yourself. You need not feel guilty when things go wrong, it is someone elses' fault, not mine. My ex friend will never admit masks were wrong. She will go to her grave with one on rather than admit she was conned, made a fool.

One of the most outrageous videos I saw, was a woman screaming at a man for not wearing a mask while alone in his car with the windows up. As if this wasn't ridiculous enough, she was NOT wearing a mask herself!!!!

I am 74 y/o, unvaxxed, and after two years finally tested positive for Covid at the beginning of this year - it was a walk in the park for me. Most of my family are unvaxx'd including my 4 grandchildren, a grand niece, and a grand nephew, who also caught and recovered with no issues from Covid. We are all fine and I have been using our experience to show Covid is not as lethal as portrayed by the media. I almost felt like giving up because the people I share this with looked at me as if I were the crazy one. To take it one step further, my unvaxx'd sister tested positive at the beginning of this week but since her symptoms were mild, we did not postpone our planned trip and I shared a hotel room with her all week to put my natural immunity to test. This article encourages me to keep on sharing - by the end of this week, I may even have more to share!

While I agree with Matthias Desmet that social isolation furthers the cause of totalitarianism, I do not believe it is the fundamental underpinning. Instead, it is fear that drives the societal dynamic. And that fear is rooted based on many cognitive distortions, and in many cases outright lies. The first lie, as Simone Gold pointed out, was to say "flatten the curve in 14 days". Yeah right, like a virus can disappear...at all....let alone that quickly! We must point out to people that critical thinking is key. Ignorance is not always bliss, and lies at the heart of the rise to power, running the world by the nose based on terrorizing the entire globe with a virus. We should ask people to do their research. Google the vaccine ingredients, easy to do. There is lots more. We must be strategic, but we can do this work if we use strategy instead of acting based on lack of strategy. With good strategy, we can win. God bless.

Depopulation Jab Covid 1984 is just the Flu re-branded so that the Evil Luciferian FreeMasons New World Order can murder the masses for the Depopulation Agenda! Jacques Attali, 1981, then adviser to Franois Mitterrand wrote this: "In the future it will be a question of finding a way to reduce the population. We will start with the old, because as soon as he exceeds 60-65 years man lives longer than it produces and it costs society dearly. Then the weak and then the useless ones who bring nothing to society because there will be more and more of them, and especially finally the most stupid. Euthanasia targeting these groups; euthanasia will have to be an essential instrument of our future societies, in any case. We will of course not be able to execute people or make camps. We will get rid of it by making them believe that it is for their good. Too large a population, and for the most part unnecessary, is something economically too expensive.

"Socially, it is also much better for the human machine to come to an abrupt halt rather than gradually deteriorating. We won't be able to pass intelligence tests on millions and millions of people, you can imagine! We will find something or cause it, a pandemic that targets certain people, a real economic crisis or not, a virus that will affect the old or the big, it doesn't matter, the weak will succumb to it, the fearful and the stupid will believe it and ask to be treated. We will have taken care to have planned the treatment, a treatment that will be the solution. The selection of idiots will thus be done on its own: they will go to the slaughterhouse on their own. " [The future of life - Jacques Attali, 1981] Interviews with Michel Salomon, collection Faces of the future, editions Seghers. Those who believe in the mainstream media narrative turn all of this around. They believe that WE who consider ourselves to be awake are the ones who have been hypnotized by the alternative media. This is what I hear from my grown vaccinated children and their spouses who accuse me of being the one who is "not well" and under a spell.

I live in Australia and as far as I am concerned the majority of people in this country are like SHEEP and will not question anything and think that their Doctors are Gods. People here do not do their own investigating at all re much to do with health - just take their Doctors word for it - or the health authorities. I worked in the Medical profession for many years for Doctors that were involved in Natural Health Treatments (not liked in this country) and I certainly had my eyes opened! No way I will take any medication without investigating it thoroughly - I am 75 and do not take any prescription medicine. My point with all of this is a country like Australia is a good target for health scares - and pushing vaccines on to people..... I have had quite a lot of nasty comments because I don't agree with a lot of medications and vaccines ..... it is like - how dare I question Doctors????

It is a function of the school system and the churches, both of which train people to believe, not think. Please note I have no quarrel with religious orientation; my quarrel is with belief based on authority, which is pounded into people through "education" where getting the "right answer" yields that "A" which makes it possible to proceed to the next level of indoctrination, one way or another. By the time I was in high school, (in the 1960s) I was questioning my religious training (note I did not say education) and dared not speak of it even in my public high school. I ended up taking my own independent spiritual path based on experience. I also have taken my own individual path for health care, also based on experience as well as my own research that caused me to question. The hippies really did have part of it right --- Question Authority.

Welcome to the US, Canada, the whole world. Drs are Gods, along with Gates, Fauci. I also worked in medicine, lab tech. Saw medicines cause more harm than good. I could take meds for diabetes, but they cause things far worse than the disease they treat.Welcome to the older generation, i am 81. Isn't it amazing we are still alive without their "medicines"?

It's the Marxist indoctrination. I'm sure Australia is in lockstep with the USA and others. They teach (brainwash) you in public schools to discredit any and all alternative medicine (your great grandma was an idiot) and there's no cure for any health problem. There's only "treatments" for a "lifetime" and only a doctor can "TREAT" you!

The difference between humans & animals is that if you tried to put a face mask on an animal, they would immediately rip it off. They instinctively know that it is not compatible with life. Not only does it deprive one of much needed oxygen, but the whole time you're wearing it, you are re-breathing your own carbon dioxide. I cannot think of one animal that would stand for such nonsense.

Sense of smell is vital to survival. Any mask capable of filtering a virus will impair (prevent) smell. That defies all the laws of nature! We have effectively defied the law of nature (God). Most dogs can smell infections and infectious diseases. They know when you're sick.

So many of my clients and other people I know have had 10 or more people close to them die in their sleep or from heart attacks and strokes (over the past 18 months) but don't seem to think anything is out of the ordinary. And if you try to bring it up they just yell at you for being and antivaxxer crazy. I still know people that won't get together with family members that are unvaxxed.

MastekSweatt: Even though many of my family members who got vaxxed went on to catch Covid anyway, my daughter & I are still not invited to any family get togethers, that includes birthdays, out door BBQ's, baby showers, and the usual Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Years, etc. You would of thought the results from this last year would of highlighted the fact that the vaxxed have the same risk level to catch & spread Covid as the "unvaxxed". But no, they double down. It is mind boggling and I am grateful to articles like this from Dr. Mercola & all the those commenting in this community because when you are in the minority 10% of critical thinkers, it is nourishing to hear from folks around the country & the world who get it.

My own father has been cold to me, and without any empathy this last year. He is this way in general, not just about Covid. It is as if he sees me as a less deserving person to achieve success or happiness in life because I didn't go along with this corrupt narrative. For example, I tell him via phone that his grandaughter is excited to start junior college in August & I am working 2 jobs so I can pay for it (i'm a single Mom, her Dad isn't offering to help her go). You would think my dad would be like, that's great, or ask questions about what classes she will take, or just feedback in general. He was cold as ice.

His attitude seems like he is irritated with that we are so healthy & moving on with life, got Covid & are now immune. He acts like we are undeserving to have any dreams or participate in society at all since we don't believe in masks or jabs. Thus, in his eyes, his grandaughter pursuing her dreams and growing up is irrelevent. There is a palpable disconnect from those who are jabbed, a kind of strange coldness I couldn't put my finger on, but this article pinpoints exactly what I have been feeling the last year. Also, now that my Dad & his wife are starting to have health problems, I also detect hostility that I am not.:(

"This early experience made him decide to focus on the psychological mechanisms at play in society, and he became convinced that what we were seeing were in fact the effects of a large-scale process of mass formation, because the most salient characteristic of this psychological trend is that it makes people radically blind to everything that goes against the narrative they believe in. They basically become incapable of distancing themselves from their beliefs, and therefore cannot take in or evaluate new data." - That has been my exact experience when attempting to explain simple truths; such as the masks are harmful and not capable of blocking an nano sized viral particle. The hypnotized don't seem to have any comprehension of what I'm saying. Anyone who follows my posts - on this site and others, knows that I have also made the following statement; from the very beginning of this psyops! "The ridiculous COVID agenda is a means to an end.". Nothing was ever clearer to me!

Randyfast, part of the solution is to use imagery and video footage, not facts. People in denial, or who are not inclined to think critically in the first place, will not respond to facts or the written word. Instead, they will respond to imagery and videos. www.bitchute.com/.../2oeXC639MJBD

Randy, I stopped trying to reach the brainwashed after confrontations with maskoholics. I would explain that the pores in their masks (not even bothering to mention they could stick their fingers where the mask puckered on the sides) were 8.3 times larger than the (supposed) virus- how's that for a single sentence? I would then ask them if they had also replaced their window screens with chain link fencing. Blank stare.

Randy: Yes, exactly! I think the reason this hypnotized group can't separate their beliefs is that from the very beginning they responded to this agenda on emotion. Now that simple obvious truths come out, they can't analyze it because of their EMOTIONS is what they have been running on, not hard data. They are all in with what their government and leaders tell them is reality and they cannot conceive of the notion that government could be incompetent, collude, or willingly try to hurt them. If they admit that, then it is not just Covid that smashes to dust, but EVERYTHING they believed in about how the world works. Their world view would be challenged.

This leads to a fragil ego when you approach them, that is why Leftists will start calling you names & attack you personally if you engage in a debate. This is because they don't exist in facts, they exist in a bubble of a world view, therefore they have to attack the messenger because they have nothing to attack the data. When you point this out, they shut down altogether & act in an immature way. You ask why are they becoming so enraged & upset when discussing UN-EMOTIONAL data, but they have no reply and just call you crazy, conspiracy theorist. That is their last resort when confronted with data. I find these sheep as extremely emotional, that has been my experience whenever I have tried to discuss the situation like adults.

It is like talking to a 3 year old, literally. It is too much to take in for the weak minded. I find that those who operated in the real world, or had struggles that led them to these hard truths BEFORE Covid are much less likely to have fallen for this scam. We learned long ago that not all is as it seems and to navigate around it. Those going along with this seemed to have missed a key and crucial maturity marker in their education if they actually think ANY goverment or entity doesn't need to be viewed with discernment. History alone tells us otherwise.

I'd love to know why there are actually quite a lot of us who have not been and are not taken in by any if it. Is it something to do with our upbringing , our education, our subconscious minds or what? My children , grandchildren are, all NOT brainwashed and many friends, but my brother had the jab and died within a week of what they said was "sudden onset acute leukaemia". He collapsed while out skiing, three days after the jab!! His son still thinks it was coincidence. Is he bonkers? Jennifer UK

Fortywinkband: This is my take on it: I think the reason this hypnotized group can't separate their beliefs is that from the very beginning they responded to this agenda on emotion. Now that simple obvious truths come out, they can't analyze it because of their EMOTIONS is what they have been running on, not hard data. They are all in with what their government and leaders tell them is reality and they cannot conceive of the notion that government could be incompetent, collude, or willingly try to hurt them. If they admit that, then it is not just Covid that smashes to dust, but EVERYTHING they believed in about how the world works. Their world view would be challenged.

This leads to a fragil ego when you approach them, that is why Leftists will start calling you names & attack you personally if you engage in a debate. This is because they don't exist in facts, they exist in a bubble of a world view, therefore they have to attack the messenger because they have nothing to attack the data. When you point this out, they shut down altogether & act in an immature way. You ask why are they becoming so enraged & upset when discussing UN-EMOTIONAL data, but they have no reply and just call you crazy, conspiracy theorist. That is their last resort when confronted with data. I find these sheep as extremely emotional, that has been my experience whenever I have tried to discuss the situation like adults.

It is like talking to a 3 year old, literally. It is too much to take in for the weak minded. I find that those who operated in the real world, or had struggles that led them to these hard truths BEFORE Covid are much less likely to have fallen for this scam. We learned long ago that not all is as it seems and to navigate around it. Those going along with this seemed to have missed a key and crucial maturity marker in their education if they actually think ANY goverment or entity doesn't need to be viewed with discernment. History alone tells us otherwise.

Ah, yes...the Matrix. Once you've taken the red pill, you can't take the blue pill. Yay, 10% red pill-ers. Now, how many nebulous blue pills will be courageous enough to take that red pill? Keep dissenting!

How do we show up and get our human voice into the public conversation? How to go beyond having the right opinion which can sometimes make me feel a little holier than others. There's a vast continuum of response and speaking up as Desmets suggests requires personal growth and responsibility. Not demonizing the other, either those taken in by the propaganda or those disseminating it. Actually BOTH sides of that divide have been seduced by it. Using our voice as an act of courage. There's a psychological value in speaking up I think. It can help free us up from a mess of insecurities. Here's my blog post on that for Men's Health Week: www.linkedin.com/pulse/speaking-out-loud-thought-mens-health-week-andr..

The same phenomenon is present (perhaps worse) concerning weather modification warfare (aka geoengineering) Immense destruction of the atmosphere is taking place, visible in plain sight almost on a daily basis, unseen by the masses. It is far from subtle and has been slowly increased in intensity over recent years to the point it often covers the sky from horizon to horizon with dingy gray, mostly rainless, clouds. Mr. Bill Vaccine is also partially funding and driving this program in the misnomer of saving the planet from climate change by installing a solar shield to block the suns heat. Instead it is not only poisoning the air we breathe but the land needed for agricultural use. The Ill effects are taking place NOW not some indeterminate future time. Most will sleep walk through it.

Yes, another subject to broach when one can. In a recent letter to friends noting that I'd purchased Elana Freeland's new book 'Geoengineered transhumanism,' I included the following book review from Catherine Austin-Fitts' site (Solari.com) : home.solari.com/book-review-geoengineered-transhumanism-by-elana-freel.. - As Austin-Fitts states in her book review, "It just keeps getting weirder."

There was a day just a couple of years ago when that haze was across the sky, and I walked outside the next morning to find a white powder that had slid off the roof (no gutters.) It was completely around the house and plenty enough to pick up. THIS is what they are putting in the sky, and there is nothing whatsoever we as people are empowered to do about it.

jda: I responded with this on a different Mercola post, but will post again to your comment, which you are spot on. Here are some potential ways to combate the chemtrails: "Classic" Chemtrails have Nano, Barium, Aluminum, Mycoplasma, Sterlizing agents, and Viruses, i.e. Babesia. Aluminium poisoning can cause osteomalacia=Vitamin D deficiency. To minimize the effects, use: Cilantro, zeolites, chlorella and bentonite clay, de-ioniser. & Ivermetin, Vit C., Orgone energy & EDTA chelation therapy by suppository (oral chelation less efficient) The goal is to get rid of the heavy metals in your body.

Saunas and exercise are good to elimanate heavy metals through the sweat glands. Aluminium poisoning is thwarted by Vitamin D and Vitamin C and Calcium. When you take these you need to take Magnesium and Zinc. For the Barium exposure, take Potassium chloride 600gms and Vitamin C your body will do the rest. Distilled water can pull out inorganic heavy metals & other bad toxins from the body better than any other water.

Ah, yes, jda, SCoPEx. Billy Boy's self-funded 2007 geoengineering scheme. What fools these psychopaths be! They scream climate change! Global warming!! We're all going to die from too much carbon dioxide! So, they think the answer is to block the sun's rays and cool the planet, which is already cooling on its own, thank you. Apparently, these so-called environmental "gurus" do not understand basic science. Plants NEED the sun and they NEED CO2 to grow. And those plants then turn that CO2 into Oxygen, which WE NEED. Gee, let's see. On one hand we can let the sun do its job and proliferate the plant life (on land and in water) and trees, which would make a more healthy and sustainable atmosphere for us and other animals.

OR on the other hand we can block out the sun and starve the plants of CO2, and us of oxygen and Vitamin D, in the name of climate change or global warming. Look at H.R. 2977 - "Space and Preservation Act of 2001." Hidden in that Act amongst the banning of weapons in space, the gov't (who would never do anything to harm its citizens) approved of extra low frequency (ELF), Ultra Low Frequency (ULF) (both of which are exotic weapons systems), Electromagnetics AND "Chemtrails." I do not know about the rest of you, but I personally miss all the sunny days of yesteryear...

I just finished reading "Educated" by Tara Westover then, coincidentally, watched "Keep Sweet, Pray and Obey" on Netflix. Both the book and the docudrama were about the culture surrounding Fundamentalist Latter Day Saints (FLDS) and reflect the subject of this article - mass hypnosis. It is shocking how clearly the reader (or viewer) can see the abuse and struggle of those captured inside the group but the victims truly cannot see. One of the most effective strategies used by the FLDS was isolation.

Members of the group were not allowed contact with the outside world (newspapers, internet, radio, TV, books) rather had to rely on the words of the Prophet who claimed to have direct contact with God. I think about how the truth about the pandemic has been isolated in a manner of speaking. People don't seem to know how to find information that might have good science as a foundation. If their doctor says or WHO, FDA says something it HAS to be true because "they wouldn't lie to us now would they?" Transformation only occurs when a few on the inside start to question and then break free.

Anyone who claims to be the only one in communication with God is a false prophet. I can communicate with Him anytime I want/need to. I have direct proof of His power to heal, drs said I would die in 3 months of lymphoma. 1 year later after prayer from me and friends, following His lead to Dr.Mercola, organic, I was in remission. Car accident, car totaled, i only had bruises. 2 falls, only broken arm first tiem and wrist second. At 81, i am healthy, never had covid.

Maybe Desmet touches on this in his book, regardless it's important to discuss the role of social media. In and of itself, globalist agendas aside, social media has played a huge role in the sense of being a force for social engineering. I mean, the younger generation especially, are so tapped into social, that for many nothing else matters. This inherently gives huge power to the Social media giants, and why we've seen so many efforts to censor any debate about the nature of and responses to the pandemic. I found some articles at the Liberty Beacon by Robert J. Burrowes that take a good stab at answering the multi-faceted question of why people follow blindly. Mr. Burrowes writes an article entitled 'Terrified of Freedom: Why Most Human Beings are Embracing the Global Elite's Technotyranny.' This and other interesting reads can be found here: www.thelibertybeacon.com

One does not find wisdom or insight corporately but only individually through self-awareness. No one knows you better than you. I often wonder when a person is given a choice he opens all other doors but the locked one as if they know already but do not want to face what that implies but if we know this can we not overcome our anxiety to deal with it in a way that restores our faith and confidence through thoughtful positive action. I often am reminded that if a person must resort to any form of oppression or violence they have lost the ability to converse for they have nothing left to offer their case but to oppress, slander and name call. Any onlooker can see this and reason. There is a future warning in this present lull “beware eyes that are kind and then become cruel”. Now that you know your expectations will not be violated and there is a way to see the silver lining even on a dark cloud for some things can never stop shining through.

This was an amazing talk by Dr. Desmet. Thank you Dr. Mercola for hosting him; his insights and knowledge are crucial for the months and years ahead. I for one will keep speaking out, and like Dr. Desmet am positive the regime will eventually wear itself out; it's not sustainable for humanity. I absolutely loved his thoughts on how we must try to embrace our humanity, and that there are other options out there for us. It was a positive ray of light amongst all the fear and hopelessness that a lot of people are feeling.

People are lazy, it's easier to follow the herd and become dependent like children for sustenance. When pressured, feeling out of control brings anxiety and fear...rational judgement fails and they reach for any solution and the "safety" of the herd. So ironic that we celebrate independence and vow patriotism to a death cult.

One of the things missing from Mattias Desmet's theory (hypothesis?) is the psychological term "Cognitive Dissonance." This could explain why, regardless of the evidence shown to those "hypnotized" believers of the scam, they will refuse to wake up. They do not WANT to hear the truth because it causes an extremely uncomfortable psychological tension or anxiety in them. To have competing ideas in one's mind when that person has believed something is "truth" for so long is almost too painful too consider that the original belief was incorrect. This term was coined by psychologist Leon Festinger in the 1950's.

Or in the words of Mark Twain (well, some claim it was not him who said it, but whatever), "It is easier to fool people than to convince them they've been fooled. No man's life, liberty and property are safe while the Legislature is in." *I am just glad that I was raised to be a critical thinker and to question everything. It got me in a lot of trouble growing up, but at least I can think for myself. Nor can I be hypnotized. I have tried it. I actually went to a very good hypnotherapist to help me deal with PTSD resulting from a violent attack, because I refused to be drugged. Well, no go.

No matter how many times, how many ways, it would not take. I was relaxed, just not hypnotizable. On the bright side, at least I will never stand on a stage in front of hundreds of people clucking like a chicken!!*Everyone have a safe 4th of July holiday and remember WHY we celebrate the Act of Congress on July 4, 1776. Not just our country's Independence Day, but OUR independence, as we are all "created equal, that [we] are endowed by [our] Creator with certain inalienable rights....Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness..." AND that the globalist psychopaths firmly believe that we do NOT deserve those rights, nor do we deserve sovereignty.

---Cont--- To them I quote, "That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed.

But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.--Such has been the patient sufferance of [this Republic]; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present [globalist psychopaths running our countries] is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States [and others in the world]..."

In my comment above I noted I also cannot be hypnotized. I suspect it is a characteristic of many of us who have not been taken in, along with the ability to think critically. However, I have extremely intelligent friends who CAN think critically and are still taken in. I do believe it is the non-ability to be hypnotized that is a major factor here. BTW, totally off topic, if you still are dealing with PTSD, seek out an Eden Energy practitioner. It is NOT "woo-woo" and it helped me reverse my PTSD over time. EMDR did nothing, as a point of reference. Again, one of those things that Big Pharma would stamp out except for the extreme care they have taken to not threaten BP.

Excerpt from A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT Mark Twain-I was from Connecticut, whose Constitution declares "that all political power is inherent in the people, and all free governments are founded on their authority and instituted for their benefit: and that they have at all times an undeniable and indefeasible right to alter their form of government in such a manner as they may think expedient." Under that gospel, the citizen who thinks he sees that the commonwealth's political clothes are worn out, and yet holds his peace and does not agitate for a new suit, is disloyal; he is a traitor.

That he may be the only one who thinks he sees this decay, does not excuse him; it is his duty to agitate anyway, and it is the duty of the others to vote him down if they do not see the matter as he does. And now here I was, in a country where a right to say how the country should be governed was restricted to six persons in each thousand of its population. For the nine hundred and ninety-four to express dissatisfaction with the regnant system and propose to change it, would have made the whole six shudder as one man, it would have been so disloyal, so dishonorable, such putrid black treason.

So, to speak, I was become a stockholder in a corporation where nine hundred and ninety-four of the members furnished all the money and did all the work, and the other six elected themselves a permanent board of direction and took all the dividends. It seemed to me that what the nine hundred and ninety-four dupes needed was a new deal.

The only thing I question about this conversation is when he says people have to non-violent resistance... real resistance requires the possibility of violence, he mentions that in nazi germany people stopped speaking up, that is because there was violence directed at them because of their speaking out, my idea around this is if people are willing to get violent against the hypnotized, doesnt that present a danger to the hypnotized and the possibly snaps them out of it

We need this information-its not too lofty. Splendid discourse and freedom formerly was firm in the hands of the individual, not considered too stupid to manage their public health practice of individuals' DISINFECTION of germs where they enter the body, as in air passageways which proceed to the lungs. It was WHO Essentials Medicine and their medical modality for global health. If we independently, again can resolve germ warfare of every nature such as viral, bacterial, fungal, micoplasmic, we better can disengage from the fearmongers. We are not advertising the drug Argyrol but that is the OTC Anti-Infective for mucous membranes previously last owned by Johnson & Johnson. Disinfection was removed in order to scheme the medical security state upon which the tyranny is proceeding. Please keep up the good work, Dr. Mercola-luz et veritas'. People are not as stupid as they're being treated.

Surprised that you are unaware of this : Depopulation Jab Covid 1984 is just the Flu re-branded so that the Evil Luciferian FreeMasons

New World Order can murder the masses for the Depopulation Agenda! Jacques Attali, 1981, then adviser to Franois Mitterrand wrote this: "In the future it will be a question of finding a way to reduce the population. We will start with the old, because as soon as he exceeds 60-65 years man lives longer than it produces and it costs society dearly. Then the weak and then the useless ones who bring nothing to society because there will be more and more of them, and especially finally the most stupid. Euthanasia targeting these groups; euthanasia will have to be an essential instrument of our future societies, in any case.

We will of course not be able to execute people or make camps. We will get rid of it by making them believe that it is for their good. Too large a population, and for the most part unnecessary, is something economically too expensive. Socially, it is also much better for the human machine to come to an abrupt halt rather than gradually deteriorating. We won't be able to pass intelligence tests on millions and millions of people, you can imagine! We will find something or cause it, a pandemic that targets certain people, a real economic crisis or not, a virus that will affect the old or the big, it doesn't matter, the weak will succumb to it, the fearful and the stupid will believe it and ask to be treated.

We will have taken care to have planned the treatment, a treatment that will be the solution. The selection of idiots will thus be done on its own: they will go to the slaughterhouse on their own. " [The future of life - Jacques Attali, 1981] Interviews with Michel Salomon, collection Faces of the future, editions Seghers. It would be so much easier to keep speaking out if we had a non bought out press. We're aware of the 17,000 physicians who have signed the petition for early treatments, the problems in using the VAERS system, the lack of common reporting on the jab's problems, and the individual suffering it's brought to so many. But it sure isn't commonly discussed. And as long as it isn't or it's portrayed as though anyone who brings it up is wearing a tin foil hat, the hypnotic machine will remain unfettered. Not only is the easily accessible info. pro vax at any cost, it is engaging in proactive damage control.

Yahoo news just released a piece about the prevalence of uterine cancer setting the "pay no attention to the man behind the curtain " stage debunking the current surge in these cancers since the vaccine, as has been reported by some physicians. Yahoo also ran a piece a few weeks back about young people who had suffered brain hemorrhages. The piece ran originally in 2015 because these are rare. But now they are using any discussion of this problem not related to the jab. Everything is set up beforehand to promote those who benefit.

Next on the menu : Monkey pox. SO TOTALLY (AND METICULOUSLY PLANNED) EVIL !! Scare people to death with something that is VISUALLY TERRIFYING (the blisters)- instead of more boring and non-emotional " facts " and " statistics " which people are tired of.Despite the facts that: it is virtually never fatal , not all people get blisters (many simply get a rash with pimples), that there are less than 2000 cases world wide and that it is exclusively only spread by skin to skin contact with over 90% of cases being individuals who are homosexual (Note: I have nothing against homosexuals -I am simply quoting a fact) - the WHO is considering (and will) declare it a pandemic ! Gotta get those10% holdouts against the COVID vaccine jabbed with something else !!

However, people are mocking it so they will either change the name or choose another scamdemic. Remember, they went from the Bologna Virus and renamed it Covert 2019.

Parallel structures.. parallel organizations: it makes sense that the AMA is no longer an organization that promotes health as the absence and prevention of disease. At some point, true healers and those who follow the intention and mantra of the Hippocratic Oath will diverge from mainstream drug-pushing disease-care and take the Road Less Traveled to create a new medical and health community, absent of the corporate greed and hidden agendas of those who have infiltrated and captured the AMA, AHA, FDA, CDC and WHO.

Desmet is correct in terms of his historical analysis and present, but I am not as pessimistic about the future. Consultants to the Democratic party recently advised Democrats to move away from authoritarian agendas regarding COVID because most American's no longer felt such measures were important or reasonable, and the Democrats followed this advice. This reflects that many people have woken up to at least some extent. In my area of Florida exceedingly few are wearing masks at this point, but no doubt other areas are still under the spell and will take longer to wake up.

They haven't woken up, they are continuing to heed those who appear to have authority, consultants in this case, and following their new directives. Fortunately, the directives are more reasonable. If the media follows suit, so will the sheep, but they are sheep nonetheless.

Many adults were not permitted to think for themselves as children, it is harder to learn the skill in adulthood, but can be done, and is a must for freedom.

FEAR is the great motivator! Don't believe it, then watch your local news some evening when there is a storm warning and see that nothing is being broadcast except the weather and the constant warnings to seek shelter. This was done when I was a kid in elementary school when we had the nuclear bomb drills.

Our county in Oklahoma was the only one who did not lock down or required masks. Certainly some stores required but many of us refused and yes people were scary. I'm still curious how people here caught it because we are so rural but Oklahoma was first to receive the jab. Since the media were not warned, they swallowed the venom and I believe all of a sudden since many are sick or have died, they will too turn on the ones who did this.

I would love to relocate to your county because of all the sane people who live there. My theory on how people caught it is that the "powers that be" have the ability to distribute it via the air any time and any place they want. They instill fear in people who resisted by distributing the virus (if it is a virus?) in those areas to make them sick on purpose, and of course made sure that early effective treatment was unavailable and only the jabs. I think this happened many times in gatherings of people who were resisting. Don't think it isn't possible, because it is. Easily so.

A key aspect of how we get out of this is DISINTERMEDIATION. In a nutshell: reveal the fake news around the pandemic/"vaccines" —> destroy the media's credibility —> undermine the media's hold on the minds of the population —> now release, on a secure platform, unmediated information related to the financial, political and war crimes/crimes against humanity. This is why alternative media such as Mercola's site and Substack and Truth Social are so crucial.

Hear, hear! But to destroy their credibility means more than just exposing their lies or cognitive distortions, even if that is part of it. I am cross posting for emphasis, because this is really important, that to appeal to the gut and not the brain, is key. Use images and videos to do that. People respond to images where the written word and intellectual thought seems too tiresome to some cross sectors. We shall peacefully overcome. The truth is mightier than the sword! Oh yes and how about considering suing the media, an idea whose time has come? Class action carries far more clout and strength than solo lawsuits. God bless.

Unfortunately, both sides of our political spectrum are engaged in mass formation. On one side, there are free-fighting governors who declare that masks and vaccines should be a matter of personal choice, because what you put on or in your body is not the government's business. These same politicians believe that the right to defend your body is fundamental to freedom, that you are entitled to "stand your ground" against a real or perceived threat, and you have the right use deadly force to protect your body. Therefore, a few dozen mutilated schoolchildren here and there, now and then, is an acceptable risk for the greater good, which is your right to protect YOUR children and YOUR body. I don't find any inconsistency in this logic. However, these same free-loving politicians are the ones who are telling women that self-defense and "standing your ground" do not apply when it comes to a certain kind of cell that is implanted in their bodies.

That the rights of this cell, according to these free-loving governors, negate the rights of liberty, happiness, self-defense, stand your ground, and in some cases, life itself in the women who carry it. The followers of these governors have been trained to overlook one school shooting after another because gun control is government overreach (just tweet more "thoughts and prayers" and move on), but a woman of a certain age has no right to determine what happens in her body because the government says so, and that's NOT government overreach? The other side is guilty of the reverse of everything I just said. But both sides are inconsistent and expect their followers to believe in their illogic. Are there any true libertarians to vote for, who believe that you, and not the government, own your own body whether you're male or female (or some variation) and have an intrinsic right to defend it from government intrusion?

Your questions are all based on government not God. School shooters only go where there are no guns. They do not go to a police station to shoot people. This is how evil operates. A women has rights over her body but a baby inside is not her body. Try God not man made solutions. Think it through before sex , God tells you of the dangers . Would the government suggest that we castrate all men to stop prostitution? Then, why do they try the same thing with guns? Meditation might help you separate your brain from your thoughts and let God's spirit rule.

Religion is a deeply private, personal subject, and the separation of church and state is a fundamental tenet of our democracy. And you bring up a good point. Our politicians are playing God on both sides of the spectrum. Regarding my own beliefs, I am an old woman, and I marched in the 1960s for civil rights, an end to useless wars, and personal freedom. It is human nature to go forward, not backward, particularly to a less enlightened time in our history. If a woman chooses to defer her own civil rights to the rights of a cell, that should be her choice, not the government's.

i made that choice six times. I also chose not to vaccine the children who developed from those cells. It took some effort and some clever letter writing, but I did it. Some of those children grew up and chose to vaccinate themselves, while others refused. God gave human beings a brain unlike any other living being, and when you make a choice based on your deeply held beliefs, not just the rules or popular propaganda, then you are following in the footsteps of Christ, who was the quintessential free-thinker.

You will find the arguments are based on belief that a human can create a human soul. A human cannot create, nor destroy, a human soul. Those who think they can, will fight against a woman's control over her body. There is no arguing with that kind of belief. Those of us who know beyond a doubt that a body is only a body and a soul is a soul, will have no argument with what a woman, or a man, chooses to do with their own body.

Even before i read the article; it's the fear that was instilled in so many people. I became overwhelmed with it! And there were a a few from here when I admitted this came to my rescue. I also went to friends and they helped; the fear left and did not come back; I from here when I admitted this came to my rescue. I also went to friends and they helped, the fear left and did not come back, I recognized that fear was poison. Do you remember the honorific stories coming out of NYC? All the stats of death, the lack of respirators? Trump using his presidential powers to manufacturer more of them and masks? And if one's diet was nothing but that: No wonder there are still many who believe and cannot see.

BUT!!! And there is a but, they closed churches and only a few remain opened under great pressure to close; they still did not close. I believe the closing of the churches was manufactured so people could or would not seek refuge. Yes, there was online church; but church was never to be in isolation but in fellowship. With fellowship there is strength. The church would have grown not shrunk. In my neck-of-woods, there are a few churches that have not reopened.

But many churches are seeing explosive growth. One church has seen their attendance since November 2021 explode from 150 to over 600 on Sunday; on Wednesdays from may be 50 to over 200. A church in California that did not close and thank God had their fines rescinded (thanks to the Supreme Court) saw their attendance during covid triple and had to raise tents to hold the people coming to them. This is why the they closed the churches. No matter your faith or no faith, the church can never close again. NEVER!

I am seeing many many people becoming more spiritually empowered everyday too...it's inspiring. Perhaps all of this deep "intentionally inflicted" pain-false fear was needed for "we the people" to have a beautiful spiritual awakening and regain what is important in a life and of course re-affirm our GOD given unalienable RIGHTS!

May need to step back to see where THEY are herding us. The timing is clear, this recent Australian interview rounds out "their plans", for anyone who may have missed listening to David Icke last fall, when he first outlined what he he found in his years of research..."Fear is the Mind Virus" - www.bitchute.com/.../kXzBRv7gnsz7 - - - - if we do not understand their goals, far more difficult to identify the next steps when these occur, as these steps may appear as a random event, NOT!

Mass control, examples, conscription to join armed forces, willingness to fight to the death. Religious' education leads to a stereotypical mentality. Patriotism and tribalism socially separation. H.G.Wells, author of The Time Machine' showed the effect of multi-generational acceptance of a ritual that began in the 20th century of people going into air raid shelters whenever the sirens sounded in a fear of a nuclear war. After millennia the population had developed into two distinct social orders, those living above ground, the Eloy, and those living below grounds, the Morlocks. The Eloy living in sunlight appeared to live an idyllic life but when night came they became fearful and would not go outside. When the sirens sounded, the Eloy became hypnotised and willingly went to the underground places to be farmed by the Morlocks.

Mass Formation Psychosis, in simpler terms, is a manufactured lynch mob. The lynch mob has a hive mind controlled by something or someone (a dictator) that demands immediate action or compliance to a perceived threat, injustice, or political agenda. It is implemented quickly without sufficient evidence or proof. The media, corrupt government and medical institutions rushed to get a vaccine out to everyone without even sufficient testing to force on the population a totalitarian agenda, not because of the threat of the covid pandemic, which was a massive fraud and served as a trojan horse to vaccinate as many people as possible.

The vaccine is the means by which the WEC (Great Reset), through the medical authority of the W.H.O. will create the hive mind. Its purpose is to depopulate and transform survivors into surveilled, tracked and controlled 'transhuman' slaves. The lynch mob usually tries to hang its victims quickly to avoid exposing the truth so that the 'dictator' gets their agenda accomplished. We surely live in dire times. https://www.direreport.com

Thank you Dr Mercola and Matthias; this is fascinating. One thing I can think of which isn't mentioned here - although it may be in the book (which I will be buying!) - is the whole data collection story, Cambridge Analytica onwards. I wonder if the free flowing anxiety could be exacerbated by the exponential use of social media which has been tailored to our collected/stolen information. This could be in the form of "news" which we think everyone else is reading - even if they are not as their "news" will be tailored for them also - and which gives us an illusion of solidarity because it taps into our interests, fears, etc - like an echo chamber - but leaves us unconnected physically.

This has to be started by the mentality when people did not care about their health and they lined up for the seasonal flu vaccine every year. As doctors tried to force cholesterol lowering medication (statins) on me, I took all food rich in Toxic sugar out of my diet to get better lipid results without using statins , then I noticed the more food I cut out of my diet rich with toxic sugar, the less I suffered from any flu attack. Now I never have food rich with toxic sugar and I never get any flu symptoms. They say anybody with good level of Vitamin D can never catch a virus. And someone said it is not a covid pandemic it is a Vitamin D deficiency pandemic. [footnote] I give the prestigious prefix to sugar, as food manufactures shove as much as they can into their product to make people overdose on there product. Someone has already written a book called "Pure White and Deadly"

Since this platform supports freedom of speech, I will freely give my opinion. I think Mattias is partially correct on one issue. Most of those I know who have chosen to swallow the propaganda are not socially isolated people. I think they are all suffering from 'existential loneliness' not social loneliness. That is a key distinction and important in order to reverse course. To only be identified with the material plane of existence as the only reality is an incredibly empty experience, even if it is not acknowledged. The fullness of living, the antidote to loneliness involves more than the rewards of the physical senses, immediate or long term. Until each individual resolves that dilemma for themselves, they will be at the mercy of group think, no matter how destructive.

I haven't even read the whole thing yet, but I've had a huge light bulb come on. I have found out, through numerous attempts, that I simply am not "hypnotizable." It can't be done, and experts have tried with my consent, to try to solve various problems. No WONDER, after a short while of wearing a mask and demanding that others do so, keeping my distance, staying at home, etc., I woke up and said, "WTF is going ON here," bought my ivermectin and started living my life as best I could given the craziness all around me. I can only be grateful that I react SO badly to vaccinations that I refused for that reason, until such time as I knew I needed to refuse for other reasons.

I see my friends in my age group (elderly) who got the jabs, and almost all of them have since developed heart problems, blood sugar problems, neurological problems. And they then run to get their next booster, and when I say something like, "If I had gotten three polio vaccines in the last year and still got polio, I'd stop getting those vaccines," they tell me that I am the one who has gone off the deep end. The inability to consider "other" information is astounding. I'm very, very glad I am not 25 and have no offspring.

The truth of God's word received w/ repentance to the new birth of God's power& election, foreknown since before the foundation of the world (1 Cor 15; John 1,3 & 8; Acts 2&1 Peter 1,Romans 9-11,2 Peter 1 KJB/AV),& continued in (1&2 Timothy etc) disarms all seduction & beguilement,& breaks every 'spell' of wouldbe witches& sorcerers, vicarious 'christ's priestcraft etc seeking to take power& control over people by gnosis& craft,usurping the place of God.

Antichrist order comes in a variety of idolatrous humanist forms& we are warned not to be beguiled& spoiled by philosophy& tradition rooted solely in the rudiments of the world. The only way to overcome is to know God& the sure hope of pilgrims thru this dying by the Gospel& new birth of God's power, continuing in the word: fearing God who can destroy both body& soul in Hell, more than men& devils who can destroy flesh& then do nothing more. ALL of this foretold:the deceiving& being deceived, destruction of the earth by men& devils,evil men& seducers waxing worse& worse, AND the false solution& salvation coming first& being received by the majority of men:Jew& Gentile,along w/ the final destruction& judgment at Armageddon of the nations& salvation of the remnant of Jews for the real millennial reign of Christ from Jerusalem,so unlike the corrupt false coming 1st, doublecrossing the Jews& heading south fast.

Revelation 12-20; the Old Testament books of Moses,the Psalms& Prophets KJB/AV testifying: along w/ those 2 supernatural witnesses coming to those going into that most terrible time representing the Law& Prophets: Moses& Elijah; killed& resurrected before their eyes at the midpoint pivot of the coming week of years foretold of Daniel& Christ.

No wonder Satan contended w/ Michael over the body of Moses! Jude KJB/AV: & no wonder the gnostic MYSTERY crew work so hard mucking up the word& that identity w/ their 'arts'& gnostic garbage on Enoch so useful for unifying the world in fornicating, corrupt& bloody union.
