Your Driver's License Will Become a Vaccine Passport

Analysis by Dr. Joseph Mercola Fact Checked

November 17, 2021

STORY AT-A-GLANCE

- U.S. states are increasingly rolling out digitized versions of driver's licenses that "go way beyond what a driver's license is about"
- An international standard for mobile drivers' licenses and mobile IDs was approved for publication August 18, 2021, clearing the way for global use
- Mobile IDs will act as a digital identity that will ultimately tie in to retail, health care, law enforcement and travel sectors
- Ultimately, the IDs will also act as vaccine passports, making it easy to display whether you've gotten a COVID-19 injection — and any other future injections that come about — in order to go about your daily life
- Some have speculated that the introduction of digital IDs and vaccine passports in the U.S. is laying the infrastructure for a social credit system like the one being used in China

Little by little, it's becoming easier and more convenient to "present your papers" upon request. You're accustomed to keeping your driver's license with you, but states are increasingly rolling out digitized versions that "go way beyond what a driver's license is about."[1] Arizona, for instance, released a mobile driver's license (mDL) app in March 2021, and Eric Jorgensen, director of the motor vehicle division of Arizona's Department of Transportation, told Government Technology:[2]

> "I actually hate the term 'mDL' because it doesn't recognize the power of what we're doing here … The whole concept is that we're providing a way to remotely authenticate a person, to provide a trusted digital identity that doesn't exist today.
> Once we provide that, we're opening doors to enhanced government services. Also, the government can play a key role in facilitating commerce, providing a better citizen experience and providing for the security of that citizen …"

Mobile IDs Tied to Health Care, Law Enforcement

GET Group North America is working fervently to create "secure ID credentials,"[3] which includes the release of an international standard for mobile driver's licenses and mobile IDs (mID). The standards were approved for publication August 18, 2021, clearing the way for "global ID and driver's license issuers to confidently deploy mDL solutions, and for verifiers around the world to implement or adopt mDL readers."[4]

GET's Mobile ID also intends to go far beyond a typical driver's license to act as a digital identity that will tie in to retail, health care, law enforcement and travel sectors. The pandemic accelerated what was previously a gradual transition to digital, using the public health dogma that it would be better to not pass physical documents and IDs back and forth.

"Being able to empower customers to have a credential that they can use in a transaction where they're not passing back and forth a physical document has been further accelerated by the pandemic," Ian Grossman, vice president of member services and public affairs for the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators (AAMVA), told Government Technology.[5]

mDLs and mIDs are also intended to provide a streamlined identification verification system that can be used globally, doing away with different IDs for individual states.

"[El]lectronic authentication can give the mDL verifier confidence in the presented ID without requiring specialized knowledge of the hundreds of card design and security features applicable to the driver's licenses (and their variants) that are issued by 56 states and territories," the Secure Technology Alliance wrote.[6]

Ultimately, the IDs will also act as vaccine passports, making it easy to display whether you've gotten a COVID-19 injection — and any other future injections that come about — in order to go about your daily life.

DMVs Turned Into Identity Management Bureaus

Only a handful of states currently offer mDLs and uptake is facing hurdles because, while the mobile driver's licenses are available, the technology to read them isn't being widely used — yet. The plan is that police departments, businesses, state agencies and more will accept, or require, mDLs in order to verify identity. In Colorado, at least 100,000 residents have downloaded the state's myColorado app,[7] which offers a digital ID and vaccine record.[8]

In Delaware, more than 10,000 people downloaded the state's digital ID app in a six-week period.[9] The initiatives are being headed up by different departments, including technology, transportation and motor vehicle, depending on the state, but some believe DMVs could be easily transitioned into the role across the U.S. Government Technology explained:[10]

> "One person working at the center of the mobile ID movement believes state CIOs should form closer partnerships with DMVs. Matthew Thompson is senior vice president for civil identity, North America, at IDEMIA, a company that partners with 34 state DMVs on physical driver's license solutions.
> The company has partnered with three states on mDLs so far. He says that governors and state CIOs should look at their DMV not just as an agency that provides driver and vehicle services, but as one that can operate as an identity management bureau for the entire state and provide verification services to enable e-government.
> 'State CIOs need to better understand the [role] that trusted identity plays in driving their entire digital transformation,' Thompson said. 'They have a built-in identity bureau in their state that has a system of record that provides a route of trust that other agencies can benefit from immediately.'"

Apple Teams Up With Government to ID You

In certain states, including Arizona and Georgia — and soon Kentucky, Maryland, Oklahoma, Iowa, Utah and Connecticut — residents can use their iPhone and Apple Watches as a form of digital ID. Once your state ID is added to your device's wallet, along with a photo of the card and your face, it will ask you to complete facial and head movements to set up your digital ID.

"In effect," Vox reported, "this system appears to be a new form of government-supported biometric ID verification that goes beyond a regular photo in a process that potentially provides new data to state governments as well as to Apple."[11] Already, the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) is planning to add lanes that accept digital IDs for travelers, where you'll be able to tap your iPhone or Apple Watch to verify your identity.[12]

In the state of New York, where those aged 12 and older are required to show proof of a COVID-19 shot to visit restaurants, gyms, meeting spaces and entertainment venues like aquariums, movie theaters and professional sports arenas, may use New York State's Excelsior Pass to prove they've been injected. Now, New York is also working with IBM to possibly expand the Excelsior Pass to include driver's licenses.[13]

There are also a number of other vaccine passport apps that can be added to digital wallets, including VaxYes from GoGetVax, which works with Apple Wallet and Google Pay.[14] This raises red flags that digital ID verification is only the beginning of the surveillance that's planned. Vox reported:[15]

> "The Surveillance Technology Oversight Project also obtained a contract revealing that the state of New York has bigger plans for its Excelsior Pass than it initially disclosed, which could reveal the risks of similar digital ID programs.
> 'It's hard to trust the claim from officials that these apps are only going to do X or Y,' Albert Fox Cahn, an attorney at the Surveillance Technology Oversight Project, warned in June, pointing to the potential expansion of the Excelsior Pass. 'We see this clear pattern of them being installed for one purpose and then expanded for another.'"

Fox also raised concerns over New York's Covid Safe app, which allows users to add a photo ID, vaccination card and COVID-19 tests results.[16] But as for security, Fox tweeted, in August 2021, "New York City's new #NYCCovidSafe app isn't exactly cutting edge technology. It accepted this portrait of Mickey as proof of vaccination."[17]

Laying the Infrastructure for a Social Credit System

Some have speculated that the introduction of digital IDs and vaccine passports in the U.S. is laying the infrastructure for a social credit system. China's social credit system, a massive undertaking of government surveillance that aims to combine 600 million surveillance cameras — about one for every two citizens — with facial recognition technology, has an end-goal of being able to identify anyone, anywhere, within three seconds.[18]

At present, the system is still disjointed and focused on corporate social credit more so than individual social credit, but it's "evolving rapidly."[19] Here's an example of how social credit can work, from 2019 — before the pandemic, which has only accelerated data collection and surveillance measures — from Wired:[20]

> "The criteria that go into a social credit ranking depends on where you are, notes [Mareike] Ohlberg, [research associate at the Mercator Institute for China Studies]. 'It's according to which place you're in, because they have their own catalogs,' she says. It can range from not paying fines when you're deemed fully able to, misbehaving on a train, standing up a taxi, or driving through a red light.
> One city, Rongcheng, gives all residents 1,000 points to start. Authorities make deductions for bad behavior like traffic violations, and add points for good behavior such as donating to charity.
> One regulation Ohlberg recently read specifically addresses stealing electricity. Of course, you'll have to get caught first or be reported by someone else. While facial recognition is infamously used to spot jaywalkers, in some cities it's not so automated, Ohlberg notes.
> Private projects, such as Sesame Credit, hoover up all sorts of data on its 400 million customers, from how much time they spend playing video games (that's bad) to whether they're a parent (that's good). That can be shared with other companies. One infamous example is Sesame Credit linking up with the Baihe dating site, so would be partners can judge each other on their looks as well as their social credit score; that system is opt-in."

Majority in Favor of Privacy-Encroaching Technology

Driven by fear, acceptance of "privacy-encroaching technology" that promises an illusion of safety is high. In the U.K., researchers from the University of Bristol conducted two large surveys about such technologies, with overwhelming positivity reported.[21] This is the first measured public acceptance of location tracking through your cellphone that would allow health agencies to monitor your contact with others to target social distancing and quarantine measures.

About 70% of the respondents said they would accept such an app that they could choose to download and, surprisingly, 65% also said they would accept such an app even if it was mandated by the government and used to locate those violating lockdown orders and issue fines and arrests.[22]

A second survey evaluated acceptance of vaccine passports, with 60% stating they were in favor and only 20% stating they were strongly opposed. The study's lead author, professor Stephan Lewandowsky, described those opposed as "surprisingly low," adding, "It's fascinating how people seem increasingly receptive to their personal data being used to inform themselves and others about what they can and can't do."[23]

The technology being used to roll out digital IDs is very similar to that being used to create vaccine passports. It's only a matter of time before the two are merged, and your entire identity, including your medical history, finances and more, could be stored in a mobile app that's increasingly required to partake in society. While some might call this convenience, others would call it oppression.

#1 Best Seller In Books

"The Truth About COVID-19" exposes the hidden agenda behind the pandemic, showing the countermeasures have nothing to do with public health and everything to do with ushering in a new social and economic system based on totalitarian, technocracy-led control. So, it's not misinformation they fear. It's the truth they want to prevent from spreading. Pick up a copy of this best-selling book today before it's too late.

Unfortunately we are facing "vaccines" of reinforcement and surveillance for the fulfillment of poisonous injections. Dr. Gal Ehrlich and Maier Fenster of Ehrlich & Fenster have uncovered evidence showing that a US technology patent was approved, to track and monitor people's digital activity in order to issue a social credit score based on in compliance with the Wuhan coronavirus. The patent proposes to collect personal information of people from their mobile devices, the use of applications and browsing habits on social networks. There is also language suggesting that people's payment and medical records will also be included in the surveillance sweep. Fascism and medical and political tyranny. www.blacklistednews.com/article/81143/new-patent-proposes-digital-surv.. (November 7, 2021)

In recent issues of This Week in the New Normal, we mentioned a group of MEPs who held a press conference where they opposed mandatory vaccination and the “Green Pass”. On the 28th, five of those same MEPs held another press conference, and while the whole thing is worth watching, the highlight is definitely German MEP Christine Anderson, speaking for two of the truest minutes in the history of the EU:

“Across Europe, governments have done everything possible to vaccinate people. We were promised that vaccines will be a "game changer" and will restore our freedom ... it turns out that none of that was true. It doesn't make you immune, you can still catch the virus, and you can still be infectious. The only thing this vaccine did for sure was spill billions of dollars into the pockets of drug companies. " “As for me, I will not be vaccinated with anything that has not been properly examined and tested and that has not shown strong scientific evidence that the benefits outweigh the disease itself in potential long-term side effects, which up to the Today I don't know anything about ……. ” The full statement in the link:

9/11 kicked this all off. It gave us a nationalized drivers license that was just recently enforced. It's all down hill from that Unconstitutional process of national ID. We are so done with freedom in the US. It was fun while it lasted.

So we will use our ID to be able to purchase groceries, but not have to show ID to vote.? Makes perfect sense...

Why do you vote? You must acknowledge that you are a US citizen (a slave owned by the District of Columbia/British Crown) in order to register to vote. Your vote probably doesn't count anyway. It's not who votes that the controllers care about, it is who counts the votes.

Hi! The driver's license is a total fraud. People do NOT need "permission" of the State in order to use the public roads. Think of it this way. Imagine owning some land attached to the public roads, and you can't leave your property without "permission" of the State. What does that say? You are a slave. Slaves must ask permission of their masters. By the way, when you leave your property to enter the public road, you are "traveling" and NOT "driving" which is a "commercial" term. If you use the public roads for "commercial" use, then pay a "tax" to do so and NOT a driver's license. Another element to consider. Do States have the delegation of authority to issue "licenses?" No way! That is placing a "limitation" on the people's ability to "movement" called traveling.

Article 1, Section 2 in the Constitution of the State of Maine states in part: "all power is inherent in the people." How can the State lawfully place a "limitation" on my movements? It can't lawfully. What happened at the turn of the last century? The "uninformed" and trusting people "surrendered" their rights to travel by fraudulently entering into an unlawful "agreement" with the State. All unconstitutional by both parties. What is accomplished fraudulently cannot stand in law. By the way, your God given rights cannot be turned over to anyone especially the State, and, in turn, the State cannot lawfully "accept" the surrender of rights. It has NO authority to do so. Hosea (Bible) says that my people are destroyed for lack of knowledge.

So true! Know your rights. Study your own State constitution. And today it is highly likely that your fake "driver's license" will now be used to restrict your "movements" even more. Study and comprehend what I just revealed. Thank you! Lise from Maine (former licensed clinician now retired)

Predators and prey. Predators attack. Prey defend. Predators attack the weaker, the children. Prey defend by numbers. Prey always outnumber predators. Predators use fear to separate the prey and attack them when they are isolated. We are the prey. Our children are being attacked. The vaccine passport is the mark of domesticated prey animals. Vaccination is domestication.

So, when do we DO something about it? When do we educate the clueless masses that blindly follow? When do we rid ourselves of this overlord government, its propaganda media arm? Sitting around and analyzing the situation does nothing. Action is required. If we don't take action and do so soon, you can kiss liberty and freedom goodbye forever.

What to do? We need to take back the word "cure". Worldwide statistics show over 230 million RECOVERED WORLDOMETER. Not a single statistic exists for CURED. Google previously reported RECOVERED but stopped summer. We know how to cure COVID. Thousands of doctors who cure COVID, fear the word cure. We cure SARS-CoV-2 infections with healthiness before negative consequences emerge. We are curing infections with minor symptoms by prompt healthy actions as soon as infection is suspected or evidenced. We are curing patients who reach levels of ARDS - with effective medications, while conventional medicine is killing as many as it "RECOVERS" with deadly poisons and mechanical techniques with little evidence of benefit and significant harms.

Cured is not defined for COVID. "There is no cure for the common cold, influenza, and measles.." even as ALL cases in healthy patients are easily cured. We've all had colds: cured.

The medical bureaucrats are selling vaccines with "Prevention is better than cure." without any evidence. They have no cures. We cannot compare preventatives to cures until we study cure, cures, curing, and cured.

The THEORY OF CURE is simple and cure. An illness is cured when the PRESENT cause has been successfully addressed. It makes no difference if the treatment is an improvement in health with Vitamin D and zinc, or an antiviral like ivermectin, or a combination - a technique that increases effectiveness while reducing risk. The cure proves the cause.

Name a non-infectious disease that can be CURED by conventional medicine? There are none, because cured is undefined. Name a disease that can be cured by alternative medicine? There are none because cured being undefined cannot be proven.

We an cure. We need to call it curing. Vaccine preventatives are statistical, do not need to prove any individual case.

A cure is an individual case. Every cure is a story, an anecdote. We need to study and use the theory of cure. A cure is the best preventative.

I shall not comply either.....The more they double down to FORCE this BIOWEAPON, masquerading as a "vaccine" on us.....the more I am convinced this is not just about $$. I never was into "shots" anyway. about 10 years ago my doctor was leaning on me to take the shingles vaccine. I asked her why do I need that? she said because I had chicken pox as a kid I was at risk for shingles. I asked her if she knew what was in that shot and she said no, but I guess you are going to tell me. I answered: formaldehyde and they give that to DEAD people....she did not like me after that.

Since a Driver's License or State ID is required (at least in my state) to vote, does this mean the government will also know who I voted for? Will there be any such thing as privacy left? Will I be tracked by satellite as I flee to a remote cave to hide from prying eyes and ears?

The Driver License is only available to residents. A resident is a foreigner and a subject of the British Crown (Law of Nations, Definitive Treaty of Peace, Paris, Sep 3, 1783). The NAME on the DL is not that of a man, it is the fiction created when they converted (a crime) the information on your Certificate of Live Birth to a vessel lost at sea and presumed dead. The book of Revelation tells us that the Whore sits on many waters (Law of the Sea--UCC) We have been misled into using the date we were born for the birth (berth) date of the vessel. The true date of birth/berth for the vessel is the day the conversion took place, normally a few weeks to a month after you were born.

The key to coming out of this ("Her"--the Whore) is to notice the STATE (defined as District of Columbia) that you are a man or woman and not the fiction they created. Put a lien on the entity using the UCC. Add the Birth Certificate and Driver License as secured property. You put all of the energy and value into the entity, therefore you can lien it up. The entity is a transmitting utility; note that on the lien.

Let them know you are a man or woman and not their vessel. They have no jurisdiction over living men and women.

A great deception on Americans is the promise of broadband for all. Making this "essential" is to invite a 24/7 intruder in your living space. Decades ago I took an American Express tour into Central Europe when still under Communist control. At every location where the bus stopped, a "watcher" sat at a nearby table surveying the group. The luggage was also searched; they were looking for smuggled blue jeans. In the hotels you could identify the listening devices in the walls. All primitive surveillance devices of the past which have been streamlined for "their" benefit, not yours. However hard it may be, don't drink the Kool-Aid.

This will ultimately fail. Some of the vaccinated might go along with this but with the ever moving goal post I see the vast majority joining the side of freedom. I'll never comply or use these things.

Preventing my access to certain venues has not significantly altered my life. Unfortunately, if I wanted to go out-to-eat, some of my favorite restaurants have already been shut down or locked down, so that is no longer even an option. There are still a number of them I occasionally patronize that remain open in defiance of mandates. The truth is, that, I usually pack a cooler with our own food when we travel, more for expedience. I am one of the fortunate few. My drivers license came due last spring during an oppressive lockdown period. DMV was actually closed. All licenses were renewed on line merely for paying a fee. I got a 6-year, unchipped license. I was informed that I have the "option" of upgrading it to a chipped license that would be acceptable for air travel. I don't think I will do that.

Meanwhile, I am up late shelling corn. In this case, the first batch of ears is Dakota Black Popcorn, which is a very nice variety. (Next will be cornmeal.) The physical action releases some of the tension I feel when I read articles like these and speculate whether I should consider getting a mule. Many interesting developments as the economy collapses. People with high incomes are now asking whether I can sell them food, esp. meat. We did not get greedy this year and I only shot one buck, figuring it is enough for our own needs, because we also have seafood and vegetarian bases for meals. People do not understand that simply spending more money does not increase food in the pipeline or delivery to markets. You cannot increase meat production as rapidly as a factory producing widgets.

More people are buying lots of gnus and a m o, too. I hope more people are aware of the need to save heirloom seeds and plant a home garden. Canning jars&lids, freezers&containers, food preservation knowledge, inc. pickling, and larding into a crock. From the looks of costs and what is available in supermarkets, this could be a very dire time of shortages for many people

I picked more wild mushrooms and cherry tomatoes today. I noticed there is a bit of late lettuce--and prob also a few more dark leafy greens to mix in-- sneaking thru in my garden that I can pick for our supper. That means we will have mushroom soup and salad for supper. It gives us one more fresh meal even though harvest is pretty much over and done with. Someone also gave me unwanted apples, although I still have my own in cold storage. However, I do not let good food go to waste, so I made applesauce. We have leftover grape juice, too. My last grape picking of the year has a wonderful sweet and tart flavor. I debated whether to pick the last of grapes since seeds were bitter and skins sour, but the pulp was sweet. Now, birds have cleaned off the last of the grapes that did not fall off the vines. Once we finish the fresh grape juice, I have some leftover wine I did not bottle that we can start drinking young, too.

Butchering venison is done. We are waiting until after elk season, when we know if we will get more meat, to grind meat scraps to burger. Then, we will make and smoke sausage soon. If there is any leftover burger, I will can it. We usually trade various kinds of labor and marketing for chicken and beef burger, too. (We would help our neighbors anyway.) In the case of chickens, we use our network to take orders and act as a distribution site for a small farmer who compensates us by giving us leftover chickens. This works out well for everyone involved. We hunt wild birds, too.

Instead of paying rent for the use of our land, a beekeeper shares honey. In the future, such systems of mutual cooperation will become a more important kind of networking. Meanwhile, I organize gardeners saving heirloom seed who want to share. These are relatively simple steps anyone can take to promote food security in their own neighborhoods--esp. in a close-knit rural community. One advantage is that seed becomes acclimated to local conditions

Here is another harvest time recipe. Unstuffed cabbage rolls. This is fast and easy if you use home-canned burger. Saute a good amount of chopped onion--and garlic, if you wish. Add twice as much cooked rice as burger. Peel (boiling water bath) and chop the tomatoes that are ripening and turning red in storage. Add dillweed and oregano. Add shredded cabbage. Season with salt, pepper, maybe a bit of sweetener and black pepper, too. I add celery seed when I do not have fresh diced celery--loveage is an excellent substitute, too. A "glug' of wine--optional. Adjust seasoning, to taste. Cook until heated thru and cabbage has wilted. Serve with glazed juliennne of carrots.

Your life sounds very busy with the business of getting on with living and producing, Almond. We somehow service our needs without much need to have contact with crazy outside world. Our locality has a wonderful website for sale and exchange of all baby items which saves a lot of money. The only things that impact on us are the difficulty of getting much needed medicines and of course doctor appointments are not available. Building materials can be tricky to get now and newly inserted but defective roof tiles for a house extension will have to be replaced before other work can proceed.

As for a driver's licence, I gave up driving some years ago as we have an exceptionally good, inexpensive local bus and tram service but other members of the family rely on their car for transport. No doubt non driving licence holders will be required to provide some other form of identity regarding medical status. As I have no intention of being injected, I guess it's a case of trying to create our own islands of survival. The key to this will be to keep healthy, as in the UK at least, the medics are now discovering mortuaries piling up with victims of medical neglect due to obsession with the supposed viral pandemic - 45 % or almost 10,000 preventable deaths from heart and liver diseases and diabetes. In other words more genocide by failure to treat those who are vulnerable.

Who gave them the right whether you can participate or not? You will, if you go along.

That "trust the government" thing falls under one or more of these categories: - Stupid - Ignorant (uninformed) - Gullible (easily conned) With exception of the rare exception and the politician version, our agents are just employees showing up for jobs and a pay check. Court case files and law books (appellate court case) provide hundreds of thousands of examples that serve as proofs that when our agents claim to be doing something for us, it's a con. Consider, for example, when our agents cared so much about us they decriminalized most traffic violations. The agents promoting converting traffic crimes to infractions pushed the idea that we would no longer be considered criminals for doing fifteen over on a lonely desert highway. What they didn't tell us was, no longer would we be presumed innocent. As such, the government no longer had to prove we violated law. Instead, what the agent (cop) said is presumed true and we must TRY to prove the event didn't happen. That's called proving a negative in law and, elsewhere in law, an expectation of such is frowned on.
