Public Health Child Abuse: Masks, Fear and Harmful Vaccines

Articles by Dr. Joseph Mercola ✓ Fact Checked

STORY AT-A-GLANCE

- Pediatrician and certified industrial hygienist, Stephen Petty, is encouraged by statements recently made by former commissioner of the FDA, Dr. Scott Gottlieb, in which he said that masks don't provide a lot of protection
- National data from 2016 to 2019 show that traditional and social risks increase the likelihood of mental, emotional and behavioral health issues in children. Children have been exposed to harsh factors throughout 2020 and 2021
- A Canadian public school teacher wrote about her high school students' behavior in the past two years, citing disengagement, shame, a fundamental alienation in their understanding of themselves, learning loss and an unwillingness to continue "living like this"
- Not all educators are interested in protecting the mental health of their charges, as demonstrated by one principal at Gaston Elementary School in Washington, D.C., who is proud of the shaming he does as a vaccine "advocate" for his school, which boasts an 80% shot rate
- Dr. Peter McCullough and Dr. Aseem Malhotra have warned that the mandatory COVID-19 shots since the start of the pandemic in children under 17, as compared to the 28,966 injuries and 79 deaths in the same age group reported in VAERS

As Stephen Petty, certified professional engineer, industrial hygienist and safety professional, points out in this short 11-minute podcast, the truth about masks and the mandates is slowly leaking out. However, since mainstream media are not universally covering these stories, it is incumbent on us to ensure that our friends and family are informed.

January 2, 2022, Dr. Scott Gottlieb, who had served as the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration until 2019 and is now a special partner at Pfizer, was interviewed on Face the Nation. When asked about cloth masks, Gottlieb said they "aren't going to provide a lot of protection, that's the bottom line. This is an airborne illness, and it could protect better through droplet transmission ... but not something like this coronavirus."[1]

Despite documentation from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention as of January 26, 2022 that just 710 children aged 17 and under had died in two years, between 2020 and 2021, from COVID-19 — 0.00032304% of the U.S. population — Gottlieb continues to promote the idea that COVID-19 may be a serious threat to young children.

Yet, the atrocities being perpetrated on children in the name of public health is not warranted based on the number of children affected. Collette Marino, Zero Percenting nurse, testified before a Louisiana Health and Welfare Committee hearing[2] on February 1, 2022.

She claimed she and her colleagues have witnessed "terrifying" reactions to the COVID shots among children — including blood clots, heart attacks, encephalitis/myelitis and arrhythmias — yet their concerns are simply dismissed.

Each of these issues represent short-term and long-term challenges for children's physical, mental and emotional health. Essentially how society has treated the children during the last two years amounts to child abuse.

Children Demonstrating Harm From Mandatory Mask Policies

National data from 2016 to 2019 revealed children who experienced relational and social risks had a four times higher likelihood of having mental, emotional or behavioral problems. The researchers also found children who experienced only relational risks were more likely to have mental, emotional and behavioral health concerns than children who experienced social risks.

Relational risks are concerned with opportunities behavior that occur within a cooperative effort, such as a family,[3] for example, substance abuse within the family. Social risk factors are a significant influence over morbidity and mortality through behavioral pathways, and unhealthy — yet their concerns are simply dismissed.

Social risk factors are a significant influence over morbidity and mortality through behavioral pathways, such as: Poor include socioeconomic status, social network and social support.

Children have experienced harsh factors throughout 2020 and 2021 and the evidence of damage can be found all around you. For example, ZeroHedge reported that one speech therapist said the number of children being treated in their clinic has soared by 394% during the pandemic, as compared to before the pandemic.

ZeroHedge reports, "Parents are describing their children's speech problems as "COVID-delayed," with fears concerning the primary cause of their speaking skills being seriously hindered." In an article published in The Washington Post,[4] three experienced infectious disease physicians and parents of school-age children, noted a pattern of behavior from children in what they call a "pumitive mask culture."

A journalist at the San Francisco Chronicle recalls that a self-portrait her 8-year-old son drew at school had no nose or mouth.[5] According to data that viral immunologist Dr. Scott Bakaletz pulled from the CDC, children have died from flu each winter, ranging in number from 200 to over 1,000.

So,[6] the 770 deaths in children from birth to 17 years since the start of the pandemic have not been greater than what has been experienced in the past from flu.

While any death is tragic, masking until all children are "safe" means ineffective and damaging masks will become a permanent part of society and will continue to drive up the number of children and students who suffer from depression,[7] anxiety,[8] speech problems[9] and who get behind in their schoolwork.[10]

School Teacher Identifies More Issues

Stacey Lance is a Canadian public school teacher. She has 15 years of experience at the high school level and writes about what she has seen in the last two years during lockdowns, mandatory masking and harmonizing. In an essay called, "The Kids Aren't Alright," she writes:[11]

> "It also became increasingly clear that the response to the pandemic would result in immense consequences for students who were already on the path to long-term disengagement, potentially altering their lives permanently.
> She believes research data has overlooked the shame that she has watched her students suffer. Throughout the pandemic, children have been made to think their schools are "hubs for infection and themselves as vectors of disease. This has fundamentally altered their understanding of themselves."[12]

She describes the times when students were physically in school during the pandemic as feeling "cold and soulless." The learning loss was noticeable, and the students had trouble concentrating. The older students weren't allowed a lunch break and the freshmen and sophomores had to eat while facing the front of the classroom.

Lance compares that to the kids outside of school who are "going to restaurants with their families and to each other's houses, making the rules at school feel pointless and nonsensical."[13] Lance shared the experience of one student that appeared to echo the experience of the rest of the class, writing:[14]

> "I try to take time at the beginning of class to ask my kids how they're doing. Recently, one of my 11th grade students raised his hand and said that he wasn't doing well, that he doesn't want to keep living like this, but that he knows that no one is willing to see them. The other kids all nodded in agreement. They had lost to — and I can't blame them."

Lance writes that she is more worried about the shame and anxiety students are feeling over breaking the rules, and how that may impact their community and families. She cites information as of the time of the writing:[15]

> "What am I supposed to say? That 23 children[16] have died from Covid in Canada during the whole of the pandemic and she is much more likely to kill someone driving a car? That kids in Scandinavia, Sweden, and the Netherlands largely haven't had to wear masks at school and haven't seen outbreaks because of it?
>
> That masks are not a magic shield against the virus, and that even if she were to pass it along to a classmate, the risk of them getting seriously sick is minuscule?
>
> I want to tell her that she can remove her mask and socialize with her friends without being worried. But I am expected to enforce the rules ... It's true that honesty, by nature, are very resilient. But they break. And my students are breaking. Some have already broken.
>
> When we look at the COVID-19 pandemic through the lens of history, I believe it will be clear that we betrayed our children. The risks of this pandemic were never to them, but they were forced to carry the burden of it."

'Experts' Use Fear to Drive Vaccine Programs

But not all educators feel the same way about protecting your children. In fact, some are at the forefront of nagging and shaming parents and students into taking a shot they have not demonstrated any effectiveness and, as you'll read below, it has caused more injury and death than the illness.

Brigham Kipliinger, the principal at Garrison Elementary School in Washington D.C., is one such educator who upends his day combing through a call list of parents who have not vaccinated their children.[17] He is described by The New York Times as a "vaccine advocate," a job that the reporter admits is usually handled by public health officials or medical professionals.

However, he is being commended for taking this on his central role. The reporter writes, "Largely through Mr. Kipliinger's skill as a parent-vax whisperer, Garrison Elementary has turned into a public health anomaly: 83% of the 250 Garrison Wildcats in grades kindergarten through fifth grade now have at least one shot. ..."[18]

Kipliinger uses common shaming techniques. For example, at lunch he gets the children who have been vaccinated to raise their hand and then applauds them for their actions and urges them to keep prodding others to do the same.[19]

The reporter believes the genetic therapy experiment is "crucial not only to sustaining in-person education but also to containing the pandemic overall." Interestingly, the reporter mentions the only reason many working parents have not vaccinated their children is logistical rather than philosophical, which suggests parents may also be fearful of the medical challenges and risks to their child.

Organizations that have been relied on for medical education and information in the past are now putting out talking points for pediatricians and parents to encourage them to vaccinate their children.[20] Johns Hopkins School of Public Health[21] has gone as far as to post a free online training course to give parents the language needed to approach friends who are resistant to injecting their children with an experiment.

The Times reports that tips offered in the Johns Hopkins training course include sharing personal stories and to "normalize Covid vaccination by proudly telling friends and family when children get COVID shots."[22] Yet, sharing personal stories is exactly what social media platforms is censoring when it comes to COVID shot injuries.

More Children Are Dying From the Shot Than the Illness

Judging from the COVID numbers in children I discussed earlier, it is apparent that school educators and many public health and medical experts have completely ignored the data from the Vaccine Adverse Events Reporting System (VAERS) demonstrating children are being harmed by the shot in large numbers.

In fact, if you give any credence at all to VAERS, they are being injured by the vaccine in larger numbers than the illness itself. It's important to note the CDC makes the statement that these deaths involved COVID-19 and were not necessarily the direct result of COVID-19.

In the U.K., a Freedom of Information Act request asked for "deaths caused solely by COVID-19, where COVID is the only cause of death listed on the death certificate, broken down by age group and gender between February 2020 up to and including December 2021."[23] The data show that in children from birth to age 19, there were three deaths in the U.K. from February 2020 to December 31, 2021.

Based on the U.K. and CDC data, it makes no sense that policymakers want to mandate a vaccine for children. According to Steve Kirsch, founder of the COVID-19 Early Treatment Fund,[24] the FDA justified the vaccine based on assumptions made for a statistical model.[25] Kirsch also points out the U.K. has now stopped any mask mandates, social distancing and lockdowns.

However, in Santa Clara County, California, where Kirsch lives, the mask mandate, vaccines and distancing rules remain. As he writes, "Same virus, different policymakers."[26] Kirsch was part of a team that used an engineering estimate to find the underlying factor in VAERS was likely near 41.[27] This means the number of reports in VAERS can be multiplied by 41 to reach the number likely injured by the vaccine.

When VAERS is filtered to find deaths from birth to 17 years, it reveals 38,966 reports and 79 deaths.[28] If you extrapolate these numbers using the underpinning factor, you discover there could be roughly 1.6 million injuries and 3,239 deaths.

Underreporting to the system can happen for several reasons. Martin and others have explained that most doctors are not familiar with the system[29] and filling out the VAERS report is time-consuming. As Dakota Cintron found out, many hospitals do not want to report the injuries to the system, and as Brittany Galvin revealed in a recorded conversation with a VAERS investigator,[30] they are as much as one year behind in publishing reports.

A search on OpenVAERS for records of vaccine adverse events from 1990 to 2020[31] reveals 821,410 total reports of injuries to children in 30 years. However, since the rollout of the emergency use vaccine, the system has received a total of 1,071,858 reports in adults and children in 13 months.[32]

The Shot Increases Risk of Lifelong Damage

British data also show deaths among teenagers have spiked since that age group became eligible for the COVID shots,[33] an increase of 47%. Children are also at risk for potentially lifelong health problems from the experimental shot, as there are absolutely no long-term safety data on this. One of the most common problems that has been reported in children is myocarditis.[34]

This is an inflammation of the heart muscle that can cause ongoing heart problems and may even require a heart transplant. In October 2021, cardiologist Dr. Peter McCullough and Jessica Rose, Ph.D., research fellow at the Institute for Pure and Applied Knowledge in Israel, submitted a paper on myocarditis cases to the journal Current Problems in Cardiology.

The paper was ready to be published when the journal suddenly took it down. You can find the preprint on Rose's website,[35] which clearly shows that myocarditis is inversely correlated to age. This means that the risk is higher in younger individuals. The risk is also dose-dependent. The data showed boys had a six times greater risk of myocarditis after the second dose of the vaccine.

Damage to the heart muscle is often permanent and, historically, the three- to five-year survival rate has ranged from 56% to 83%.[36] The data do not support the push to vaccinate children who are not experiencing severe illness and death.

Additionally, research does not support the use of masks to filter viruses[37][38] and the boxes are being labeled: "will not provide any protection against COVID ... or any viruses or contaminants."[39] Fact checkers get around this statement by acknowledging that the box is labeled as such, but that "does not mean masks should not be worn."[40]

Politicians gave one large further to extrapolate a whole new meaning, writing, "Such disclaimers don't mean that the masks are ineffective at slowing the spread of the disease, but that they don't protect the wearer as well as medical respirators such as the N95 recommended for use by health care professionals."[41] When:

- Masks don't work
- The shot increases the risk of death and long-term health damage in children
- Educators take on the role of "parent-vaccine whisperer"
- There is a rising number of children and teens suffering from depression and anxiety
- Children have fallen behind in their studies

You must ask yourself, ultimately, what is the goal here? Why are agencies pushing for behavior and choices that have demonstrably damaged children and may result in life-long physical and emotional disability?

[illegible] actions are expressions are previously what masks other affects or hide altogether. Since they involve such foundational impulses as feeling, will, vitality and awareness, these are the areas where technocratic influences strain to keep us. Even if algorithms are one day able to accurately imitate such human expressions, as seems inevitable, those expressions would remain devoid of any vital significance for computers or robots. In this, our main responsibility is to purge the robots from within our minds, expressions and deeds, and so expose the gulf between conscious intelligence and artificial, technocratic mimicry. Such mimicry listened as the equivalent of a conscious human being is the essence of deceit. While the types of expressions under consideration are the ordinary, the substance involved thus of very fine fine art. And this our other fine art, and this our other fine art, practice and learning are required.

While this learning may occur throughout life, it should be the time of youth and ready socialization; the nuanced learning of the rich and subtle expressions of human life, and the ability to discern the difference between the genuine and the artificial, the conscious and unconscious, small and unusual experiences that are the very fabric of life. Only the Pure Flow of organic but also the "organic" of human connection. What will the generations so impacted grow up to be? What unimagined handicaps will they endure through the foolish, short-sighted directives of "experts" whose arrogant and malfeasance remained blind to such concerns? I question if children are out of their homes, in general, against 3rd world grinding unconditionally monotonous, and lacking in empathy. If by hopeful promos correct, this could be extremely serious on relation mass society wide, later on. I hope I am wrong but am concerned that I could be right.

The terrible thing is to think that children have been locked up in their homes for fear of and at risk of and sun in the middle of nature. In Scandinavia, Sweden and the Netherlands, children have not been locked up in their homes and have not been subjected to the previous pathologies Mexp. children have a natural immunity to COVID-19 and are also not significant victims of mass mutations. So there really is no need to impose draconian COVID restrictions on children for fear of their safety or the safety of others, let alone a vaccine that would lead to lifelong health consequences. master of laboratory children.

Missouri Attorney General Eric Schmitt filed a lawsuit Friday, January 21, against 30 school districts (28) in the state. The lawsuit brought by the Republican prosecutor sought to challenge mask mandates put in place to control the Mexican coronavirus in schools. Hi Randy, I know what you mean. I see Social children running around under the warm sun in an open field, wearing masks. All I can think is "why?... we're still doing this?" In Minnesota, we're thinking the same thing... But so is everyone too. Its Guidelines, you, that is. The risk from prolonged mask wearing for children is worse than their risk from covid. Thanks for the link.

Six feet is the average distance a person's energy field extends around their own body. At least it gets much weaker after that. (There are exceptions, of course, but that's the average.) Hugs are great, but they're not the only way to share energy with someone you enjoy being with. We need to constantly interact and exchange each other. Not only is physically harmful to be totally cut off from this kind of stimulation (esp. for children), but it is also harmful to the emotional well-being for people who do not find other ways to exchange their being. Masks reduce a form of social isolation. People who do not think deeply tend to become automatons.

The less they interact with other people, the more self-centered and less socialized they become. We are seeing more of this kind of behavior on roads, for example, where people are increasingly self-focused and rude. Like grooming other animals, I believe that people need regular touch and exposure to people to remain socialized. I am also noticing how the lack of facial expression interferes with communication simply thinking they are seeing another person who... Know if such lacking among animals. I believe part of the goal of globalists it to isolate us from each other. Together and united, we are strong.

Masks on children is child abuse and demonstrates the war on children being conducted by the Davos(Nuts) party in the U.S., at the bidding of the bankers crime. Time for strong civil disobedience against any school or school system forcing this child abuse!

Concerning masks we need to shift the conversation towards the science. It's pretty simple. Covid has a size of 1 micron. Surgical masks block 5 microns. Most masks sculpted and cloth masks useless. With 4 properly fitted (which is a lot more difficult than you would think) can potentially block 10% of virus. Last time I checked 5% is still plenty enough to get you infected.... using logic is still worth a shot with Washington!

If you can breathe through the mask, then one can fit through the pores of the mask. Plain and simple. This includes N95 masks. www.facebook.com/...1406.0.0.0.0.0/...,.1406.0.0.0.0.0/... As per my post today, the health department of New York posted strong advice for pandemic, that PM 2.5 particles (and by inference, smaller particles), are windborne and can be carried far away by wind. www.health.ny.gov/...ipmg_0.html Consider that advice from the CA fires blow over to Europe. Thousands of miles away! How much the more likely is this with even smaller particles? The are from rate is ABSOLUTELY RIDICULOUS and a confession of fraudulent science. Plus public fears have been downplayed, including calibrating "Doctors" who go right along with it. What fools! They all should be fired, incompetent. Fauci is a fraud, quite intentionally, and should be permanently incarcerated.

No cloth mask can give an airtight seal so the entire perimeter. As one who used a powered respirator in my profession, you need a clean, shaven face with no perspiration and a completely conforming rubber seal to the skin. Anything else is a joke.

1100% agree that making children wear masks is child abuse. Not only that but mandatory vaccines is wanonsley assault despite concern, because research is based on other related shots or unrelated bacterial. Telling pregnancy they have to have the vaccine or lose their job is employment abuse. The whole vaccine argument/debate is akin to abortion - to the woman's body their own, or isn't it? or body our own, or isn't it? I believe we have a future Nuremberg situation from the CDC and IDSA on our hands. But worse. Much worse. This could be the end of individual autonomy unless something is done about it

We cannot begin to comprehend the traits and consequences of any mandate until some time after it has been removed. While a mandate is in effect, all attempts to "understand" are simply attempts to support or remove the mandate. Mandates are not natural, generally not healthy, the dumb need to "mandate" safety helmets for race car drivers in hockey players. If we removed the mandate - no one would stop wearing them. They reduce mobility and comfort - but in actual use the risk of not wearing them outweighs the disadvantage. On the other hand, if we remove the mandates for COVID masks and social distancing, most people would quickly forget them and only a few people in fear would continue to wear them all the time.

Heartbreaking. The children say they have NO ONE to SAVE THEM. Let's save them.

I would say our priorities should be: 1. get rid of freshman jab mandates for all people of all nations, and permanently shut down and Megaline bioweaponization (gain of function) of Nature 2. prosecute all THOSE behind the artificial concoction of Covid virus and its planned kill shots and boosters, THE pushers, THE enablers - all of THOSE including Bill Gates of Hell and Anthony Cut Throat Fraudci. But THEY are just the front men. Go after the Anglo-Gaston freemason global elites who don't wish well for angels, our Earth, who are responsible for the Covid-19 bioweapon and its planned kill shots and boosters, and who are responsible for the Ukraine-Russia-Nato-Biden-Zelensky-Ukraine Nazis-Putin-Russia-Xi-Jinping-China-Iran-Israel-Saudi-Arabia-Turkey-Syria-Yemen-Libya-Venezuela-Cuba-Nicaragua-Mexico-Brazil-Argentina-Chile-Australia-Canada-Europe-Africa-Asia-Oceania-Antarctica-Moon-Mars-Jupiter-Saturn-Uranus-Neptune-Pluto-Sun-Milky Way-Universe-Multiverse-Infinity-Eternity-Nothingness-Everything-Everywhere-Everywhere-Everywhere

Mrrobb....Hundreds of clowns graduate annually from "accredited medical schools" in the US, than they proceed to practice their bad habits in their hospital residencies. I spend a good deal of my time looking for a "reformed clown". I've actually found a few, but its hard work. Dr. Andrew Weil was one of my first discoveries, followed by Mercola, Dr. Berg, Malone, Peter McCullough, Richard Fleming...

Y'all, University medical colleges brain train these kids under concentration camp conditions...no sleep/constant testing/approval seeking/total immersion in pharma phallacies....I have deprogrammed a few and watched some melt! They have no time to reflect on science or their over complicated curricula and then must follow idiotic standards of practice. Some older wiser physicians "go rogue" after tiring of failure and do good things like a local hospital doc using Marik's sepsis protocol despite peer-shock and criticism. I think most mean well and I despise the clown schools themselves.

ForbiddenH...good points. Your charity and realism stand out; med school is a grind. Thanks for the clarification.

Hating, devaluating & using children is a problem that has been growing in our nation since the devaluation of the family, & the pushing & promotion of radical feminism. Satan hates God's order & the special creation picturing the church, woman, with the ability to bring forth life with man, the picture of Christ...above all. Satan is male, as all the angelic creatures & the Godhead, & cannot create...but only rearrange what's been created, let alone bring forth life. The ancient Molech sacrifice, & fertility religions & pantheons growing out of Genesis 6, picking back up at Babylon in Genesis 11 & spreading worldwide evidence that fact: testified to in both scripture & archaeology, the facts of that science & anthropology unspun from philosophical assumptions, the druthers of truth-offended dreamers, & wishful thinking.

Pragmatic philosophy loves to then add layers of confusion to simple truth which can then be exploited & merchandised, & which tradition hardens, or 'finishes' and 'evolves' as ideas & interpretations are passed on. Colossians 2. Galatians. Another aspect of craft & cunning, might make right. Nothing new under the sun.
