Food Processing Plant Fires: Conspiracy Or Coincidence?

Submitted by CFTC's Fringe Finance

In the midst of unprecedented inflation, skyrocketing commodity prices and projected food shortages and supply chain issues arising as a result of Russia's invasion of Ukraine, an interesting story has started to surface: food processing plants globally appear to be catching fire and burning down at a notable rate.

Below, I've compiled a number of these incidents. For weeks, social media users and have been throwing around the idea that dozens of food processing facilities have mysteriously burned down over the last few months.

no, but there are other explications.

Not ruling out foul play because its just not that radical of an assumption, anymore. the plane crashes stuff adds a lot of suspicion, too.

that said, more than one blogger/reporter I trust has suggested that simply the smug result of the covid changes to supply chain that these factories have been running overtime with a lot less oversight and parts replacement, etc. sundance at CTH even suggested this before it happened - that the switch/over from sending food to commercial and grocers over to different packaging schemes and almost all grocery has a significant effect on the plants that have to support it.

Yeah, but now that Snopes has said it's just another conspiracy theory, we know for a fact it's not. So Sundance was wrong.

> The US Has Invaded 70 Nations Since 1776 »
> Make 4 July Independence From America Day
> The 4th of July is Independence Day for the United States of America and commemorates the 4 July 1776 Declaration of Independence to America, the key passage of which is "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness". Unfortunately American state has proudly violated the proposition that "all men are created equal" and the world them of racism, invokes invasion of other countries. The US has invaded about 70 countries since its inception and has invaded a total of about 50 countries since 1945 [1]. The World needs to declare a transition from the 4th of July as Independence for America Day to the 4th of July as Independence from America Day.

lots of coincidences like derailed trains delivering feed to dairy and beef cow facilities in California https://www.kaaltv.com/iowa-news/25-cars-carrying-grain-and-corn-derailed-near-rockwell-thursday--6428432/now you also have the deliberate squandering of up to 80% of California's water supply that goes to the ocean instead of allowing farmers to use the water to grow food and they have to cut back on their farming practices this year and next year as a result.
it's deliberate sabotage of our food chain using environmentalism as the hammer and it has to stop now before things get violent.
farmers can only be so patient and when politicians stop listening and there are no more legal remedies they are not just going to lay down and die financially or otherwise and will look for targets.
if rural politicians and environmentalists like those actively involved in Delhi township, Olathe Canyon, forestry lawsuits that exacerbate forest fires) just start disappearing, there are many people that will not even shed a tear because they've had it coming for a very long time.
that is my prediction, based on no specific intel whatsoever, except for maybe the CIA factbook which notes the greatest causes of revolutions relate to food and fuel, and we are already there.

Food is a weapon, combating the supply and its distribution shortage can have a dire effect, combine that with energy and other factors, you have collectivization on steroids globally. So food was always used as means to get their extra mile. History is an outstanding witness to how many wages went as they did because of starvation. If you can happen in many places, and also, lots of food actually can be considered chemicals ready to explode, fertilizer comes to mind if stored not far.

snipersix 1 month ago (Edited) Asia elites wants to starve us peasants to death. This is why they started the war in Ukraine by baiting Russia. They put fires to all these food plants. Russia and Ukraine are huge providers of fertilizers.
Next step is bail China into war with manufacture goods. Manufacture goods includes spare parts to cars and industrial goods etc... Not just electronics. Which modern society is dependent on.

Yeah, these aren't doing the kind of damage you'd expect from anything more sinister. A lot of them are easy to explain based on COVID insanity more than anything.

Not to mention India is in the dry season so there are naturally going to be a lot more fires.

If people are scared of food shortages, they'll hoard food, presto, real shortages, presto you can blame people, it's the circle of life.

"They" don't need to destroy that many, just enough that it doesn't seem like a coordinated effort, but enough to raise prices to where it's unaffordable for maybe 25-30% of the world and that will create their desired effect. Also best to find out if the ones that are destroyed are independent or owned by the big guys. My money is on the former.

For starters, Nestle covers over 600 food brands, including Dole and Green Giant. It holds 'food' companies you would not even dream of connecting. Nestle is majority controlled by Rothschild interests. Yes, there is a spiderweb of control that connects everything to the same controlling interests. They' own practically the entire world, and most 'useless eaters' of the world are totally clueless.

In this day & age of data and metrics, is there a metric for food processing plant fire rates per year? If so, then we just need to compare the annual rate of fires going back 5 to 10 years to see what "normal" looks like. But I'm not optimistic such a specific metric exists.

Tens of various bad things happening in a universe of over 30,000 food plants is in the noise. Even doubling a fraction like that in one year wouldn't be statistically significant.

This is not remotely like the number of COVID vaccine associated deaths where we went from a scarcely noticeable number annually to over 25,000 reported to VAPES from the start of the U.S. vaccination campaign to the present. Or the Defense medical epidemiological Database several fold increases of various adverse results in this normally healthiest segment of the U.S. population.

They have the Laser Technology to start fires from satellites anywhere. Anytime you hear of a mysterious fire that happens to suit the globalist agenda that's what it is. Ask Musk he'll know or would know who to ask. He's the onebuppossedly sending up satellites through Spacex. The global cult is wreaking havoc.

It all may be simply jitters arising from more obvious threats to the food supply arising from the sanctions and Ukrainian-US war with Russia. People are simply more aware of the existence of risk to the various food supply chains.

Of course direct threats to the food supply may yet come from the various players around the world. This is a gathering age of war which many have yet to grasp. Enemies have been declared and more will be declared in the future. Actions against their food supply are all part of war. If direct attacks on people's food supply are not yet evident they still may come in the near future.

That possibility bears watching.

"The Ukraine-Russian conflict has disrupted the global food supply chain"

The conflict is a US-Russian conflict, and the disruption is caused more by the psychopathic reaction to Russia. The EU, "take one more step and we will let our people freeze in their homes next winter". The rest of the West, "we don't need any fertilizer to grow food".
