The Internet Is Getting Flushed Down Orwell's Memory Hole

BY TYLER DURDEN

SUNDAY, NOV 03, 2024 - 01:15 AM

Authored by Stephen Green via FUMedia.com,

"Who controls the past controls the future. Who controls the present controls the past."

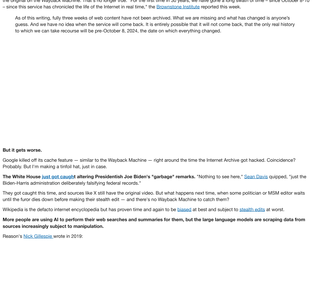
- George Orwell

We interrupt today's observation coverage for a story that could have impacts even longer-lasting than President Kamala Harris's first ten-trillion-dollar budget.

I'll wash my keyboard out with soap later for typing the phrase "President Kamala Harris."

When the Internet Archive's Wayback Machine was hacked in early October, it looked at first like just another email-and-password smash-and-grab. But that was followed up by repeated Distributed Denial of Service (DDoS) attacks that crippled the service. The Internet Archive was hit again on Oct. 20, this "this time with the threat actors gaining access to their Zendesk support email system."

The Wayback Machine came back but as a read-only service.



What that means is, while you can search archived webpages from before the attacks, "you can't currently capture an existing web page into the archive."

That matters big. When the New York Times, Washington Post, or anyone else stealth-edits a news report to hide the truth, you could still find the original on the Wayback Machine. That's no longer true. "For the first time in 30 years, we have gone a long swath of time – since October 8-10 – since this service has chronicled the life of the Internet in real time," the Cornerstone Institute reported this week.

> As of this writing, fully three-weeks of web content have not been archived. What we are missing and what has changed is anyone's guess. And we have no idea when the service will come back. It is entirely possible that it will not come back, that the only real history to which we can take recourse will be pre-October 8, 2024, the date on which everything changed.

But it gets worse.

Google killed off its cache feature — similar to the Wayback Machine — right around the time the Internet Archive got hacked. Coincidence? Probably. But I'm making a tinfoil hat, just in case.

The White House just got caught altering Presidentish Joe Biden's "garbage" remarks. "Nothing to see here," Sean Davis quipped, "just the Biden-Harris administration deliberately falsifying federal records."

They got caught this time, and sources like X still have the original video. But what happens next time, when some politician or MSM editor waits until the furor dies down before making their stealth edit — and there's no Wayback Machine to catch them?

Wikipedia is the defacto internet encyclopedia but has proven time and again to be biased at best and subject to stealth edits at worst.

More people are using AI to perform their web searches and summaries for them, but the large language models are scraping data from sources increasingly subject to alteration.

Reason's Nick Gillespie wrote in 2019:

> Is Donald Trump's vision of what is wrong with America and how to fix it true or is Bernie Sanders'? I'd say neither is. But what the internet does (especially platforms like Facebook and Twitter) is enable more of us to directly enter the discussion—the argument over who is right about what—and that's a great and liberating development.

Indeed, it is. But our ability to have that argument — to sift through the raw data, past articles, news photographs, etc. — depends on having sources that are both shared and reliable. We used to settle arguments by pulling out a dictionary or a volume from the nearest encyclopedia. Or maybe the Guinness Book, which has reportedly settled more bar bets than any other resource.

But now everything has moved online and, despite what people believe, the internet is not forever.

"We can fact-check your a," pioneer blogger Kari Layne reminded Big Media back in 2001. We built an entire alternative media based on "navigating this thicket of censorship and quasi-censorship," as Brownstone put it.

When I heard about this hack recently, my first thought was "has to be state sponsored terrorism." Maybe I'm wrong, and if I am it will absolutely be "state sponsored terrorism." Someone is trying to clear the way for mass formation psychosis 2.0.

I think it's a great thing someone is trying to kill the Wayback machine!

How many Cancel Culture attacks were fueled by some lefty digging something out of the Wayback machine from 20 or 30 years ago and destroying some White Man's life just out of racial hatred? "Oxewve... he posted something when he was 12 years old that doesn't agree with the current Communist DNEversity narrative!" BTW, Wayback is funded by a bunch of lefty orgs (like Soros and the rest).

The soon that site dies, the better! Every time I set up a website, I modify the robots.txt file to ban the Wayback machine from archiving it. If I find it in their archive, I send a DMCA take down. I haven't had to, yet. But, I'd love to sue them for violating a DMCA take down!

AI could build the website in a day.

But where can you host it away from the clutches of the deep state?

Facts do not acknowledge the left/right bicameral mindset of the average human. NGOs, governments, corporations are all set to freely edit as they please with impunity unless there is some way to retain their actions. To my knowledge, internet archives were not inherently political and know many who used them, myself included. My particular use was making sure I wasn't going insane while our corrupt gov was pushing vaxx and covid propaganda and constantly changing websites like the CDC. Wayback kept those records.

@nubus, creed I saved only about 10 of those covid death spiral videos before they vanished. I still have a good amount of non-covid shit of the human atrocities China does though: organ harvesting on kids to their awesome engineering mishaps.

At "government" entities ultimately seek a spectrum of population control at best to enslavement at worst.

However, as a person of intelligence, reason, praxis, the key is to secure a regime (by any means...yes, they DO justify their ends that will last to or past your lifespan) with a "government" that supports and values your race, ethnicity, and economic/social contribution capacities - to ensure your material (and spiritual) path through life is as personally peaceful as your being is able to attain, and ensure a smooth physical ending to an eternal state of peace and tranquility.

Reply

mistopsnips 1 week ago

I'm of the opinion that AI and government are certainly dangerous, but the shelf life of the technology is going to be relatively short. It's very costly to run the systems and store the mountains of data required to get meaningful results from "AI". Sure, it's more efficient than having the Stasi document and track every citizen on paper, but...it's still expensive.

One aspect to the Decline is that the Internet may very well be restricted or shutdown - for the little guy and useless eaters first, but eventually even for gov as well. Online systems cannot be secured and the technology to attack and disable those systems is ahead of defending them. We're already seeing a combination of gov selective outages and corporate bungling with many websites.

We'll have more immediate problems to deal with like food supplies, medicines, housing issues and civil unrest to worry about whether or not I can binge watch episodes of Friends this weekend.

Thank you. Very good supporting documents. Cyber "defense", i.e., regime/elite security, as AI and quantum computing advance and eventually become distributed under decentralized networks increasing elite risk exposure to "hostile" externals, requires a Memory Hole monitored and controlled by the DOD/NSA power organs.

BTW, make sure you get 1st edition (or just old) print books. The publishers have started modifying the content in recent versions to be Politically Correct - just like Hollywood does with movies (and more extensively w/ movie remakes). You could watch a movie from the 1940's and not even realize that some scenes had either been digitally modified with AI by the Politburo or just cut out completely. Remember that when you see a bunch of black tranny lesbians in "It's a Wonderful Life!"

It's not that hard for a skilled photoshopper to alter a screenshot.

And any idiot can edit the HTML of a webpage in their browser with F12 before taking a screenshot.

That's why the Wayback Machine is so important, it's the Internet Archive itself that's accessing and saving the webpage, so there is no way for the user to falsify anything.

What a bunch of dumb ideas.

Learn how to use wget or curl to archive a web site.
https://gist.github.com/mullnerz/9ff8935f3d6b4435f1b

You can then feed the results to YaCy

https://yacy.net/

Learn how to create photo albums with fgallery.

https://github.com/wavexx/fgallery

Could not be easier. Just run fgallery on a directory full of photos and voila, you get a photo gallery that you can serve up with the most basic web server like mini-httpd.

Learn how to archive and serve up your e-books with Calibre

Learn how to serve up your media files and photos with mini-DLNA which VLC supports.

You have only yourselves to blame if you rely on archive.org or any other web based service to store data that is important to you. Stop whining and get busy.

▲ ▼ Reply ▸

shin · 1 week ago

The more you use a Terminal with command line, the more you will get used to it.

- Open up a Terminal (Press the <Ctrl><Alt>t keys simultaneously)
- Type mkdir foo
- Type cd foo
- Type nano index.html
- Paste in the following lines

<!DOCTYPE html>
<html>
    <head>
        <title>Example</title>
    </head>
    <body>
        This is an example of a simple HTML page with one paragraph.
    </body>
</html>

- Type <Ctrl>x then y and then <Enter>
- Start a simple web server with the following command
  - python3 -m http.server
- Open a web browser and enter the following URL http://localhost:8000/

And voila, you have created your first web page and served it up with your own web server.

You can use the command python3 -m http.server to serve up photo galleries created with fgallery. Calibre has its own built in web server. It is really not that hard and just requires a little time investment which I know all of you ZHers have plenty of.

The best thing is to use is a search engine. For example, if you are trying figure out how to do something in LibreOffice, search for it on the Internet. Plenty of tutorials on the Internet including on YouTube. For command line utilities type in man in a terminal.

For example man grep

If you want to know how to use man type man man

You can also type in man grep in a search engine to get manual page.

There are plenty of Linux Users Groups around the country. Find one and attend. Many have virtual meetings and all of them will be happy to answer your questions. Who knows? You may even make a new friend.

Here is an incomplete list

This is actually very important topic.

The books are being re-written and changed and the digital footprint then doesn't exist for the older edition. You have to buy a physical book to avoid the "edits".

They will try (and they will fail) to do the same with the internet record.

Their censorship will backfire but a lot of good information will be lost forever.

Internet Archive is an extremely important part of the internet when one looks for the truth. When it fails, and it will it will be a tragedy and I don't think I'm exaggerating here.

Children of grieving parents dropping dead right after being jabbed.

Tens of thousands of people murdered by hospitals before the jab via vents.

Tens of thousands of people dying alone because of forced separation during a fake pandemic.

22 veterans per day committing suicide.

700,000 dead Ukraine soldiers and 70,000 dead Russian soldiers since Feb, 2022 because a March, 2022 peace deal was stopped by Brandon's handlers.

Tens of thousands of sex trafficked foreign and American kids in the United States, many murdered after they're "used up."

Over 200 billion to cause 700,000 dead Ukrainian soldiers being the best money ever spent by Lindsey Graham, Liz Cheney, and Chuck Schumer.

Paying tens of billions to kill over one hundred thousand Palestinians whose government killed 1200 Israeli's.

Yeah, we have our priorities straight.

It just makes me chuckle how consistent and predictable the jews are who own these various websites and other media. They simply cannot tolerate any truth or facts being out there for curious people to discover. ((They)) fictitious and malevolent narratives MUST be the storylines in order for them to retain their nefarious power.

I chuckle because I know that, like a man-made dam, it cannot hold back the immense pressure of the water forever. Truth presses against this mountain of lies continuously. It also acts as precipitation... raining down upon the mountain's sides constantly eroding it little by little. So, it is inevitable that this insane world ((they)) have constructed for us will not last. What WE can and must do is be pressing and raining waters upon their fragile and crumbling media edifices.

Some years ago I noticed that big pieces of William Luther Pierce's radio show had disappeared from their site .

This was just after Alex Knight/Warren Kinsella and their ex-pansexual, NPR had stopped airing opposing views and YouTube had nuked from orbit pretty much every White right leaning channel.

I ripped them a new one in an email and received a reply from an actual human fairly high up in Archive's food chain which explained it was a copyright issue with Pierce's successors and that Archive didn't censor anything but Cheese Pizza.

Every January since, while they have matching funds available, I send them 50 bucks and will likely leave them a piece of my estate.

The Internet has always been temporary, and paper media is owned by large publishing houses. Nevertheless if you want something that lasts more than 2 weeks you need print. Paper gives you maybe 200 years, up to 500.

If you want to keep something from a web site you have to download it, if you want it to last longer than your PC, you should probably print it. Useful tools include MHT file downloaders, they download all the text, images etc and store it as a single archive file. Alternatively Print to PDF.

DarkWaterCurtainUnleashed pencil 1 week ago

Have been printing everything, despite being laughed at by Millennials.

Data Possum 1 week ago

Depends on your reason for saving the page. If you're trying to keep information from being lost -- like contact information, how-to manuals, etc. -- then printing makes sense. Printing AND saving to a USB drive is even better.

But for this use case, i.e. proving that a certain website said a certain thing at a certain time, it won't work. Your opponents can claim that you edited the underlying HTML before it was printed or screenshotted. The Wayback Machine avoids this by having the Internet Archive itself access and save the webpage, so the user could not edit it.

It's not an accident...they are losing total control of the narrative and they are doing everything in their power to stop that.

The internet satraps (Internet Archive/Wayback Machine, Google, every tech company you can think of) know where their power comes from. While they may have their squabbles, they know they need the Hydra to survive and they will not tolerate any kind of external threat to the Hydra. They are closing ranks and circling the wagons.

Most of the low IQ hatherls think the Internet Archive is run by "good people". The Pravda commissar known as Taylor Lorenz has had her entire past scrubbed off the internet and you can not find ANYTHING about her or her past. Know why? She has family/connections at the Internet Archive and they scrubbed everything about her. Of course, you'll find numerous articles from the Establishment shitting on this notion and "debunking" it. However, you know it stinks like open ass when every pravda outlet releases an "article" and they all have the same talking points.

None of these places were maliciously hacked or had DDoS attacks against them. They've made some "changes" so they can't be called out and there is no longer a record for their lying and manipulation.

The good news is, it isn't going to work. Most people already know to immediately take screen shots...

WHO POSTED COPYRIGHT ONTO THE WORLD!

The British Crown.

WHY?

To Enable Censorship of all BIBLES (printed material) Not 'Approved' by the 'Royal Seal' following advent of the Guttenburg Press, which enabled the People to more easily reproduce material critical of the monarchy.

EXAMPLE:

- The Geneva Bible (1599)
- The first Bible translated by literate lay people from the original Sanskrit & Greek, i.e not approved by 'Royal Appointed Censors.'
- The original primary Bible of the New World.
- A Bible said by President John Adams to have been essential to laying the theology & philosophy of 1776.

In response, the Crown began publishing the 'King James' Bible, which edited out any translations/chapters/verses that questioned unchecked loyalty/Obedience to Earthly 'rulers.'

One of the greatest Wayback finds was the fact that Sandy Hook Elementary had been closed for almost 5 years, and electrical utilities and internet were suddenly activated there 2 months prior to the CIAs Sandy Hoax false flag shooting (which never actually happened).

And of course there's the incredible amount of Semantic scripting that went into it.

'Sandy Hook' - 666 in Sumerian cipher, just like 'computer', 'internet', 'Jack Dorsey', 'Elon Musk', 'Statve of Lvofer' (Liberty), and a whole lot of others. It's all number games to the parasites.

THE PRESENT TENSE

https://davidjoseph.com

November carpet, leaf by leaf
Do the trees have some relief
As we would when our dead skin falls
Away from wounds, the same at all?

We are alive and so are they
Except we move, trees stationary
In regard to being rooted
To which a tree not we are suited

We must move and all replace
From place to place, or at least pace
From wall to wall within a room
Especially when facing doom

So the ruin of us comes
Then goes on to distant Kingdoms
Then wreaks havoc on those too
How many will be left- a few?

The number is immense
Even in the present tense

The hack on internet archive was performed by 'anonymous syria' they possibly borrowed 'killnetts' attack servers to perform it , attack servers are rented by the attack to be performed.

Approx $500 per attack.

I know this because i was on the back-end of IA the moment that it happened, i was gathering data with an application that i wrote.

The site was down for several days after, the 'save the webpage ' feature was probably the attack vector so it's just easier to take it down , it will probably come back up when someone in san fransisco works out how to re write the service without the attack vector.

The wayback machine is under attack in more ways than 1. Companies are starting to litigate against them and they lost an important case recently , opening the floodgates for the whole sick crew to join in.

Internet Archive Wayback Machine was compromised when Obama got into office. He ordered all federal agencies to begin pulling down all archived web pages and documents. My girlfriend at the time was on OBGYN. One night she was telling me all sorts of sick facts about certain races and sexually transmitted diseases. She pulled up the fed web pages to prove it. All of that was taken down. My first realization of what was going on. Then Obama began removing Wayback Machine web pages and documents. I always wondered why billionaires who call themselves Republicans don't invest in creating their own search engines and archive machines. They could make profits far beyond any of their investments. But billionaires are hand picked, allowed, controlled.

▲ 1 ▼ Reply

Fairlaidoit · 1 week ago

This was always inevitable. A friend of mine, Oliver Penrin, wrote an excellent short story about it back in the nineties. The IDEA is for all information to become subject to "correction" at the will of Authorities. Like Wikipedia, you can only trust online information when there is no one with an axe to grind. Nor is this new. My classic example is an "historical" article on WAPO early in 2020 that claims the coronavirus is the 1918 Spanish Flu epidemic that modern science has/had definitively demonstrated that face masks were useless against the transmission of airborne viruses. The next day, Fauci and the CDC came out parroting in favor of universal masking. The article, which had been on the "front page" of the online edition, disappeared into the bowels of the site, and three days later it was wheeled off into the pay-per-view archives.

NOTHING on the web is permanent. If you want to save it, print it, preferably to hard copy, but at least to PDF stored on your own hard drive. If you want to be sure a contact sees the article you read, share it as such a file, not as a link. BTW, this is part of why I stopped using Kindle. It's unnerving to have the text of a story, even a cheap novel, change the next time you read it. Even the versions stored on your own drive only last until the next time you sign into your Amazon account. Then, anything is up for automatic revision.

This isn't a bug, it's a feature. This is what They always intended. To define knowledge is to control the world. If you don't want your world controlled by outsiders, take steps. Never, ever count on a "service" you have no control over, like the Wayback Machine, to protect you. Of course, anyone reading this, being a Hedgie, is a fellow paranoid and knows all about it.

Since the past is so critically important why is the Wayback Machine the only institution doing this? More backups are needed to protect against natural disasters and malicious hacks. Will no one finance more such setups?

Censorship, however contrived, must be considered a crime with a mandatory death penalty and everyone and every institution should be held responsible.

Increasingly, the world desperately needs the WomCam from Arthur Clarke and Stephen Baxter's novel, In the Light of other Days. This device allows a camera to look through a wormhole in space-time to view and record any event anywhere in the universe at any time, past or present. Anyone can view any event at anytime anywhere.

This particular curse needs to be visited on everyone for tolerating the temerity and arrogance of censorship advocates. The WomCam would put an end to this nonsense forever. Read the novel.

I wish I still had my World Book set. One entry showed US Air Force planes cloud seeding.

The parable of the Grinch is apt.

They can steal the tree and the toys, but never break the spirit.

Wow, serious red flag for what's planned. The election results will not be accepted and they'll rewrite everything to show a trail of some crime or situation to debunk the results. Stay frosty. We're headed to a new level of gaslight. Hope Elon has built internet archiving into his new massive AI data center.

They control the election results, dummy!

2020 was a hand-off not a steal.

DHS administered!

Getting beet juice down really is not an easy task for me. I liked the spinach juice better.

Rumble is full of videos banned on YouTube and elsewhere.

Russia bans access to Rumble. Betrays Russia's true allegiances and agenda, supporting global zio.

Only imbeciles refuse to see it.

Ukraine was going to declare neutrality and then the western MIC decided a million dead Ukrainians and Russians wasn't an issue. Get your facts straight.

Ukraine was meddled with by Russia, with its installed moscow puppet Yanu. The time of neutrality is apparently over.

Get to the front lines hero boy. Its time for the big talkers to be the ones to do the fighting. Trumps FIRST job will be to tell the assholes in Ukraine they're on their own and need to declare neutrality and accept the terms dictated by the Russian winners. The US has MORE IMPORTANT issues to focus on like their financial survival.

Law & Order SVU or a Dobbler nightclub murder episode way back when.

It's been replaced unless you own the original DVD, Season 3 if I recall.

You fret over your technological construct. It's all you care about.

You don't care about any of the other fucking bullshit you pretend to care about.

At the end of the day, this is EXACTLY what you fret over.

Suck a fucking Dick!
