Chemically Nucleated Snow, What Is It?

What's up with the snow?

People around the globe have taken notice of what appears to be very strange characteristics of the snow falling of late. The snow does not appear to melt in a usual fashion and many report the snow emits a chemical smell when exposed to an open flame. Is this possible?

The short answer is yes. Though I can not speak directly about the flame experiments since there is no rain in most of California let alone snow, and cannot conduct my own test. I and others have long since been sounding the alarm about the artificially/chemically nucleated snow that has been and is a major component of geoengineering.

What are the known elements showing up in the snow during the last decade?

Lab tests of snow have repeatedly shown extremely high levels of aluminum and barium. Of course there are always the “debunkers” that try to tell us its “normal” to have these heavy metals in our rain and snow. The disinformation trolls have tried particularly hard to convince the public that there is nothing wrong with toxic metal laden precipitation. Any that believe such patently false statements are likely not willing to face the truth no matter how compelling the evidence.

Can snow really be artificially nucleated with chemicals and charged metallic particles? Can snow storms be engineered?

The short answer is again yes. Snow storms can and are being engineered from top to bottom.

What is an “Endothermic Reaction” ?

An endothermic reaction is the opposite of an exothermic reaction. With an exothermic reaction, like an explosion, energy and heat are released. With an endothermic reaction energy and heat are absorbed. In the case of the artificial snow storms, this energy and heat is absorbed from the atmosphere and precipitation. Such a reaction can “cool things down”, at least for a while.

So what elements can cause such a reaction?

Barium and ammonium are two. We know barium is in the snow, numerous lab tests prove this.

How much can an endothermic reaction drop temperatures?

The endothermic process can almost instantly drop temperatures from far above freezing to well below freezing and beyond.

Why is there very little water appearing when chemically nucleated snow is melted?

Partial “sublimation” is perhaps a factor in this equation. Sublimation is the process of conversion from a solid directly to a gas, such as what occurs with dry ice. There is a great deal we still do not know and can not know about the composition of this “snow”, but it would stand to reason that certain chemical constituents in artificially nucleated snow could cause the behavior being observed. Some have reported a more usual melting phenomenon from “older” samples of this “snow”. It is also possible that some of the chemical elements in this snow lose their potency over time. Again, there is much we can not know. What is certain from numerous lab tests already taken is that much, if not most, if not all of the snow now falling is toxic. It is also certain that we are now seeing snow fall regularly at temperatures far above freezing. There is also no denying the fact that engineered snow storms are a reality as the links below this article confirm.

Average

Temperature Departures From 30 Year

The planet is in meltdown and the climate engineers are doing everything they can to hide this fact. This includes the use of toxic chemicals and metals in the creation of engineered snow storms. While main stream media (and unfortunately even many “independent” media sites) are falsely claiming the planet is cooling, the bigger picture is clear for any that choose to look past climate engineering and media hype. While it was snowing in northern Florida recently, Alaska was experiencing its warmest January on record. While the climate engineers and their Weather Channel cheer leaders were doing their best to keep the focus on the parade of theatrically named engineered “winter” storms, Australian had its warmest year on record. In fact, the bottom line on planet earth is this, it is getting hotter fast. Although the climate engineers and their media friends can fool many with their engineered chemical storms and spun media hype, Earth has just had its 37th consecutive year of above normal temperatures and has had 346 consecutive months of above normal temperatures, period. The geoengineers can create profound short term cooling, but it comes at the cost of a completely contaminated planet and a worsened overall warming. The power structure and main stream media has changed their mission from disclosing the warming to suit their agenda, to one of doing everything they can to hide the warming as they have now invested all on climate engineering. Those that wish to have any chance of a future for themselves and their posterity need to help with the effort to expose and stop climate engineering. This fight will take all of us and the battle must be won or it will soon enough be game over.

There was no such thing a global warming. We are at the beginning of what will probably be a major ice age. The last one ice was two thousand feet thick north of the Missouri River in MO. Look up John Moore, global warming what the government is not telling you. on youtube. But your snow is radiated snow from the accident in Japan. The whole Pacific ocean is dying. The contaminated water in the Pacific is due into the Northwest next month, and as it sweeps south everything in the water including swimmers will die. You are supposed to wear a radiation hazmat suit when the radiation reaches 1000 rads. The current level on the beaches is 5000 which mans burning is not just coming from the sun. For those who have not been brainwashed by the gov education system look up Revelation chapter 8. By the way the Pacific Ocean is one third of the worlds oceans.

I lived in South Central Oregon when the Japan Nuclear accident happened. What you have there is radiated snow. It does not melt because of the radiation at its core. The burning is the radiation reaction on your skin.

It's great to see how people are doing their own snow tests and reporting the just plain bizarre nature of all we're experiencing. Just a word of caution. There is not much water in normal snow. An inch of rain become a foot of snow. That said, we do know for sure that it should melt to water, should not scorch and blacken, and definitely not have a chemical smell.

On one experiment with a blow torch, the moisture might have evaporated upon exposure. But it still looked very strange, there being no moisture dripping.

Please keep talking, tell anyone will listen. Who wouldn't wake up when they hear the snow won't melt and smells awful?

Peace and Perseverance. The tide is rising.

We live on 10 acres here in Tennessee up in the Appalachians at 2500 feet. People here love to have lawns; not us. We've lived here 9 yrs and long ago quit the lawn. We discovered that when we didn't mow, the wild herbs would grow instead. Now we have lots of herbs which cure and help with many illnesses. One "weed" we have is sheep sorrel, an ingredient of Essiac. Scientific research has shown that sheep sorrel actually melts tumors. There is more, much, much more. I gather the herbs every spring and summer and make tea with them and use them for various ailments – they always help. Lawns are expensive, dry up in drought and useless. However, most of our land is woods and each year they get thinner and thinner due to less leaves on the trees. We've also lost tons of trees, including one huge old oak, which had rotted at its core. We see lots of broken limbs, too, from the heavy snowfall. I've read that COPD has now become an epidemic; I had to put my beloved horse down due to COPD, I believe from chemtrails. He was the light of my life. Now my cat has asthma, never did before and my husband wakes up with LOTS of goop in his eyes and complains of chemical smells outside and when we leave the window open at night. We are heartsick, this place was paradise when we moved here and the light was golden. It was a beautiful place, now every single plant and tree is sick and lots less wildlife. Just in 9 years, we've lost a number of bird species. Hell is too good for these psychopaths, there has to be something worse for them in the hereafter.

I live in Oregon and the previous storm we had, the snow did not melt for over 10 days even though the temperatures were in the 40's and 50's. This last storm we got a foot of snow that actually burned my hands if I didn't rinse them after walking my dog. I have been having vertigo but figured it was due to sinus. I also have developed an itchy rash on my shins since this last snow. This time the snow melted in about 4 hours due to rain. I could not believe how fast it melted when we had already tried to burn it and like the other videos, it turned black and smelled like plastic or styrofoam burning. Just saying. It is all over. I lived in Alaska for years and never saw snow like this stuff.

Nan B, I get dizzy on heavy spray days too! Along with feeling completely out of sorts- contact lenses feel scratchy and throat does too. But the dizziness and disoriented feeling is what I dislike most. Today we actually have a scant amount of rain here in socal. No trails the last 2 days, but the past week or so they were spraying quite a bit. It's horrible.

I wonder if anyone saw Rachel Maddow's horrendous commentary on the non-melting snow. It was pathetic, but sadly predictable. I tried to post dissenting comment but the link didn't seem to work.

At first I was elated that the subject was even mentioned, albeit mockingly. It can only be a good thing to get the discussion started regardless of context right? It's my hope that many people do their own snow test! The debunkers are telling us the snow is normal and there's a perfectly scientific reason why it doesn't melt. But I'm guessing you folks who have a long history with snow would know better.

Nana B, I keep wondering why so many people have Vertigo these days. Maybe it is what you were talking about.

Also, I performed the snow test and also think it has chemicals. I am so sensitive to chemicals so when I burned my snow (indoors, not good) I could taste the chemicals in my chest.

In reply to W.W.'s post, (it's a rather important one and thus worthy of it's all CAP wording !).

I-myself live near Lake Michigan, and I recall the first time I had happened to actually notice numerous chem/vapor-trails spread all across the sky and became somewhat concerned...

I had stepped outdoors for only a little over an hour's time one day,, and when I first went outside and looked up to see how cloudy the day was, I then hadn't taken any notice of the entire sky being unusual in any way, (either because there were no vapor-trails, or just one or two as normally seen), but before I went back inside, I then looked for the position of the setting sun and noticed no less than seven (nearly parallel & equally spaced) East/West oriented vapor-trails spreading-out across the overhead sky,, of which, had already become spread-out most widely at the most northern sky locations and with the most freshly created & less expanded examples located more-so towards the southern sky. And then I immediately wondered to myself how-the-heck so many vapor-trails could possibly get placed across the entire sky without me noticing any of them while they were being made

IN SUCH A SHORT TIME-PERIOD!?

But like most any average-person going about their day, I didn't pay much of any real concern about it. Has anyone ever seen any of the suspect aircraft which are responsible for laying-out such multiple chem.sky-trails, and perhaps also taken telephoto/zoomed pictures of those craft, to try & identify the exact type of aircraft spreading their sky-seeding ?

It likely could rather be done by unmarked standard-type aircraft which are actually under the control of ROUGE-gov.sources (instead of the standard-channels of the actual 'Air Force'),, or, the sky-seeding effort could possibly be done, (if I dare say so), rather by stealthy unidentifiable aircraft ?

In addition... there have certainly been other times when too many innocent human-beings later suffered from past examples of mass aerial-spraying efforts ! – Ever heard of Agent-Orange for example ?

But rather than merely put the northern half of a small country into the horrible stress of dealing with the consequences of unexpected side-effects,, THIS TIME, could put the whole northern-hemisphere into similar such dire-straits !

Maybe there's some kind of other living being which can now (or in the not too distant future), be able to withstand (or even thrive on) any other additional effects which the suspect sky-spraying may likely also perform against the present world environment ?

Could it possibly be that we common human-being/folks are already too late & powerless to be able to do anything about actually stopping the ball from rolling ?

If we really care at all about our children's future livelihood, then we best not let this snowball keep rolling without even trying to find-out what's really going-on !

It seems we may need to be aware that all this is actually (at least) a 'One/Two-Punch'...
First-punch is the obviously direct effect of the fake-snow & cold-weather, (leading to us all needing to burn more natural-gas & other fuels which ADDS to the effect of global-warming, thus-then tending to cancel-out the intended-effect of the fake snow),, then next the likely intended 'second-punch' is when our population-numbers are reduced due to decreased life-expectancy (due to the poisonous by-product effects so widely spread amongst us), thus leading to less people needing to be kept warm by future fuel-burning, and apparently THEN further assisting with the intended goal of MERELY-helping to cool-down the earth. (?)

Likely the involved-powers even have a third-punch install for us all as well (so as to make this seemingly over-hasty plan all so worth it's ware).

However the snow banks are frozen sm0, but "not melting" & leaving pools of water, nor re-freezing at nite. The undercover of half-inch sm0's the past three weeks just allows a pileup that sinks from bottom.

My snow melting experiments. This outcome below is repeatable with the same result. Done at room temperature. Outside -7C (Central Ontario)

After thirty minutes, one (full) pint jar of 'light weight' (not dense) snow mass shrunk to 40% by volume, but so far, not a drop of water. Texture of snow, not changing much, still same consistency/density to the touch, except the bottom 10% appears bluish, being super-saturated with water settling at the bottom of the mass but trapped or clinging to the vertical snow column structure, rather than forming freely at the bottom of the jar, which is by now 50% visible, open to the air and dry. This snow is not melting, its sublimating. Remember eating a Popsicle as a kid? You had to eat it fast before it melted on your hand. This snow is not melting folks.

At 40 min, original mass at 25% – still no free water in the bottom of the jar. Water-saturated snow at bottom of remaining snow has climbed to almost half way up the shrinking column. The snow 'seems' to be sublimating. Its containing its water as it shrinks, water traveling up the snow column.

At 50 min, original mass at 20% , supersaturated moisture height at 50% , half way up the shrinking vertical snow column – begin to see the start of water forming at bottom of snow column, clinging to it – still no free water in jar's bottom. Sublimation?

At 55 min, snow mass at 15% and free water formed could be slightly more than one teaspoon, but no more than a tablespoon of water (wierd). Blue colored super saturation of remaining snow column at 90%. I'm pretty sure by now this 'snow' has been shrinking due to sublimation.

At 70 min i have four to five tablespoons of water (25 ml) , and 5% to 7% of the original mass now slush.

At 80 min, a small knob of slush, say 4% of original jar mass 1/2 submerged in about 50 ml of water

At 90 min, knob of slush is 80% submerged, slight increase to water volume. Water displacement is about 12% (1/8th) of original jar volume full of snow.

At 105 min, I have only water in the jar.

Additional notes. The slush knob, observed up close, contained a lot of trapped gas molecules, like an ice cube, which could be seen underwater to expel in spheres, like carbonation. I'm guessing the snow melting in the jar produces some kind of endothermic process.

Having been around snow for a good part of life, experienced snow in every way imaginable, this snow is different. I can remember melting snow in a 48 oz tin can many times while ice fishing, on the coal stove to make coffee and such. Snow melts into water, not into a gas.

Although there was a respectable amount of water left in the pint jar, at the end, I've never seen snow sublimate, and some part of the mass must have done exactly that. Some reaction was holding the water in that structure, vertically suspended for an hour.

Try it yourself. See how your snow melts at room temperature and if you think if that's how snow should melt. No two snowfalls are the same, just as no two snowflakes are the same but their changes-of-state physical properties should obey natural laws.

James

That's right Greg. I just ask people to notice that the chemtrails are in grid patterns or parallel most of the time. For commercial airliners to do that, would waste incredible amounts of fuel. Here in Atlanta, its easy to figure out,because the planes all come in from the east of the airport, and leave out the west side. So its easy to understand that if planes are doing anything else, then they are not commercial jetliners. Of course, people cannot figure this out if they don't look up and criticize it.

I am in Connecticut and we have had a three inch snow cover on the ground for awhile due to below freezing temps. The temps reached forty degrees yesterday and today, and unlike the melt run off from melting snow, it just seemed to slowly evaporate. The roads are dry, even under the edges of the snow. I also brought some in and did the “original” burn tests and my snow stunk like burnt plastic. When leaving a snowball on my counter it took over 9 hours to start to leave water under it. I emailed the Ct. Dept of Environmental Protection and received an answer stating in amazement that they had no reports of anything but would let me know if they did. (yeah, right) Please contact your State and demand answers. If anyone has access to a lab where this snow can be tested, it would be helpful to have it done and documented.

For those of you having trouble convincing people about chemtrails just give up, you'll never convince them otherwise.

I live close to greater Lexington, KY airport. Had shown coworkers chemtrails constantly, they always say it's just normal plain trails. So, there happened to be a day, where there was blue clear skies and I said, "huh, the airport must be closed, cause there are no trails in the sky today." Believe it or not, one lady proceeded to call and verify if the airport was closed for the day. She didn't say another word about them and of course, the airport was open.

There's no doubt something is seriously wrong. I live in South Alabama about 20 miles north of the Northern Florida line. I've also known what snow is supposed to look like and behave for most of my 74 years. What fell here was so radically different from anything I know anything about that I am 100% certain it was engineered. "Arctic blast" was a bullshit story to cover the anomalous nature of the storm. It was ten or twelve degrees below freezing when I took my two dogs out for a walk at my country home, just before bedtime for the night, around 9 PM. A sheet of snow-appearing ice covered the ground. It was hard and slick. What was falling from the sky was wet and slushy and I had to use an umbrella. When it hit the house roof it behaved as water and trickled into icicles at the edge of the roof, but when it hit the other substance on the ground, it froze instantly and added to what was already there. Ordinary water in 20 degrees air does not turn into slush while it's coming down then freeze instantly on the ground. Not in Southern Alabama. Either it is ice or snow accompanying ice or snow, but not slushy water. Further, it has been quite warm in these two days since the ground turned all white, but all the whiteness is not gone yet, as long should be the case. Anything in the shade refuses to melt. So yes, this is government hanky-panky to the max. The deniers will be happily smiling dumb smiles at Officer Friendly's "benign" antics until the bullet crashes into the backs of heads. How many millions of times has it happened in the history of a sick, evil humankind now? Ah, but it can't happen again, right? Ha, ha, ha.

I am having the same problem here in Harbor Beach, Michigan. I performed a similar experiment and found that the snow is not melting. I noticed that prior to the snowfall, there were massive chemtrails in the sky along with loud booms. The loud booms sounded at regular intervals throughout the day and were strong enough to create a rumble throughout the house.

On a spiritual/religious standpoint – so many people are feeling the pull to go green so to speak. Many are feeling the urge to do away with their lawns and grow their own produce. It's not just a fad, this is coming from people who have never grown anything before and it's not from reading it somewhere online. They feel the pull – from a spiritual/religious standpoint God/Creator/Nature is asking US for help. Big business and governments will not do anything to change this because it's all about MONEY and CONTROL for them – if we all extend our planter beds, removing more grass and growing plants, veggies, flowers, etc.. we can help clean up the air. 1 sq ft of grass that is 2 inches tall really does nothing to clear the air – yet 1 sq ft of any plant that grows tall will cover more square inches of air to clean. I know it seems like an endless battle with all the governments are doing to help pollute the environment and world, but doing this on a global scale with billions of people going green can change what the governments are doing to the planet.

Thank you Donna I will make sure Dane has a look at you invitation, and thank you for doing your own research. The more people we can get to do their own test asap the better. After this story goes main stream you have to know the geoengineers and spin doctors are going to be all over this trying to cover their tracks. We have received similar reports confirming this fake snow not melting from from coast to coast in the USA, Coast to Coast in Canada, Denmark and other global locations. This clearly not an isolated incident of A few geoengineering testing areas.

We live in northeast Washington and have been subject to the same drought conditions that California is experiencing. At last, it snowed yesterday. Today we watched the clip “Shouldn't Snowballs Melt?” and decided to try it ourselves. We got snow that just fell last night off our deck, made a ball, and held it over a 300 degree wood stove. It took 7 minutes to get a water drop! Ghastly stuff! And I see the kids outside eating it, like we used to do when we were kids. But nobody I know wants to hear it.

If I had the money, I would rent a billboard and try to get people's attention that way. I would take out whole page ads in the local newspaper. If someone wanted to hire me, I would work full time to put a stop to this insanity.

I'm wondering, if the endothermic action of the chemicals or the absorption of heat causes the extreme cold; all of these chemicals are in the soil and water. When the absorption of these chemicals reach critical mass so to speak is that when the atmosphere will enter runaway heating? Just as the chemicals in the snowball absorbed the heat from the stove until critical mass, and only then began to melt?

AWESOME INFO! THANKS! After observing, recording my own weather and researching, these tests and reports in the article come the closest to the truth. So the question remains, why is the planet 'warming' if it is?...and WHERE, other than those you already mentioned? Droughts in CA are intentionally created via 'aerosol spraying' or lack thereof and the manipulation of the Jetstream by-passing CA whereas the East coast and Midwest experience FLOODS.

And what is the latest push on 'solar flares'? Real or imagined or just plain hype? And how do volcanoes, methane gas factor into these scheme?

There is no doubting the warmth in Alaska. It has never been this warm in January, and I've been here over thirty years. In the short term I'm worried about our beloved dog sled races due to start shortly. In the long term, knowing what we all know from this site, I'm worried about everything. When I first came, I felt good being off the beaten track. Who could have foreseen Alaska both playing such a terrible role in this crime (with HAARP) and also being so profoundly affected by the manipulation?

I'm not at all minimizing the global effects being reported. It seems like California is being murdered, set up for Monsanto to take over. The new farm bill has extra money for crop insurance. Yeah, right. If this goes on too long, nothing will grow there ever again, I'm afraid. So we cannot let that happen.

My thanks to Dane, Yvonne, Troy and everyone here who works so hard on this desperate cause. We are in solidarity and grateful for your tireless efforts to help us know.

Okay, so at first, when I saw the report on it snowing above freezing, I was a bit skeptical. I wondered if I would ever witness that. Well, we have had several snow days, this year so far.. more snow than I have seen in years and I been around a long time. We have had freezing temperatures at an unusual rate as far as I can estimate. My son was just trapped in the snow storm that hit Atlanta, trapped in his car for over 12 hours. But one day a few days ago, it snowed and it was 43 degrees. The temperature quickly dropped, but I saw that, and then I said, wow, it's happening here. I live in NJ. The weather is beyond bizarre, the sky is crazy covered in trails, and I get dizzy when I go outside. Unfortunately, there are more deniers than there are folks who are paying attention and taking notes. All you really have to do is "look up". Dane, thanks for all your hard work on this issue. The videos are going around about "fake snow" and the debunkers are running after them. This article helps to clarify the science. Thanks again, you are much appreciated.
