I've wailed, and wailed about Flock cameras and data centers, and Palentir and surveillance authorities.

Then I had a small thought. Remembering the 1980's, and abject fear of Japan international competitor. How Japan was better organized, had better management and manufacturing principles, how their disciplined workforce was so superior to our own.

Schools abandoned the tradition of Spanish, French, and Latin as the standard language options in high school in favor of adding Japanese to the curriculum. Magazines showed the Japanese Flag as their entire cover, and warned of the 'Rising Sun'.

Movies were made where the superior Japanese firm came to see their US subsidiary and our American manager trembled at the thought of being measured and even outdone by the stern, intelligent, and yes even superior Japanese businessman.

And then.

And then the Japanese economy overheated, they faced their own economic crisis. Interest rates and lending went haywire in Japan, rents in the cities raised to a proportion that no one was no longer attached to the cash flow of the business real estate question, and suddenly Japan as a major economic force and power dissipated.

into a prolonged hibernation, and no one has talked about Japan as an economic power since.

Not only did all fear of Japan as some major competitor subside, all talk of Japan subsided. Where once Tokyo was discussed as much as the Japanese language in tenth grade language class, all talk of Japan disappeared. And hasn't been resurrected since.

Hey, the CD-ROM as a necessary computer attachment rose and fell pretty quickly too, maybe once the powers-that-be assembled all that data on us, the idea they learned that the bulk of US males are sitting on the Barcalounger with a bottle watching the ballgame all night, in just about every home in the nation, won't be of much use to them all. And they will have spent billions to learn what just about any casual observer of Americans already knows.

We are a mindless society by large, easily distracted by worthless entertainment as "Bewitched", "The Beverly Hillbillies", or worse "Petticoat Junction". A small amount of cleavage and the show was top ten. Go figure. I don't even want to mention "Gong Show".

After all, when the powers-that-be in tech introduced the greatest invention known to man to the masses, the laptop computer, with all of the knowledge gathered since humans climbed from the primordial ooze in one place, the average man decided to use this device to find porn sites and pull their pants down around their own ankles.

Can you imagine spending billions to explore the intricacies of such an animal?

Kings were kings because they understood the concept of "bread and circuses" and clearly. That, and if you pay the knights circle very well and make sure the families eat the choicest of meats from the forest, they will agree to hunt down the most starving of peasants and slaughter him, and his entire family for poaching.

even the feather off of one of the “king’s animals” within the kingdom.

“Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown”, but only because some enterprising well-fed knight might figure out just how easy a knife blade works on the king the same way it does a peasant.

I’ve long admired the intellectual, the true intellectual, right about until the time they figured out that perhaps they were tied to the CIA and had an underlying agenda to promote the Deep State’s wishes, and in Neo Con fashion, to use our patriotism against us all, to keep the flow of cash moving in large amounts toward the military industrial complex. And yes, I’m looking at you Bill Buckley, now deceased.

Has there been any “talking head” on screen that didn’t have a hidden agenda, a paid mouthpiece, and whose design was to steer the opinion of the American public? Perhaps we all need to take another look at Pat Buchanan in his prime, he may have been the lone wolf of truth tellers ever placed in front of the camera.

I know this, Victor David Hansen is the common sense farmer version of Congressman John Kennedy, with that bit of drawl, that homespun approach, and a touch of whit. The man is a construct, he might as well be an Israeli-bot, promoting things pro-Israel and pro-war. Somehow the American public just eats that crap up whole. A paid operative if ever there was one.

Which all prompts yet another question, is formerly bow-tied Tucker Carlson the modern day version of Bill Buckley, a man whose grasp of the English language and powers of persuasion appear to be genuine, but are as scripted by the Deep State? Is it the Bill Buckley-Gore Vidal daytime television argument?

Seems as if it was just last week that we were all told that Iraq is our greatest enemy, it has houses and funds “terrorists”, and needs to be destroyed. This week Iran has taken their place. “Cecelia, you're breaking my heart, you're shaking my confidence daily”.

Remember Afghanistan? Good times, good times. I wonder how many soldiers witness all the Bacha Bazi? Hey, wasn't it Obama's army by that time, with the Obama created within our military, perhaps a better question is, did our soldiers participation in the Bacha Bazi? "Jubilant, she loves me again, I fall on the floor laughing".

I no longer watch the news on television, the shame I'd feel for spending even a minute watching that propaganda from the purchased idiots and weaklings would cause me to cut myself shaving since I'd have to have my eyes closed. I'd be too embarrassed to keep my eyes open looking at myself in the mirror.

I no longer seek information in the mainstream, as I realize now they are part of the problem which is causing us all to seek solutions.

The really smart man, the really intelligent man, the man of true wisdom near omniscience, the man who has come to the final conclusion that the only solution is the full and final eradication of those who are problematic, that man will be the last survivor.

Of course in a world where one is admonished for taking some measure of gleeful demise of sissified sell-out Lindsey "Ladybug" Graham, the idea of finding any intelligence out there is called into question.

How absolutely laugh-out-loud funny is it, that our only salvation might be that they have the surveillance complex up and running in full, connected to Flock cameras, every computer and phone, Siri, Alexa, through the Wal Mart Vizio and on, and on, they find out that the average American idiot likes Krispy Kreme donuts, enjoys a cheap cold beer, loves a fat juicy hamburger, and watching po

Has the braintrust at Palentir seen the crowds at a Savannah Banana game? Has Ellison and his hand-picked crew ever been to a Buffalo Bills tailgate, and wat they flop from on high onto a folding table, breaking one in half?

Perhaps one day instead of fear of a Japan, or this fear of a surveillance state, we all instead be sitting back laughing about how the elite spent a few trillion dollars to figure out the average American idiot enjoys “Gomer Pyle USMC” reruns holding a bag of Flamin’ Hot Cheetos. And never figures out in real life Gomer is gay.

LMAO, I’m dying’, I’m dyin’.

Or at least I hope to be.

We can’t trust Tucker, Fuentes is a Fed Op, they murdered Mr. Goody Two Shoes in Utah, I’m down to Jimmy Fucking Dore as the only human alive that can be trusted online.

Israel is using our own funds to pay tens of thousands to lie to us all full-time, politicians we elect because they say all the right things end up being owned by them and doing Israel’s bidding full-time, even overtime.

I sit and cannot think of one sane individual you can view online that might tell the absolute truth, and all I can come up with is Jimmy Dore and Tim Dillon. Maybe maybe, you could add Glenn Greenwald to the mix, but I can’t get that photo taken and released of him crawling on a rug in women’s lingerie out of my brain after I read the prose. Now that is a group.

The drug addled idiot Theo Von makes some sense, but even I must admit that the conversation between Theo, “Bad Friends”, and “Don’t mention Israel and their influence” with Joe Rogan, none of them measure up to the refined good taste evinced by Bill Buckner, even the feminine Gay and tranny obsessed Gore.

Am I the only human who pines for a return of the “Dick Cavett Show”? Wait, think that Dick was a CIA plant too, I mean his climb from nowhere out in New York or some far off hinterland to New York “Doyenne” was astounding. Even the New York intellectuals bowed to his aplomb.

Our Congress just voted to merge the US Military with a foreign nation’s Military did so in broad daylight in a vote, a clear act of treason in full view. Knowing there isn’t a God damn thing that anyone will do to stop them.

What do you do with a treasonous government?

I believe hanging is the correct option, but hey, when you are pilloried for taking measure of happiness in the demise of Sissy Graham, what could happen when suggest hanging our Congress for treason? Every Republican. All of them. All owned. Sell outs. Should be arrested on charges of treason, but won’t be.

Wow, better not suggest such a thing, the “My Mother the Car” viewers might Rigged elections in full view. Treason in full view. We all see the Flock camera data centers being built, Hell, American labor is eagerly building it all. We see betray the MAGA base completely. We see the Dems go so far off the deep end elect real socialists and communists. We see them dump a hundred thousand into one of our major cities and we all shrug.

Let them spend trillions to give the average American a rectal exam via computer they are going to learn is just how intellectually challenged the American people with tastes that run from McDonald’s to Texas Roadhouse.

I now laugh every time I hear a Kia commercial. They don’t even try to sell the they just sell a payment. As if you are such a low end sucker, and so desperate, really don’t give a fuck the car won’t outlast the payments, as long as the payment one-forty-nine a month. And then you go through these tertiary small towns, I light, and every other car is a Kia or Mitsubishi, and you have to laugh out loud.

Hey Palentir, send me a few million, I'll save you a dozen data centers, the average American is a seriously stupid fuck, easily manipulated, has zero intellectual curiosity, couldn't find their own country on a globe, and has their picture held in storage at NSA Langley of them sitting in front of their computer, pants akimbo, self-pleasuring, watching Cuck porn watching the "Bulls" have their way with the wife. There is even a video of them having to clean the LVT flooring after. Future blackmail fodder.

After you finish spending the trillions to surveil their every waking moment, and find out how many hours they sleep, and how deep, I already know you will find a series of disappointment once you realize they are all easily led sheep who could have been directed to do your bidding for the cost of making the television show "The Bill Engvall Bunch". I mean, they sit around and listen all day to that braintrust Stephen A. Smith and Pat McAfee, and the two of them couldn't spell "CAT" if you spelled them the "C", and the "A" in advance. Yes, they voluntarily tune into slop, all day, every day.

Japan, the Rising Threat from the East!

Hey look, the World Cup final is Sunday.

"Must See TV".

(bending over slightly, bad back you know)....."Hey Palentir, surveil this!"

Mr Herman, a ray of hope I have is the unsustainability of the overreach. I listen to a variety of podcasts on the cost of the data centers, the lack of funds to construct and keep them running, how the GPUs need to be replaced every 18 months, the lack of any meaningful return on the $trillions already invested in the AI chatbot infrastructure, how corporations are pouring massive capital outlay into AI tokens and subscriptions, how Meta and Ford are rehiring many of their laid-off engineers because humans remain essential, and how the AI output is largely garbage and inappropriate for lower level tasks and certainly nowhere near the Godlike omniscience people claim. What I see is a severe financial, political, and cultural faceplant of our once great nation coming due for which there will be no financial ability to pay, nor political capital to march through. I continue, as I have since the GFC, to "tend my garden" as Voltaire recommended, to develop resilience in my personal life to the best of my ability, in order to weather the storms certainly coming and are already here. Not sure of the timeframe, but the WEF says 2030 case changes should be accelerating in order to meet that goal of universal currency, surveillance, Godlessness, and so forth. Godspeed
