At this point who still cares about this virus?

It's not killing people at the massive rates - except after they are dead from something else - mostly old age.

The masks haven't slowed it down.

The social distancing and lockdowns haven't slowed it down.

But the vaccine is here and it kills healthy people!!! yay.

What's more damning more than him dying two weeks after the vaccine is that his petechiae symptom happened just 3 days after. He got the vaccine, and 3 days later had zero platelets. Thrombocytopenia is a known complication from vaccines. If the mRNA gets into the bloodstream and then into the platelets, the immune system can recognize the platelets as foreign and kill them?

Big Pharma's COVID vaxes contain polyethylene glycol (PEG), which can trigger anaphylactic shock in a person who is pre-sensitized to it. Some sources estimate that 7-15% of people may now be allergic to PEG, which is widely used in drug delivery systems. The COVID vax protocol is to administer the jab not once but twice, guaranteeing the individual's re-exposure to PEG, thereby increasing the likelihood of anaphylaxis. It hardly seems possible that the vaccine creators were ignorant of the hazards posed by this substance.

▲ 8 ▼ Reply ↩

homeskillet 1 day ago

Severe reactions to vaccines is nothing new. In the Army (1982) it was standard procedure for the soldiers to sit around for 15 mintues or so after the "shot" (typically from an air injector) in case of a bad reaction. The same protocols are supposed to be followed with the Covid vaccines.

It also depends what you mean by "Proven Covid Deaths". These numbers are still using a Positive RT-PCR test as the basis for "proven" even though it is widely understood that the test is essentially useless. The number of deaths attributable to "Covid" alone remains tiny outside nursing homes and outside patients with other serious co-morbidities. To the point that if these vaccine deaths continue, how long before they exceed the real number of "Covid deaths"?

Let's recap:

Empty hospitals with dancing doctors and nurses, influenza magically disappearing, Bill Gates' patent #060606 for a nano-chip inserted into the human body, H.R. 6666 for government to award grants for Covid fakedemic testing, the Luciferase vaccine ingredient which essentially puts a bioluminescent mark beneath the skin or inside the body, Digital IDs and currency being touted as replacements for physical currencies, all timed to coincide with the arrival of 5G which makes it possible for tiny electronic devices to be tracked.

A lot of people are going to die this year due to vaccinations, most especially elderly folk in nursing homes and ICUs with comorbidities, which they'll attempt to explain away as Covid-19-related.

Ask your health officials, technocrats and bureaucrats this:

What is your endgame here?

Vaccines that hardly anyone wants? Endless lockdowns that don't work to lower the "incidents per 100,000" during the winter? PCR testing until the end of days? Testing on asymptomatic persons that's proven to be ineffective? Mutations which put the effectiveness of unattractive vaccines further into doubt?

How do we get ourselves out of this mess? I can tell you that during the 1st wave, most people were disturbed and overly fearful, even panicked. During the 2nd wave, the reactions were more muted and more people were annoyed with the measures than accepting. During a 3rd wave, very few people will even take this serious anymore and just carry on with their lives.

The majority of people will flaunt restrictions and risk civil disobedience and fines just to keep sane and safe. Yes, safe because locking people inside and restricting their mobility is not a safe long term strategy.

Just ask anyone. Now what? How do we get out of this? Wait for someone or something to tell us, the coast is clear?

There's a plan but the plan is hurting people. Did they think that people would never figure this out?

Where's the "fainting" nurse from SoCal hospital? The parents of the Portuguese nurse who died 2 days after vaccination still don't have answers. They have her ashes but no answers. Now this Miami doctor died.

What's the deal, yo!?

Earlier vaccine disasters: what they hope won't happen with COVID-19 vaccines. Not the least reason to doubt the current vaccine are the disappointing results of attempts to develop earlier vaccines against similar animal & human viruses. Of particular concern (to me) is that ADE and VAH (a related set of reactions due to earlier vaccination or infection) occurred in animals with both SARS and MERS, two closest viruses related to COVID-19's (SARS-CoV-2). Perversely, ADE and related mechanisms may cause you to not only catch a disease a second time, but the 2nd time the disease will be much worse, perhaps fatal. This is possible if the first "case" was vaccination, but can also happen with "wild" (normal) infections. While the SARS-type viruses are quite different from Dengue (DENV), this report does mention that monkeys that should have been immune to SARS (vaccinated) contracted the disease a second time.

<https://academic.oup.com/jid/article/222/12/1946/5891764>

As is usually the case, the results are complicated, even more so to the layman trying to understand a complex subject. It sounds, however, that the risks are higher with whole-virus (inactivated) vaccines. Still, the mRNA vaccines cause the cell to produce antibodies specifically against the S-binder in the virus. If this is a "non-neutralizing antibody," then there is greater cause for concern.

Another possibility - which probably doesn't explain this death - is that the flu vaccine somehow/might cause more severe, life-threatening reactions in people who later contract COVID. I imagine this doctor had also had the flu vaccine.

I think any "study" that might seek to prove "correlation" or "causation" between the flu vaccine and severe cases of COVID is strictly off limits ... for obvious reasons.

There is a known medical phenomenon. I can't remember the term for it, but if you are vaccinated for one strain of a virus and then attacked by a similar but different strain, you can actually have a more severe reaction than someone who had never been vaccinated.

▲ 9 ▼ Reply ↩

Give Me Some Truth 2 days ago

And the vaccine is basically giving a person a mild case of COVID - this allows your body to develop immunity (this might not be technically the case). Anyway, if someone had the flu vaccine and then also gets the COVID vaccine they are (theoretically) being exposed to both viruses .... and the two viruses in tandem COULD cause a more severe reaction. I'm just saying this possibility needs to be seriously studied.

I'm sure some private doctors have wondered about this possible correlation in their patients who have had serious cases of COVID. Now if they would just publicly share these concerns.

▲ 2 ▼ Reply ↩

RAT005 2 days ago

I'm just repeating what I think I heard, but big correction for you is the COVID vaccine is not giving you a slight exposure for you to develop immunity. It is restructuring your biology to fight COVID. HUGE difference, not that the old way was even 100% safe.

▲ 2 ▼ Reply ↩

WedgeMan 2 days ago

The body works just fine by reacting to a pathogen and either destroys it or you die. The venom forces your body to produce antibodies not by identifying the rna but altering your dna. This is part of the green new deal of killing off half of the population or making them sterile.

▲ 2 ▼ Reply ↩

Procrastin8 1 day ago

Only true in the case of vaccines that use an inactivated virus. I think one of the COVID vaccs does. The mRNA vaccines, the new kid on the block, do NOT reprogram your DNA. They DO make the cells turn out what the mRNA codes for, a protein like the COVID's spike protein. The body is then supposed to make natural antibodies against this protein, which is then supposed to provide immunity should a real COVID virus come along.

▲ 1 ▼ Reply ↩

Procrastin8 1 day ago

Antibody Dependent Enhancement. The same thing can happen with natural infections. Dengue fever is a bad one, apparently.

KyttenX 2 days ago

Search Dr. Dolores Cahill. She's a microbiologist, and there is a video out there that talks about mrna vaccines and wild diseases. In 2012, there was an animal study that showed that when some animals got an mrna vaccine, when exposed to the virus in the wild (naturally), their immune systems over reacted and caused a cytokine storm. Several died.

BTW... there were NO animals studies on this vaccine. Or tests on people that were not perfectly healthy.

What's more, the doctor started to experience unusual symptoms, and three days after vaccination, small spots began to appear on Gregory Michael's feet and hands.

Sounds like cold agglutinins and micro-clotting. Probably had splinter hemorrhages too if you looked at the nails. Likely, he had a cascade of coagulation likely leading to a massive MI, pulmonary emboli or stroke. The cause might have been the PEGylated materials used to encapsulate the mRNA or it was a cross reaction from the mRNA spike proteins being produced leading to an autoimmune response leading to hypercoagulation.

Paradoxically, you can have a depletion of the clotting factors due to this process that then sets you up for an internal hemorrhage in the brain or lungs, other areas such as pericardium.

This is why you conduct transparent phase three trials and release your finding for peer review where experts in the field can critique the protocols and the placebo controls, methods and findings.

At least at ZH, a lot of people obviously now "get" the significance of these PCR tests, which can and will be "adjusted" at some future date to dramatically reduce the number of "positive cases." This change by itself will be used as "proof" that the vaccines "work."

Originally, a "case" was supposed to be a "medical case" as in the person who tested positive required medical attention. This is clearly not the case in the current usage of the term as 50 to 80 percent of "positive cases" are asymptomatic - meaning these people have no symptoms, are not "sick" and certainly don't require medical attention.

As usual, the language and definitions were manipulated to achieve a desired result, one that advances the "narrative."

▲ 6 ▼ Reply ↩

The vaccines have been tested; the only problem is that long-term follow-ups have not been done, since it's kind of hard to compress multi-year studies into just a few months. These vaccines are approved under emergency waivers. The scary thing is, yes, it is basically an experimental vaccine(s) that is already been used on millions, and will be doled out ot millions more.

Prediction for 2021: at some point, a major government will halt vaccinations due to unacceptable bad side effects (e.g. Dr. Michael). One can just imagine the damper this will put on other efforts to vaccinate the sheep, excuse me, the people.

The mRNA technology alters your body's immune response. Usually as you encounter a virus, the virus must penetrate 'receptive' cells, then hijack permissive cells reproductive system to make new parts of new virus. It uses your cell's mRNA in this process. Humans discovered this mRNA hijack method, and the virologists in Big Pharma are telling us now that the idea is to interrupt this hijack by providing 'smart(er) mRNA' that already knows how to recognize the virus by its unique 'shell'.

It turns out that 'time', and 'maturation of process' are KEY to this. What is necessary for your body's immune response is time. Time for it to locate the invader; time for it to alert resources; time for those resources to identify and pattern the invader; time for that response to replicate. This last is the most important aspect of this entire process.

The mRNA product, the not-a-vaccine, loads your body with mRNA that already knows that the virus is, and how to respond to it. That is the problem. The Irony is that that mRNA has a communication method across JUST the mRNA layer in the body that is totally ignored, if not, unknown to the virologist and Big Pharma.

Only now, in this instance of pre-loaded mRNA, the signaling does not result in carefully controlled defense by your body, instead, all the cells, as they are each signaled in turn, go into attack mode as they are already 'patterned'. They already KNOW the shell from the virus.

As soon as each cell is signaled, because of the presence of the mRNA, each cell in your body thinks that it, specifically, is under attack.

The result is that every cell instantly responds...even though those cells are NOT under invasion, and perhaps only a single cell has come into contact with the virus. Thus the whole body, within only a few minutes, goes into what is called a 'cytokine storm', and you die.

I hope they do an in-depth autopsy as well as some serious tox analysis on his blood to try and figure it out. ▲ 2 ▼ Reply ↩

test_bot 2 days ago

The human body does not "evolve". Human DNA does not "evolve". DNA can be corrupted, but billions of copies make billions of copies make billions of copies. No new information is added unless there is an error, which makes the life form less able to survive. We will never evolve super powers or x-ray vision, but some individuals will be born with birth defects. That is the full extend of DNA that 'evolves' - reduced likelihood of survival. And forget covid. It is a fraud.

▲ ▼ 2 Reply ↩

Evolve to your environment. No one said people are going to have xray vision. Evolution through environmental diversity and survival. Technically mutations are products of evolution, some are beneficial, most are not.

It's lower than a 0.4 percent chance. Here are the "recovery" rates by age (in Minnesota) for people who have "tested positive." Of course most people will not test positive, so this is your odds of surviving if you do test positive. Note that one's odds of surviving are above 99 percent for ALL ages below 60:

“Case survival” rates by age - Minnesota

0 to 4: 99.98 percent (6,192 cases and 1 death)

5 to 9: 100 percent (7,824 cases and 0 deaths)

10 to 14: 100 percent (12,131 & 0)

15 to 19: 100 percent (26,104 & 0)

20 to 24: 99.99 percent (34,806 & 2 deaths)

25 to 29: 99.99 percent (29,876 & 4 deaths)

30 to 34: 99.97 percent (27,411 & 9 deaths)
35 to 39: 99.94 percent (26,331 & 17 deaths)
40 to 44: 99.93 percent (24,310 & 16 deaths)
45 to 49: 99.86 percent (23,170 & 33 deaths)
50 to 54: 99.70 percent (23,699 & 70 deaths)
55 to 59: 99.57 percent (23,314 & 100 deaths)
60 to 64: 99.10 percent (19,089 & 171 deaths)
65 to 69: 98.21 percent (13,039 & 234 deaths)
70 to 74: 96.50 percent (9,672 & 339 deaths)
75 to 79: 93.92 percent (6,944 & 422 deaths) = 11.4 percent all deaths
80 to 84: 88.75 percent (5,308 & 597 deaths) = 16.2 percent all deaths
85 to 89: 83.37 percent (4,156 & 691 deaths) = 18.7 percent all deaths
90 +: 75.83 percent (4,079 & 986 deaths) = 26.72 percent all deaths

Funny. I remember when I worked at Amgen and one of the promising new medicines had a death(s?) in phase 2 or 3 clinical trials. Long time ago hard to remember exactly. Anyways, they immediately stopped the trial and removed the drug from the pipeline. The CEO was taking a lot of flak over this but felt strongly enough that if someone died they should stop.

I am not giving Amgen props here. Just recognizing that no matter how many deaths happen from this vaccine, removal from use will never be one of the options to deal with it.

Oh and where are all the videos of sick covid patients in hospitals this time? There seems to be a lack of videos like last time. I'm sure the MSM is sparing the public from all the gruesome views of sick people dying in hospitals of covid. Thank you MSM, you are so considerate! LOL

▲ 3 ▼ Reply ↩

Chevrus 2 days ago

Help me out please. The understanding I am arriving at is that Moderna and Pfiser have created a gene editing biological agent, NOT a vaccine because it does not fit the definition of one. This is in part because it can be "sold" to regulators (how nobel) as a vaccine and thus be liscenced for emergency use.

Additionally I am getting the sense that so called covid 19 has not be isolated and purified. Thus whatever coutermeasures that are being brewed up cannot actually be for whatever they claim it is for.

▲ ▼ Reply ↩

Retired_Rat 2 days ago

Any death, for whatever reason, within 28 days of a vaccination must be counted as a "vaccine death".

This corresponds with UK govt logic on deaths, for any reason, within 28 days of a positive covid test.

So I have less than a 1% chance of dying from side effects if I take the vaccine, and if I get covid I have less than a 1% chance of dying, IF I get it. The choice seems clear to me. The death rate from side effects of the vaccine might actually be higher than the total percentage of the population that will die from covid.

Whatever is in these shots that the leftists/globalists are determined to force everyone to get, it does not appear to be a "vaccine" as we typically think of them. There have been too many adverse reactions, and too many people are dying soon after injection. Of course, the MSM are trying their best to cover all this up. Considering that it being pushed by the same people who also have a transhumanist and depopulation agenda, it is time to approach this "vaccine" with a lot more suspicion than I've seen so far.

If You don't take, You challenge the authorities and they will very probably punish you, just because of your inobedience.

The issue goes well beyond a temporary allergic reaction. This vaccine messes with your bloods counts - specifically, platelets. In fact, people taking blood thinners were contraindicated for the vaxx to begin with.

I would not touch this vaxx with a 10th foot poll!! Btw, When your platelets go to 0, you stroke out.

At least we know Gates didn't lie when he said in his Ted Talk they were going to use vaccines to help depopulate the planet!

The individuals who got the shot now if they don't die soon they will suffer some kind of allergic reaction in the future and then possibly die... most won't understand it was the covid vaccination that did it. It's designed that way to produce a delayed effect like that to make it appear as if it's totally natural and not connected.

ok, let's take a deep breath people.

MILLIONS OF PEOPLE ARE TAKING THE VACCINE. Some of them will die, as part of general population probability, especially since old people are the first to take it!

It's reasonable to assume that some of these people will have heart attacks, die, get a rash or win the friggin lottery, 'after taking the vaccine'.

Sometimes, it's just random part of life, put your tin foil hats away please, or else i'm gonna start a blog about people who died 2 weeks after wearing a tin foil hat!

In Europe most people taht die WITH (not necessarily from) SARS-CoV-2 are multimorbid +80 year old. In Sweden & Switzerland 86 year old and in Germany 82 year old.

There is literally no exuse for any of the pandemic response as we ca see despite lockdowns and over the top hand washing those people STILL DIE.

You can't cure death from old age!

▲ 9 ▼ Reply ↩

seryanhoj 2 days ago

Old folk are more vulnerable to this to exactly the same degree they are more vulnerable to every threat, so , no mystery there.

▲ 2 ▼ Reply ↩

NIRP-BTFD 2 days ago (Edited)

A multimorbid 86 year old is literally per definition on his death bed. It doesn't matter what we do.. this person WILL DIE SOON even without any pathogen around. Even if we'd vaccinate the whole world and eradicate every virus this person would still die. Maybe from organ failure or heart attack within the next couple days or weeks.

I've said this before (I should make a file and copy & paste!) I live in central FL, affectionally known as "God's Waiting Room." Not far away is Sumter County, America's oldest by average age. FL has some restrictions (e.g. masks in stores, etc.) but to my knowledge hasn't had horrible case counts or deaths from COVID. You'd think with all the geezers here, and their inevitable comorbidities, that our hopsitals would be jammed, our ICUs full, but that's not the case.

Right. Age and race (which can't be mentioned) are the key variables in calculating your own mortality odds of dying from COVID.

I've never seen a definitive figure for the average age of death of a COVID victim in America (I guess this is top-secret, classified info in the view of the CDC). However, in the U.K. several articles have mentioned the average age of a COVID victim in this country - 82.4 - which is greater than the average life expectancy in that country.

Arizona reported a hideous number yesterday ... but these are probably deaths that went unreported somewhere between Christmas and New Years, and are finally catching up.

Arizona had previously reported 0 and 3 deaths the Sunday/Monday after New Years. That's REPORTED. Arizona has been like that for the last year, some days the clerk just doesn't get much done, then makes up for it the next day.

That said, even after discounting for all this stuff, the number is high, not low, the moving averages are still up there and apparently rising.

You could compare the COVID mortality rates of "healthy" people in their 50s to the mortality rates of healthy people in their 50s who got the vaccine and have now died after getting it.

Per my research, if you are white and between the age of 40 and 44, the odds you will die from COVID are 1-in-100,000. If you are Caucasian and under the age of 25, your odds are 1-in-730,000.

If you are 5 to 15 (roughly kindergarten through 10th grade), your odds of dying from the flu are four times greater than your odds of dying from COVID.
