New Research Shows Guccifer 2.0 Files Were Copied Locally Suggesting DNC Not "Hacked By Russians"

Via Disobedient Media

New meta-analysis has emerged from a document published today by an independent researcher known as The Forensicator, which suggests that files eventually published by the Guccifer 2.0 persona were likely initially downloaded by a person with physical access to a computer possibly connected to the internal DNC network. The individual most likely used a USB drive to copy the information. The groundbreaking new analysis irrevocably destroys the Russian hacking narrative, and calls the actions of Crowdstrike and the DNC... of Crowdstrike and the DNC into question.

The document supplied to Disobedient Media via Adam Carter was authored by an individual known as The Forensicator. The full document referenced here has been published on their blog. Their analysis indicates the data was almost certainly not accessed initially by a remote hacker, much less one in Russia. If true, this analysis obliterates the Russian hacking narrative completely.

The Forensicator specifically discusses the data that was eventually published by Guccifer 2.0 under the title “NGP-VAN.” This should not be confused with the separate publication of the DNC emails by Wikileaks. This article focuses solely on evidence stemming from the files published by Guccifer 2.0, which were previously discussed in depth by Adam Carter.

Disobedient Media previously reported that Crowdstrike is the only group that has directly analyzed the DNC servers. Other groups including ThreatConnect have used the information provided by Crowdstrike to claim that Russians hacked the DNC. However, their evaluation was based solely on information ultimately provided by Crowdstrike; this places the company in the unique position of being the only direct source of evidence that a hack occurred.

The group’s President Shawn Henry is a retired executive assistant director of the FBI while their co-founder and CTO, Dmitri Alperovitch, is a senior fellow at the Atlantic Council, which as we have reported, is linked to George Soros. Carter has stated on his website that “At present, it looks a LOT like Shawn Henry & Dmitri Alperovitch (CrowdStrike executives), working for either the HRC campaign or DNC leadership were very likely to have been behind the Guccifer 2.0 operation."
Carter's website was described by Wikileaks as a useful source of primary information specifically regarding Guccifer 2.0.

Carter recently spoke to Disobedient Media, explaining that he had been contacted by The Forensicator, who had published a document which contained a detailed analysis of the data published by Guccifer 2.0 as "NGP-VAN."

The document states that the files that eventually published as "NGP-VAN" by Guccifer 2.0 were first copied to a system located in the Eastern Time Zone, with this conclusion supported by the observation that "the .7z file times, after adjustment to East Coast time fall into the range of the file times in the .rar files." This constitutes the first of a number of points of analysis which suggests that the information eventually published by the Guccifer 2.0 persona was not obtained by a Russian hacker.

Image via The Forensicator

The Forensicator stated in their analysis that a USB drive was most likely used to boot Linux OS onto a computer that either contained the alleged DNC files or had direct access to them. They also explained to us that in this situation one would simply plug a USB drive with the LinuxOS into a computer and reboot it; after restarting, the computer would boot from the USB drive and load Linux instead of its normal OS. A large amount of data would then be copied to this same USB drive.
In this case, additional files would have been copied en masse, to be "pruned" heavily at a later time when the 7zip archive now known as NGP-VAN was built. The Forensicator wrote that if 1.98 GB of data had been copied at a rate of 22.6 MB/s and time gaps t were noticed at the top level of the NGP-VAN 7zip file were attributed to additional file copying, then approximately 19.3 GB in total would have been copied. In this scenario, the 7zip archive (NGP-VAN) would represent only about 10% of the total amount of data that was collected.

The very small proportion of files eventually selected for use in the creation of the "NGP-VAN" files were later published by the creators of the Guccifer 2.0 persona. This point is especially significant, as it suggests the possibility that up to 90% of the information initially copied was never published.

The use of a USB drive would suggest that the person first accessing the data could not have been a Russian hacker. In this case, the person who copied the files must have physically interacted with a computer that had access to what Guccifer 2.0 called the DNC files. A less likely explanation for this data pattern where large time gaps were observed between top level files and directories in the 7zip file, can be explained by the use of 'think time' to select and copy 1.9 GB of individual files, copied in small batches with think time interspersed. In either scenario, Linux would have been booted from a USB drive, which fundamentally necessitates physical access to a computer with the alleged DNC files.

The Forensicator believed that using the possible 'think-time' explanation to explain the time-gaps was a less likely explanation for the data pattern available, with a large amount of data most likely copied instantaneously, later "pruned" in the production of the Guccifer 2.0's publication of the NGP-VAN files.

Both the most likely explanation and the less likely scenario provided by The Forensicator's analysis virtually exclude the possibility of a Russian or remote hacker gaining external access to the files later published as "NGP-VAN." In both cases, the physical presence of a person accessing a containing DNC information would be required.

Importantly, The Forensicator concluded that the chance that the files had been accessed and downloaded remotely over the internet were too small to give this idea any serious consideration. He explained that the calculated transfer speeds for the initial copy were much faster than can be supported by an internet connection. This is extremely significant and completely discredits allegations of Russian hacking made by both Guccifer 2.0 and Crowdstrike.

This conclusion is further supported by analysis of the overall transfer rate of 23 MB/s. The Forensicator described this as "possible when copying over a LAN, but too fast to support the hypothetical scenario that the alleged DNC data was initially copied over the Internet (esp. to Romania)." Guccifer 2.0 had claimed to originate in Romania. So in other words, this rate indicates that the data was downloaded locally, possibly using the local DNC network. The importance of this finding in regards to destroying the Russian hacking narrative cannot be overstated.

If the data is correct, then the files could not have been copied over a remote connection and so therefore cannot have been "hacked by Russia."
The use of a USB drive would also strongly suggest that the person copying the files had physical access to a computer most likely connected to the local DNC network. Indications that the individual used a USB drive to access the information over an internal connection, with time stamps placing the creation of the copies in the East Coast Time Zone, suggest that the individual responsible for initially copying what was eventually published by the Guccifer 2.0 persona under the title “NGP-VAN” was located in the Eastern United States, not Russia.

The implications of The Forensicator’s analysis in combination with Adam Carter’s work, suggest that at the very least, the Russian hacking narrative is patently false. Adam Carter has a strong grasp on the NGP-VAN files and Guccifer 2.0, with his website on the subject called a “good source” by Wikileaks via twitter. Carter told Disobedient Media that in his opinion the analysis provided by The Forensicator was accurate, but added that if changes are made to the work in future, any new conclusions would require further vetting.

On the heels of recent retractions by legacy media outlets like CNN and The New York Times, this could have serious consequences, if months of investigation into the matter by authorities are proven to have been based on gross misinformation based solely on the false word of Crowdstrike.

Assange recently lamented widespread ignorance about the DNC Leak via Twitter, specifically naming Hillary Clinton, the DNC, the Whitehouse and mainstream media as having “reason” to suppress the truth of the matter. As one of the only individuals who would have been aware of the source of the DNC Leaks, Assange’s statement corroborates a scenario where the DNC and parties described in Adam Carter’s work likely to have included Crowdstrike, may have participated in “suppressing knowledge” of the true origins and evidence surrounding the leak of the DNC emails by confusing them with the publication of the Guccifer 2.0 persona.

Despite Guccifer 2.0’s conflicting reports of having both been a Russian hacker and having contact with Seth Rich, the work of The Forensicator indicates that neither of these scenarios is likely true.

What is suggested is that the files now known as “NGP-VAN” were copied by someone with access to a system connected to the DNC internal network, and that this action had no bearing on the files submitted to Wikileaks and were most likely unassociated with Seth Rich, and definitively not remotely "hacked" from Russia.

While I don't think that little wease Eytalian jew was actually the trigger man, I have no doubt he was the one who committed the hit.
Re: "His name was Seth Rich ..."

Well, according to this story, Rich was not at the center of this story. Nor were "the Russians."

I've always thought the Rich angle should definitely be seriously investigated, but I was skeptical he was the one and only source of WikiLeaks' reporting. Assange, if he thought it proper, could have made a definitive statement about Rich's role (after all, if Rich WAS killed over his role in downloading the emails, this is info of great importance to a homicide investigation. Is not withholding info of importance to a homicide investigation a possible crime? It's at least a moral crime.

Also, if we are to believe that such "spycraft" would result in the order being given to assasinate someone, it always seemed odd to me that the "hit men" didn't put two bullets into the back of the target's head. Isn't this the way it happens if one really wants to "silence" someone? You certainly don't let the person live (and potentially talk) for some unknown duration of time.

Any "certainty" that Rich was the central figure in this email release could actually prevent consideration of alternative theories.

Assange will not name a source. What part of that statement is unclear to you? Going forward, folks now have the option to put a deadmans switch on their identity. Failing that, Wikileaks will keep your secret unto death. Your bullets speculation reminds me of idiot conservatives and their scenario objections to 911 Truth, as if they could plan a massive conspiracy better. If the assassin wanted to make it look like a hit, he would have... ergo, he didn't.

It's always interesting when two people can see the same thing and arrive at different conclusions. So let's separate it out and then maybe you can see what I see...

"What is suggested is that the files now known as "NGP-VAN" were copied by someone with access to a system connected to the DNC internal network,...

Full stop.

...and that this action had no bearing on the files submitted to Wikileaks and were most likely unassociated with Seth Rich, and definitely not remotely "hacked" from Russia."

...that is to say, the original files downloaded by a person inside DNC headquarters, with access to their LAN, had been edited before being given to Wikileaks.

Now do you see it?

Not my downie by the way ;-)
Mike Cernivich likes to be snarky and bathe in his own wit. Having said that, every so often he gets off a really good one.

My favorite: 'You want to work for the DNC? Here is what you get for working for the DNC. You get a bicycle rack.'

Cernovich is referring to the fact that while the DNC put a commerative plaque on a bicycle rack near the downtown DC headquarters, it didn't: a) offer a reward leading to Seth's murderer's capture, b) establish a tips hotline, c) interview all of the employees who had daily contact with Seth, or d) cooperate with the FBI, DHS, etc.

His grieving parents think the bicycle rack is really cool.
All this proof of a coverup of the hacking meme, internal hacking, crowdstrike malfeasance, and yet the FBI continues to sit around with their thumb up their ass and Mueller is still bird dogging a false trail.

It's so fucking obvious that the MSM is colluding to obfuscate what happened and the FBI is completely corrupted. Seth Rich is the story and the FBI is doing everything it can to keep it from being investigated, fucking assholes.

So, is Dimi @Crowstrike a top-shelf self-loathing Russian or what? What makes people this way?

They wouldn't let Homeland Security, FBI and now Mueller look at their computers. Doesn't take an Einstein to figure out there never was anything to their allegations. A bunch of crying wolf liars from the start.

Worse. I think Guccifer 2.0 was a DNC front to pin it on Russia. Guy did not even show up until after they knew they had been hacked. Never released anything that hurt the dems. First thing released was their oppo research FILE ON TRUMP.

Now why did they go to all that trouble to make it look like a "hack" rather than a leak? Maybe to mis-direct from their having the first leaker Seth Rich murdered?

CNN and MSNBC have been reporting on this article all morning. Oh wait, no they aren't...
Repeat: It was a robbery.

Actually this particular leak seems to have not been Seth.

There's evidence (not this data) that was published not long after the leak that hinted pretty strongly that Guccifer 2.0 was the DNC itself leaking the information in an attempt to misdirect investigations, taint "hacking" leaks, and also an attempt to derail Trump. Note that a key part of the G2.0 storyline is "it was the Russians" and that G2.0 is an attempt by the Russians to hide their trail under the guise of a fake hacker. So it'd make sense the DNC would make something like this up to further the narrative.

And honestly the G2.0 leak is pretty shitty as far as signal-to-noise goes.

The Seth Rich stuff is much more important. All the more reason to not allow this current story displace the Seth Rich news.
Well said.
The proof is in the pudding.
The data delivered says more about the source than the subterfuge.
G 2.0 data was weak sauce.

The media is so devoted
The media is so devoted to uncovering the truth about Russia that I'm "confident" they will thoroughly investigate into these new facts about Guccifer 2.0. Especially the "Trump Russia" channel otherwise known as CNN.

Winston Churchill

Lets just concentrate of what's in the hacked or copied emails and not how they were made public. That's what the MSM does not want.

Get rid of Session, he's made himself useless because of his Russian reclusion.

Not really. Elliot Richardson was the AG under Nixon and he appointed I believe Leon Jawarski as the Special Prosector. In the end it worked out so to me the weak so to me the weak links really are Rosenstein and Mueller who just are incapable obviously of being impartial.

The AG has piles of issues on his plate and a bright, decent Special Prosecutor really could do the whole nine yards and leave Sessions to do the other work that belongs to that office.

I do not for the life of me understand why this useless waste of time and money is being allowed to move ahead with Mueller and his 13 or 14 Clinton supporter lawyers who were apparently selected by Rosenstein. That is what to me needs to be removed and then possibly a different Special Prosecutor with a different focus could hone in on the real cases that seem ripe for the picking.

But McCabe in the FBI and Rosenstein in the Deputy AG's spot just have to go. Like now.

2) Everything and everyone directly or indirectly associated with Hillary has now been sucked in PAST THE EVENT HORIZON and is swirling downward, faster and faster, being simultaneously compressed and stretched, including our little MELONHEADED GODDESS HERSELF, until they reach the singularity, which is sentencing in a federal court, and are then spat out in an alternative universe stripped of wealth, reputation, power; reviled.

They are all RUNNING for their lawyers' offices now, watching their backs. Anything can and will happen.....

internet download speeds not above 2 mbs? what am i missing? 2mbs is a VERY SLOW download metric with european and asian countries exceeding 25 mbs A LOT OF THE TIME.

can you only download at the rate tolerated by a backward country (in internet terms) like the USA?

an Akamai report published in 3q2015 (two years ago) here:

“the U.S. Federal Communications Commission (fcc) increased its benchmark definition of broadband Internet service to download speeds of 25 Mbps, sharply raising the bar from the 4 Mbps definition it had set in 2010."

"Akamai began reporting on the percentage of unique ip addresses connecting to Akamai at average speeds of above 25 Mbps — the new benchmark broadband speed adopted by the United States Federal Communications Commission in January 2015."

also on page 17 of 60 in adobe display, tables 10 and 11 show that (top ten) leading asian and european countries had download speeds of above 15 mbs for around 35% of the time and above 25 mbs for between 10% and 25% of the time BACK IN 2015!

i am certainly not an expert in internet connectivity, but it seems to me that writing off remote access because of a supposed 2 mbs download speed restriction is not valid when download speeds of 25 mbs are available in places like Korea, Hong Kong, Sweden and Norway.
23MB per second for a file copy needs a link of ~300Mbps if you ignore congestion.

Can you get a clear 300Mbps from Moscow to Boston?

How?

Don't confuse Mbytes with Mbits. 23Mbytes is 186Mbits. Now you have to add in the Ethernet framing overhead, the fact that Ethernet MTU is only 1500 bytes, TCP/IP overhead....my 300Mbps estimate is likely low if this was done remotely.

If the archives show that the transfer speeds were in the 23MBps range, that is USB2.1 speeds over an uncontested USB controller.

The numbers are legit, they work.

Cheers,
Squid
thanks for that – a little knowledge is indeed a dangerous thing.

out of interest, in the UK, Virgin advertizes up to 300 mb download (average 273 mbs) and average 20 mbps upload.

http://www.virginmedia.com/shop/broadband/speeds.html

i have an idea that speed of light transmission is highly unlikely likely between moscow and boston, but might more likely between boston and seoul/HK and stockholm.

Background here – I have an ATT cell and Nortel hotspot. My pc uses the hotspot. I routinely get 15 – 25 GB transfers, and big ones at that rate too. This is the fastest inet I've ever had, it's wireless to a cell tower and Wi Fi to the pc. Excellent battery life too.

Odd that none of the mentioned law enforcement or intelligence apparatus in this country were unable to get the DNC servers...
The DNC "refused"?!!? LOL!! What ever happened to "Fuck YOU, assholes, here is your subpoena, and the two 300lb animals behind me with night sticks are getting impatient!!"

That is certainly one of the mysteries surrounding this incident but no more intriguing than say offering immunity that resulted in no incriminating testimony to several highly placed individuals linked to the Clinton email investigation and then allowing the destruction of incriminating evidence. Comey is as corrupt as they come.

We know all we need to know: this crowd is corrupt and needs to be prosecuted.

Well isn't that just Rich?
"Russian hacking and meddling"

I have never heard anything so fucking stupid.

The US has been hacking, meddling and interfering in other countries elections and internal affairs for decades. This includes US meddling in Russian elections using NGO’s.

Not only does the US meddle and interfere in other countries elections and internal affairs it actually overthrows democratically elected governments it doesn’t like, and then installs puppet leaders. Our government casually refers to this un-democratic process as, "regime change". See Iraq, Ukraine, etc.

This is a case of don't do what we do, only do what we tell you to do, OR NOT TO DO!

The moral of this story is its perfectly okay when we hack, meddle and interfere. We just don't like it when we think it's been done to us! A fucking joke. It's hypocrisy and duplicity at its finest!

Yes. U.S. "meddling' is a little more conspicuous and blatant than alleged Russian "meddling."
If Russia did it the "U.S. Way" they would just come over here, arrest the president, have a trial, hang him and appoint a new government. They would then stay and help "build" the nation they just helped destroy. Tanks would be on every corner. Drones beneath every cloud. "Moderates" would be "trained" by our military trainers at every, ah, training center and park.

Also, no reputable Intel organization makes a media circus about real intel 'cause it blows their assets.

The Russian hack narrative is pure bullshit put out by Hillary and Podesta and the DNC to cover the fact that the emails leaked to WikiLeaks were in fact copied and released. That's why the DNC never handed over to the FBI their "supposedly hacked" computer(s) because the evidence would show that there was NO Russian hacks and that the emails were copied (i.e. Seth Rich).

Now you know why Seth Rich was
"Arkancided"!!!!!!

What exactly is the logic of the "Seth Rich was wacked" theory?

1. Rich copies the emails.
2. Rich gives the emails to WikiLeaks.
   I can't remember when Rich was killed and when WikiLeaks published the emails. I'm sure others can provide this timeline though.

Anyway,

Can someone finish this sentence?

Seth Rich was ordered to be murdered by (Who? HRC, Podesta?) to make sure that ...

To fairly discuss the merits or demerits of any theory we need to first know what the theory (ies) is ...

With some of the shenanigans that took place with Trumps son, I would be surprised if the DNC itself didn't do it intentionally as a time bomb for Trump. The who thing is getting really really weird and smacks of a massive set up. Why in the hell would you let Google's company into the hard drives and not the FED. That question just cannot be answered without admitting culpability in some way, either in Google's political leanings or in Google's covering the server's data so no one else can get it. Without the Fed looking at the data objectively, which is what they all claim Comey was doing it's just propaganda in the wind, nothing more. Now there is a distinct possibility they did it to themselves, blamed it on a foreign nation and a duly elected president when they saw how badly of a candidate Hillary actually was.

On behalf of the DNC and leftists everywhere I believe the source of this new information is both anti-semitic and racist. Now, as for the information itself, it’s most likely valid as well as pretty obvious. Transfer speeds over the internet are really slow compared to transfer directly through a USB or firewire external device which is indeed around 20 MB/sec. It is not practical to copy many GB of data over an internet connection. However, most BIOS boot code on windows based computers don’t permit booting from external media–that’s Bill Gates paranoia with people just cloning a system and then not paying for extra copies. (The side effect is if your HD crashed you’re up shit creek without a paddle) But why do you need to boot externally? Just insert your external drive, copy the files and edit the I/O logs to hide the operation. So simple even a DNC operative could do it. Thank God we’re up against morons.
Their incompetence will destroy them—as we saw with the Obamacare Websites—whose security is still as leaky as a sieve.

Finally, I leave you with two rebuttals from the Left (in the interest of “fairness”).

I’ve booted linux systems numerous times via flash drives (and optical media) with different computers. Now, my oldest computers couldn’t boot via usb, only optical drive, but I haven’t seen that problem in a while. It is even easy on a Mac to boot from an external hard drive, and can be a great way to salvage files from a dying hard drive. As far as I am aware, Microsoft doesn’t write bios code nor make bios chips, with the most common vendor I’ve seen being American Megatrends. That said, I would think the DNC would at least put a boot password on their computers, if not something more secure, but they are a bureaucratic institution.

new shadow54 🐿️
Snot Boogie • Jul
They might even have had the system set to boot from USB first. Many idiot IT guys do that and don't password protect the boot whether it is BIOS or UEFI.

True. And they never get fired when a clever user hoses the company.

Then the IT guys have to come around to do the simple stuff the office gurus used to do. Also anytime global passwords are created in big orgs, the have to change them periodically. An admin login gets changed on the validation server - a boot password is local on every machine. I've has to try 5 different 'old' passwords in those situations before I got the right one for that PC.
I would do it that way, boot from Linux if the UEFI settings weren’t password protected or I had the password to change it to boot from USB. Linux sees the windows files by mounting the drive, I know because I have had dual boot system and can access the Windows files via Linux.

Using a 23 MBs USB stick indicates it may have been just a cheap office usb stick. I tested many sticks. I use a Sandisk extreme which reads at 225 MBs, but speed tests I ran on cheap usb sticks show them running at 20 to 40 MBs even on USB 3.

This was an inside IT person because of the Linux knowledge. It was not a Russian spy because he would have used a much faster usb stick or a portable hard drive to pull the data, if he was inside.

The time zone clinches it. An inside job. It means the media and government, all of them are lying to us and know they are lying.

1 Don't need dual boot to be able to mount
Windows NTFS/FAT and copy files (ntfs-3g). If using Linux, they would have used tar.gz or tar.bz2 to compress the files and dir,, its just easier and faster and would be almost guaranteed to be already available/installed when using a Linux OS that boots from a USB disk.

Wasserman Shultz sends the Awan bros in to take a peek at who hacked the server and the Awans have sticky fingers themselves.

weeeelll....maybe this is true, but the Russians are still screwing with the flux capacitors.........

Throw in the third rate Awan brothers and their access to Debbie Wasserman Shultz and the Linux boot seems so much more likely. Any idiot who has the ability to reboot the server could boot to linux. Actually once you can boot to the linux drive you can get all the passwords to log back in at any time.
